DEPENDABILITY

In the Age of Chivalry, a Knight's word was truly as good as his bond. He bore no reward or fear could be given to induce him to break a promise, break a vow, or forsake a friend.
We are honored by the reputation for dependability we have won in this community. Each ceremony we conduct is a memorial tribute of distinction and dignity.

Letters Delivered in France

Letters in the swift-moving days of war are not delayed. They too move swiftly. The best proof of this was when the troops who landed in Normandy on Tuesday received their letters on Wednesday. That means that the soldiers' mail was distributed less than twenty-four hours after the invasion began.

Writers of letters to servicemen and nursing sisters will be inspired by that news for they know that the greatest speed will be made in delivery of mail to the forces. It is of course true that no letters could be so welcome as those received by the youth of the nations as they arrived in the theatre of war in the creation of a new front. Such letters and those that follow will play a very great part in maintaining the morale of the fighting men for the home is the greatest inspiration behind those that battle for freedom.

Military authorities know the supreme value of maintaining the serviceman's associations and links with home.

It can safely be said that more and more letters will be written to the men in the forces, fighting not only in the province of Normandy but in every other theatre of the war.

Canadian families and friends of the servicemen will not fall down in keeping up the flow of correspondence to the soldiers, airmen and sailors overseas or wherever they are, knowing as they do that letters and parcels do much to take the place of home and family.

Everyone will appreciate what the military postal authorities in their wisdom have done to keep as much as possible of the ordinary life of the soldier sustained through the fortifying influences of the letter and the parcel.

The delivery of the mail to the Allied troops on Wednesday was an achievement within the perfect organization which marked the entire planning for the invasion.

Why United Nations Are Strong

In these days when the whole world is looking to events in the Pacific and in Europe, a man named Hitler must see a vast difference between the way in which people regarded him over four years ago when he was gesticulating and shouting and screaming before the Reichstag and the present time when mankind waits for the day when Hitler will be thrown into the discard, useless piece of condemned humanity, of which the world is to be rid, a gangster who has defied every law of humanity and who merits to be destroyed because he has been the enemy of mankind.

Today he has but the stooges or puppets that will cringe or nod before him. His day is fast ending and he is to be numbered with those who have destroyed life. As far as he is concerned the greatest calamity to him is that he is being defeated, his vaunted Intuitions, his mad ravings, his wild braggadocio of the Germans who did not dare to face him and tell him the truth, because they were puppets and were just as evil as Hitler and were also seeking, are all going for naught. That is what the good in this world do with the criminal.

Germany has had only one counsel, that of Hitler, while his stooges and associated Nazis repeated his counsel. The result is that the world has witnessed a rule of terror, aggression and transgression worse than any in history and is today witnessing the unfolding of the climax in the destruction of Hitlerism.

The United Nations have had many voices to counsel. They have been free to speak. In the multitude of that counsel, there is the wisdom of the United Nations. Supporting it are the pillars of Allied strength, love of justice, love of liberty, the many freedoms, and love of country. Can anyone wonder why the United Nations will win? A Hitlerized German who never knew liberty might wonder but there is no wonder among the United Nations for they know their strength is in the united principles of democracy and the love of freedom and justice. Germany became militarily strong by preventing liberty developing, she hated the freedom of other peoples and her strength is without soul.

The United Nations have a different love of country than Germany has. The United Nations acknowledge the rights of other countries but Germany has denied that right to other nations and even to the nations that in their folly and fear accepted Axis domination. Hitler has so long repressed liberty that Germany has no voice. There is no free voice in the satellite countries. There is only the muttering and jabbering voice of the decayed and moth-eaten Benito Mussolini, but he is of no value to Hitler.

Hitler has silenced every voice in the world that he could silence. Now he has no voice to offer him advice. He has but the creeping satellites of a Germany that does not know the first principle of freedom and cares as little for it generally.

On the other hand the leaders in the freedom-loving nations have their own associates to advise them and they know the voice of their peoples and all in all the concert of United Nations is the greatest council of wise men directing Allied affairs for the good of the world that ever gathered in history. The just principles of these Allies have brought them together into the most powerful organization for strength and stability known to the peoples of the United Nations. This unity has made possible their great united strength through the pouring out into it of the resources of all the Allied lands which are placed on the altar of freedom and there given that the world may be saved for freedom and justice.

The voice of freedom is speaking in the United Nations and its will be accomplished because it is attuned with human brotherhood. Democracy is stronger than tyranny. Tyrants rise and die not endure. This is the verdict of history and never has such a verdict against international brigandage been given as will be delivered against Germany and also against Japan and only on the battlefields but in the peace with victory and security to come.

"Be It Ever So Humble . . ."

(Montreal Herald)

Every so often some bright mind rises to remark that the self-sufficient, old-fashioned home is gone, whether we know it or not.

Perhaps we are behind the times, but we have never been prepared to follow modern trends in this point. We are aware that the automobile, the cinema and some other modern items have made profound changes in family life, but that they or anything else have exterminated the home we do not believe.

It will be a sad day for all of us if this ever comes true, for the home is the foundation of everything worthwhile.

There are people, of course, who would like to abolish the home and have the population live and be brought up like ants under the direction of governors, chosen preferably from the people who propose this.

This kind of nonsense has been tried from time to time in various "colonies" and "experiments," though some of these were conducted by persons of the highest type of mind and character none of them ever worked or, indeed, endured for long. The people concerned found something lacking and that was nothing more or less than the individual family home. . . .

We suspect that many of the voices now raising that the home no longer exists are using this extreme statement only to give emphasis to pleas for serious city planning for wholesome recreational facilities, health services, opportunities for the unfortunate, etc. . . .

These, it ought to go without saying, are vastly important, but however well they may supplement the home they are no substitute for it.

The deeper the sorrow the less tongue it hath.—Talmud.

The pupils of Mill West gave a very enjoyable instrumental recital in St. Michael's Academy. There was a large audience.

At the weekly practise shoot of the members of the Belleville Rifle Club the wind was very tricky and the scoring was rather low. Great credit is due Mr. J. W. Davison who is the first man to make the highest possible score, namely seven straight bull's eyes at 600 yards. Following are his scores; J. W. Davison 83; J. Thompson 81; A. Andrews 71; A. Harman 71; A. Haggerty 69; Mr. Davison wins the club button.

At the Agricultural Grounds a fast and snappy game of baseball was played between the O.T.R. team and the Cutarios. The score was 9 to 4 in favor of the G.T.R. team. The following composed the teams: G.R.: D. Smith, B. Simcox, R. Gerow, H. Pringle, C. Pallion, Mills, W. Simcox, S. Smith, E. Howe. Ontarios: Symons, H. Lavoie, Morrison, W. Gerow, T. Smith, R. Peterson, Moira Street, graduated with the degree of B.A., taking first class honors in Moderns. Miss Bessie Lingham, daughter of Mrs. Thomas Lingham, graduated with the degree of B.A. Mr. Warner Talking graduated in Arts and Mr. Ted Eakins graduated in medicine.

MASSEY REUNITED WITH SON

Captain Lionel Massey, 26-year-old elder son of Mr. Vincent Massey, Canadian high commissioner in London, was one of the 15 officers and eight other ranks who arrived in London on board the S.S. "Orjaholm" repatriated from German prison camps. Captain Massey, shown with his father, was serving with the King's Royal Rifles in Greece when he was wounded by a bomb splinter which hit his leg.

Canadian Scene
A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

Imagine having to save up one's pocket-money in order to send a letter! What charges were very high, as much as $1.12 for a letter from England to York Gater "toronto" Upper Canada, quoted in the late 'twenties. Yet when sent by way of New York this same letter cost just 4½. The difference in rates made many thrifty folk send their mail via the United States, although this was against the law. Few people used envelopes; they wrote on one side of the paper only, then folded the sheet into the shape of an envelope, used sealing-wax to close it, and inscribed the address on the front. Paper was pre-ferred to several small ones, because postage increased with the number of pages. In order to make the most of every inch of letter-writing space, the under put down his news cross-wise as well as lengthwise, which rendered the letter difficult to read.

Before the provinces of Upper Canada was created in 1791, mail was expedited in the winter by snowshoe "expresses." The postal passengers travelling thus from Montreal to Niagara did around eighteen miles a day, changing the sub-zero weather. They made just forty-one trips annually.

About the time that Lower Canada was born the first vehicle available for public hire was the calèche. Between 1790 and 1819 several laws were passed to regulate this vehicle. In 1819 it was decreed had to be kept ready at each stage-post, during the night, for the use of ward passengers to the next stage. According to the law governing the calèche was "a gig upon grasshopper springs with a seat for two" passengers; the driver sat sideways on the dashboard, with his feet on the shafts and in close proximity to the horse."

Correspondent Sleeps In Slit Trench In Chateau Garden

By ROGER GREENE

(AP War Correspondent)

Advance Allied Headquarters in France, June 7 — (Delayed)—(AP) —As I write in the living room of a French chateau a stealthy manservant is going on with the business immediately outside.

A few minutes ago one of our soldiers came to the chateau door and asked politely back on the front path. A sniper's bullets kicked up dust around his feet and he fell prone in a shallow ditch.

From a front window a British correspondent who followed the soldier crawl down the path a scant dozen yards away with the sniper's shots trailing him until he reached the brick wall at the end of the path.

Now troops are combing the thick brush around the chateau and bullets are cracking all around.

Last evening after undergoing 12 hours of heavy shelling and aerial bombardment on the beach where we landed, I crawled on a road between a brick wall and a hedge for nearly two hours while German snipers sent tracer bullets cracking around us. I got on in the manner dog parting himself on the steet two plates as we ran the gauntlet through the shell-spattered village.

I slept in a slit trench in the garden of this chateau.

Enough has been said about deep-burning hatred among the French in this village, the Germans have left little else.

Isle of Dogs

(From "Our Dumb Animals")

Strangest of all the islands in the Indian Ocean is the one mistaken on sea charts as Juan de Nova, but known to all mariners of the past as the Island of Dogs. A more appropriate name could not be given it, for literally it is an island completely ruled by dogs.

This bit of land, flat and sandy and resembling a horseshoe in shape, lies not far to the north of Madagascar. During bygone days of the sailing ship, Arabian boats, Portuguese galleons and pirate craft of many lands called at remote islands for water supply at this island and all half-castes were met with its cocoanuts and turtles. As ships arrived, some of these ships carried dogs. Of various breeds, many of which escaped at Juan de Nova and were left behind. In a few years, abandoned by the crews of ships, they reverted to the wild type from which they originally sprang.

At the present day their descendants, a savage mongrel band, are in complete possession of the island. They dominate every rock and sandy hollow and attack with the utmost ferocity any ship's crew that chances to set foot on the island.

A curious thing happened when the dogs first became masters of savagery. They lost their dog-like bark; now they call to each other in a weird wolfish howl. In fact, too, they droop their tails as do all wolves. They hunt their food in packs, each band possessing its own section of the land and one pack never dares venture into territory controlled by another pack.

Their food consists of turtle eggs and sea birds of all kinds. They dig up the turtle eggs from the sandy shore and, if lucky, kill and stalk the unwary sea gulls with all the cunning and stealth of lions or tigers. No one has ever tried to reclaim these renegade animals and they have held the island unmolested up to the present day.

A red herring is a herring of special grade that has been heavily salted and slowly smoked to give it a rich brown or reddish color. The reddish color of the red herring is due to the peculiar process of curing.

Red herring has been a famous product in England for centuries. John Fryer, member of parliament in the 16th century, agreed with the fishermen of his district to take his wages in red herrings.

Correspondent Sleeps In Slit Trench In Chateau Garden

By ROGER GREENE

(AP War Correspondent)

Advance Allied Headquarters in France, June 7 —(Delayed)—(AP) —As I write in the living room of a French chateau a stealthy manservant is going on with the business immediately outside.

A few minutes ago one of our soldiers came to the chateau door and asked politely back on the front path. A sniper's bullets kicked up dust around his feet and he fell prone in a shallow ditch.

From a front window a British correspondent who followed the soldier crawl down the path a scant dozen yards away with the sniper's shots trailing him until he reached the brick wall at the end of the path.

Now troops are combing the thick brush around the chateau and bullets are cracking all around.

Last evening after undergoing 12 hours of heavy shelling and aerial bombardment on the beach where we landed, I crawled on a road between a brick wall and a hedge for nearly two hours while German snipers sent tracer bullets cracking around us. I got on in the manner dog parting himself on the steet two plates as we ran the gauntlet through the shell-spattered village.

I slept in a slit trench in the garden of this chateau.

Enough has been said about deep-burning hatred among the French in this village, the Germans have left little else.

Isle of Dogs

(From "Our Dumb Animals")

Strangest of all the islands in the Indian Ocean is the one mistaken on sea charts as Juan de Nova, but known to all mariners of the past as the Island of Dogs. A more appropriate name could not be given it, for literally it is an island completely ruled by dogs.

This bit of land, flat and sandy and resembling a horseshoe in shape, lies not far to the north of Madagascar. During bygone days of the sailing ship, Arabian boats, Portuguese galleons and pirate craft of many lands called at remote islands for water supply at this island and all half-castes were met with its cocoanuts and turtles. As ships arrived, some of these ships carried dogs. Of various breeds, many of which escaped at Juan de Nova and were left behind. In a few years, abandoned by the crews of ships, they reverted to the wild type from which they originally sprang.

At the present day their descendants, a savage mongrel band, are in complete possession of the island. They dominate every rock and sandy hollow and attack with the utmost ferocity any ship's crew that chances to set foot on the island.

A curious thing happened when the dogs first became masters of savagery. They lost their dog-like bark; now they call to each other in a weird wolfish howl. In fact, too, they droop their tails as do all wolves. They hunt their food in packs, each band possessing its own section of the land and one pack never dares venture into territory controlled by another pack.

Their food consists of turtle eggs and sea birds of all kinds. They dig up the turtle eggs from the sandy shore and, if lucky, kill and stalk the unwary sea gulls with all the cunning and stealth of lions or tigers. No one has ever tried to reclaim these renegade animals and they have held the island unmolested up to the present day.

WEDDINGS

RUSSELL—WILSON

The charming ceremony uniting in marriage Miss Mary Elizabeth (Betty) Wilson and John Barclay Russell, was the first performed by Right Reverend W. L. Wright, since his election to the position of Bishop of Algoma, which took place recently in Sault Ste. Marie. The marriage was solemnized at St. Luke's pro-Cathedral, Saturday afternoon at half-past two o'clock, when the church was tastily decorated with potted ferns and lilacs.

The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. Cay Wilson, 181 Pine Street, and the groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Russell, 21 Lansdowne Avenue, both of Sault Ste. Marie.

The wedding music was played by Mr. J. W. Blackburn, organist of the church, and the selection, "O Perfect Love" by Dorothy Gray Fisher, during the signing of the register.

Following the church, the bridal party made a pretty picture. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, had three attendants, Mrs. Harold Arthurs, Belleville, Mrs. Gordon Frech, Jr., and Miss Peggy McKee, who were identical Colonial gowns, in heaven blue with gold print ruffles and gold panels respectively. The dresses were Quaker style with long torso. The yoke points were framed by a ruffle over the wrists, and featured ruffle trim, which was also placed on the V neck and extended down the front to form a panel effect. Their headdresses were French pompadours made of the same material as their dresses and were trimmed with ruffles. Colonial bouquets of roses, forget-me-nots and pinkpoint were carried by the attendants.

The bride was very lovely in a gown of white satin on Princess lines, with front and back panels inset with lace. The neckline was in sweetheart style and the long sleeves came to a point at the back of the hand. A cowgirl of orange blossoms held in place the beautiful bridal veil of illusion tulle with flowing train. She carried an arm bouquet of roses with an orchid in the centre.

The gentlemen in the bridal party were Ernest Russell, brother of the groom, as best man, while John McLeod and Glen Wroth acted as ushers for the ceremony.

The wedding luncheon was served at the Pinedale Hotel, where the bride's mother, Mrs. A. Cecil Wilson received her guests, and was receiving in a floral shoor frock with brown accessories and brown picture hat. The groom was of yellow roses. Mrs. Russell, mother of the groom, chose a gold crepe dress, gold hat, white accessories and she had a harmonizing corsage.

The bride and groom left on a boat trip up the lakes and will be out of town for a week. Mrs. Russell chose for travelling a purple crenemaker suit, perky white hat with purple veiling, white accessories and an orchid corsage. On their return they will live at 35 The Drive.

Among the out-of-town guests were: Mrs. Harold Arthurs, Belleville; Mrs. Daisy Noble, Picton; Sgt. Royal Rogers, Camp Borden; Mr. Joseph Rose, St. John's, Quebec.

Mr. and Mrs. George Love at Home to Relatives and Neighbors

MANY GIFTS

Queensboro—Mr. and Mrs. George Love, well known residents of this vicinity, celebrated their Golden Wedding anniversary on June sixth, when they were "At Home" to their friends and neighbors from two to five o'clock in the afternoon and from seven to ten in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Love have been lifelong residents of this community and reside on the farm where Mr. Love was born. This farm has been owned by the Love family for a period of 106 years and with the exception of sixteen years spent in Huntingdon Township, Mr. Love has lived on the old homestead all his life.

They were married at the home of the bride, in Elsevir Township, by Rev. Mr. Marshall. An interesting feature of the celebration was the presence of the bridesmaid, Mrs. Goldie Gray of Peterborough, the groomsman, Mr. Isaac Trotter, who now resides in British Columbia, was unable to be present.

The living rooms were prettily decorated with yellow lilies and other Spring flowers. The guests were welcomed by Mrs. Philo Harris. Mrs. Love served on a table spread with a lace cloth, centred by the wedding cake decorated in white and gold and flanked by gold colored candles in silver candelabra.

Piano music was given during the afternoon and evening by Miss Marion Love, niece of the groom. Betty Love and Ruth Cummins sang in the evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Love have three children, Lydia, (Mrs. Philo Harris), Harry and Allan and nine grandchildren. George Love a grandson is in the R.C.A.F.

Friends and relatives numbering over eighty were present from Belleville, Peterborough, Madoc and Tweed, and from the community. Telephone messages, a large number of cards, letters and telegrams were received by the happy couple during the day.

In addition to the pretty gifts they received, S.S. No. 4, Madoc, presented them with a glass coffee maker and two cups and saucers in appreciation of Mr. Love's services for thirty-five years as secretary-treasurer and trustee of the school. Mrs. Love was given a pretty tea pot from the members of the Guild of which she has been president for a number of years. Mr. and Mrs. Love are members of St. Peter's Anglican Church.

Large was the audience and loud their applause in Bridge Street Church Sunday School Room on Friday night for the annual Music Recital presented by the pupils of Miss Leona Kathleen Riggs. The program, consisting of both voice and piano, was a most delightful and entertaining interlude for both the young and old who assembled for the occasion. From the very beginning to the conclusion of the concert, the ten pianists and vocalists retained their exuberant enthusiasm, and displayed an amateur ability for carrying through a difficult program. FASHION FLASHES

FAVORITE FORMULA is the separate blouse and skirt, a two-piece dress with matching jacket. Nice with a suit or on its own is a blouse of tailored or lace embroidery in white or pale blue. Short, wide sleeves and a prim ruffled plastron at the throat.

NEWCOMERS to the ranks of fine fabrics for fine frocks is Sea Island cotton, a fabric that is soft and fine as silk. We saw this fine, silky cotton made up into a charming print, a rose colored apple tree design on black, fashioned with a square neckline and skirt draped drawn up into a large hipline bow.

IMAGINATION and ingenuity make up a hard-working treasure in the millinery field, where many hats now have their own accessories. Diamond is a yellow tuscan straw bonnillion trimmed with big cherry blossoms and cherry clusters. A similar bouquet is repeated at the end of the veil, which can be posed over the shoulder or held loosely.

GOING STRAIGHT the year round is the shirtwaist frock of wool in either light or dark weights according to the season. These thin wool in luscious shades is used for the shirtwaist. It is then trimmed with black felt applique studded with gilt metal stars. Larger stars for study.

Imagine, if you can, a freezing drygoods merchant deprived of electricity. It would be nothing but a blank, dark block of stone, steel and concrete . . . lifeless, inanimate.

It is Hydro that puts life into downtown warehouses and factories, or any other building, for electricity transforms darkness into light . . . moves elevators swiftly and silently . . . replaces the hundred tasks that human sweat is building the throbbing pulse of life.

Hidden in the walls of tall buildings are hundreds of miles of wires . . . a worldwide network, travelling from a master switchboard to wherever light and power are needed. Busy telephones . . . chattering teletype equipment . . . business machines, and other mechanical, time-saving devices that are the very muscle of commerce . . . are powered by electricity.

In Ontario . . . in business and home . . . in industry and the farm . . . Hydro lightens the way. It powers the machines that produce the goods we need . . . it brings to every home and woman our work-day, easier, our life more comfortable.

Plan for better living and more leisure after Victory by making full use of all the benefits that can be yours through the use of electricity.

'Win With Wynn' Victory Formula Of Washington Senators as Hurler Defeats A's for Ninth Straight Time

Pitcher Leaving the Team Shortly to Go Into the Army

RACE TIGHTENED

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sport Writer

Ernie Bonham's pitching power over the Athletics has faded, and Ace Adams no longer can hypnotize the Braves and Phils, but "Win with Wynn" is the Washington victory formula in Philadelphia.

Wynn—Early Wynn today celebrated his ninth straight victory over Connie Mack's crew with a 1,000 life-time averages of being the skeleton in Mr. Mack's closet.

When the season started 12 perfect-record streaks existed on the big league record books but at one time the "heavy" have lost their power until only Wynn, Nels Potter and Johnny Allen survive.

Wynn—Wynn, the A's came last night by a 2-1 margin and he had to score the winning run to make it that. After smashing at the first ball advancing on an error, the Washington lightheaded hurler eyed it home on George Myatt's hit. Cleveland trimmed the American race by a 4-3 decision over the leading St. Louis Browns. The Tribe came from behind with three in the seventh, two on skipper Lou Boudreau's home-loaded pitch over Don Gutteridge's head.

In the National the only two games scheduled also were played at night and the Cincinnati Reds drew a full attendance total to 33,493.

Mickey Owen delighted Brooklyn patrons with a ninth-inning single scoring Dixie Walker, who had doubled, with the big run of a 5-4 nod over Boston.

Pittsburgh and Chicago played to a 3-3 tie called by rain.

Mel Ott Rapidly Approaching Other Long-Standing Marks of the Loop

(By The Canadian Press)

Already in 30 National League records, Mel Ott, manager of the New York Giants, is rapidly approaching other long-standing marks of the loop. Ott has scored 32 runs this year to bring his total life-time score of 1,725, only 71 runs below the league record held by Honus Wagner, once-famed Pittsburgh star. The Giants' manager has also run up 998 extra-base hits, only 13 fewer than the record held by Honus Wagner, while Giant skipper has played 19 years with one club, which equals Gabby Hartnett's stretch with the Chicago Cubs.

Sam Byrd, the Michigan shortstopper, continued his winning way in the money golf tournament with the Philadelphia $17,500 invitation 72-hole golf tourney in turning in a four-under-par 66 compared with his 68 on opening day. At the halfway mark he held a three-stroke lead at 133, with Craig Wood in second position. Another three strokes third back was Bud Lewis of Orelund, Pa.

Ex-heavyweight champion Jack Dempsey said last night at Camden, N.J., the champion can't do it against Sgt. Joe Louis retaining his heavyweight crown for more than a couple of bouts after the war. Louis is now in England with the U.S. troops.

Pitcher Vernon Kennedy of the Cleveland Indians was suspended indefinitely by Manager Lou Boudreau for alleged detrimental conduct last Sunday, it was announced last night, but the suspension will be reinstated in time to play against Detroit Tigers next week.

Stewards at Aqueduct Park yesterday set down Bobby Permane, apprentice rider, for 10 days starting Monday for crossing in front of the field on Nebraska after leaving the gate at the start of the second race. The horse finished second position. Another three strokes third.

SWACO LASSIES MOVE INTO TIE FOR FIRST PLACE

Defeat Bell Sargent Girls 11-6 and Never Headed From First Frame

EV REID ON MOUND

Tommy Colden's SWACO lassies moved into a tie for the top spot in the City Ladies' Softball League by beating the Bell Sargent lassies 11 to 6 in a game played last night.

With each nine scoring two runs in the initial frame the SWACO girls took over an advantage in the second stanza with another brace of runs, but the Sargent girls came back and knocked on the door with two in the bottom half of the fourth to knot the count. However, the game was well tucked away in the proverbial bag when Colden's charges gathered in five markers in the fifth as the result of three hasty hits and a collection of miscues by the "Rockmakers." SWACO added a brace more in the seventh while Sargents rallied in the bottom half to bag one run, which score two runs and threaten before Doolittle's game lightning ball halted the rally. The night's long circuit clout was dished out by Jo Morehoban to start the SWACO's on their way to the top slot in the league standings.

Ev. Reid hurled for the winners and although allowing eight hits retired the side in order in the second, fifth and sixth frames, Beatrice Doolittle, limited the SWACO girls to eight safeties, but her mates were weak in the clutches.

The line score:

SWACO ..... 220 000 2—11 runs
Sargents ..... 200 200 2— 6 runs
Umpire—Bawden and Young.

And Still Selections Come, This One by Harold Bawden

Not to be over-shadowed by "Red" Townsend and "Sonny" Green when it comes to selecting all-star softball teams in Belleville, Harold Bawden comes to bat with his choice of the best of the best. Bawden, who has gone through all phases of the game in Belleville, as player, manager, umpire and now umpire-in-chief or arbiter in the city softball loop, was himself a player with the 1936 intermediate O.A.S.A. champion Percival Packers of Belleville.

Bawden agrees with "Sonny" Green's previous selection for an all-star team. However, in his letter to the Intelligencer sports department, Harold makes note of the point he is selecting his all-star teams from O.A.S.A. clubs that have performed in Belleville since this city was first represented in the O.A.S.A. back in 1930.

Here is Harold Bawden's selections:

First Team	Position	Second Team
John Bawden	Pitcher	Stan Littleman
Lorne Bowman	Catcher	Pitcher

Toronto, June 19—(CP)—There's no happier individual anywhere than today who wishes he had stuck to betting at the pari-mutuel window instead of the track. Instead of patronizing the bookmakers. The happy gazer could be Joe Public with the daily double Wednesday at Dufferin Park for $2.

One of the three winners of the big windfall was a bookmaker, it seems some of the boys, possibly quite leery of his luck in picking, placed a $2 double with the bookie on apropos and shoeless lass in an apropos and shoeless race in the first two races. The bookie told him he wouldn't be able to pay more than $100 so one of the boys took some home first, and the bettor agreed.

Then the bookie went to the track and bet $2 through the parimutuel window on the same combination, the original selector was paid $102, and the bookie had the rest of the $3,000-odd dollars as a tidy profit.

Incidentally:

While on the subject, that double set an Ontario record for a $2 selection, but was still small stuff at the previous Canadian high. Pagan Point and Montreal split $4,885.40 at Whittier Park, Winnipeg, in 1943 on a $2 double and the biggest Canadian double was $8,486.30, produced when Winnifred Ann and Tahoon Boy finished home winners at Thorncliffe track in Toronto in 1932. But that was on a 50 ticket . . .

When the races were cancelled in Montreal on D-Day, it marked the first time in the memory of the oldest living inhabitant that anything other than a cloudburst or snowstorm halted proceedings . . .

Bob Greenwood, former star in the Calgary Junior Rugby Football League, is carrying the ball with the U. S. marines in the Pacific now . . . Pte. A. G. (Scotty) Kentish, owner of the 17-cent horse Omar's Gift, has just got himself hitched to C. W. A. C. Sgt. Nancy Blaser. . . . The Army certainly did things for Johnny Greco. On his discharge recently he received the 155 pounds, so his trainers decided to whittle him down to his former welterweight poundage. After two weeks hard training, he hopped on the scales and tilted them at 160 pounds, so it looks like the middleweights for Johnny . . .

CHIEFS DIVIDE

(By The Associated Press)

The Buffalo Bisons and the Baltimore Orioles are at it again. Yesterday's 14-10 victory by the Bisons was another example of the way those two teams slug it out style wherever they meet. The lowest score was 6-5 in their first encounter.

Since then the scores have been 7-6, 11-9, 12-5, and last night's double figure tally. The Bisons won the first game, the Orioles the next and the Bisons the last two. A total of 26 hits were made in last night's game, 14 by Buffalo, 12 by Thursday's tussle, 28 hits were accumulated by the two men. The slugging with three hits to lead the Little Orioles' attack.

Dutch Hiller blanked the Toronto Maple Leafs with seven hits, to give the Newark Bears a 2-0 victory. Bill Rabe with two hits, including a homer and a double, batted in three gun offensively. He also batted in three runs.

The Syracuse Chiefs and Rochester Red Wings divided the first 4-1 and the Chiefs taking the nightcap 2-1. The Rochesters had lost the first game but lost the services of Dale Goldsberry, Chief first baseman, who fractured his right leg while sliding into second base in the fourth inning.

NO LANDLORD

In Memphis, a worried Negro walked into the office of the rent control administrator and asked if anyone could tell him who his landlord was.

Clerk—Your landlord is the man you pay rent to.

Negro—I don't pay no rent. You see, bout nine years ago I found me a home vacant and moved in. I been there ever since and I ain't never paid no rent.

Clerk—Well, then, what are you worrying about. You have no complaint.

Negro—Yassah, I know that. But if somebody don't fix dat roof I'm gonna move out.

Bawden at Bat

Up pops another all-star softball team, this one by Harold Bawden, veteran city mushballer. Of course Bawden thinks he's better than the average conception of the players down through the years if he, no other reason than the fact he has been in the game since it started as an O.A.S.A. player in Belleville. Harold Bawden has served as player, coach, manager, umpire and today is umpire-in-chief of the Belleville and District Softball League.

With one or two exceptions Harold's selections are pretty much the same lines as those submitted by Sonny Green earlier in the week. Harold gives Sonny the utility spot on his No. 1 team. However, how any selector could keep Sonny Green off an all-star softball team from the Belleville area is hard to understand. Sonny Green grew up with a softball in his hand and before Jimmie Bawden was a fellow?

Where it or not it was Pit/Lt. Archie Green, champion of softball at No. 3 I.T.S. for a couple of years, Pit/Lieut. Green is stationed at present from Kingston to Toronto, where he has been posted at the University of Toronto's R.C.A.F. classes. Archie completed as to all of the boys about town should admitted he misses Belleville and its hectic softball games. Archie, something about this town that gets into your blood and I'd sure like to be back," admitted Archie as he requested us to pass along his salutations to all the gang.

Perisiders Missing

The war and the inroads of time have cut deeply into the crop of American League lefthanders, and the circuit which once boasted of Waddell, Willis, Alnrok, Plank, the original Dutch Leonard, Ruth, Grove and others, today is poorer in southpaws than at any time in its history. Perhaps the season's star lefty-ranking lefthander is Hal Newhouser of the Tigers.

Detroit, ain't that Stubby Overmire, who hasn't won a game, and Ted Williams, Red Hoppe, and Al Smith of the Indians hasn't followed up his good work of last year. Hal Newhouser, a protege of the Cleveland team's Willies-Barre farm, has been called the White Sox have a have a good prospect in Ed Lopat, besides Thornton Lee. Washington has a pretty good man in Mickey Haefner, and a secondary stabilizer in Bill Lefebvre. St. Louis has only the veteran Al Hollingsworth. With Johnny Rigney in the army the World's Champion Yankees have their two rookies, Spec Shea and Johnny Johnson; the Red Sox have Mickey Harris-used Oscar Judd, and the Athletics have no lefthanders at all.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 401

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Too-hoo, Partner, we met before! If you are new to my column, start learning the game of bridge from here. If you have been following me, this is your chance for a review.

It will not be long now before we start on opening bids of more than one. But first, let me remind you or the light spots you should know for opening bids of one and their responses.

Contract bridge is a card game for four players. The players facing each others are partners. When the cards are distributed, each player picks up and looks at the cards dealt to him.

The players try to tell each other what their hands contain. They do so by means of these 13 words: One, two, three, four, five, six, seven clubs, diamonds, hearts, spades, no-trump, pass, double, redouble.

The pairs compete to see which can name the highest bid. (The final bid names the contract; a declaration to take a stated number of tricks at a stated denomination (some suit or no-trump).

How does a pair decide the high est bid they can contract for? By telling each other how many tricks they have and what they like for trump. It may be helpful to review the numbers and denominations in their bids.

When you bid no-trump, count your trick for each high card (ace or king or queen). When you bid a suit, count one trick for each high card and one for each short card (each card short of three in any short suit).

See how many tricks you can count in each of these hands:

SOUTH	WEST
♠ Q 9 3	♠ K J 10 7 6
♥ A 2 7	♥ 10 9 5
♦ K 8 4 2	♦ 7 3
♣ A 6	♣ 10 9 5 4
NORTH	EAST
♠ 7 5 4 2	♠ A 8
♥ K 3	♥ Q J 8 6 4
♦ A 7 5 2	♦ K 9 6
♣ K 8 7 2	♣ Q J 3

South has five high cards. He also has a short card in clubs. North has two high cards. He also has two short cards in hearts. Together, he has two tricks at a no-trump bid; four tricks if the bid is in a suit.

Make sure you are sure of that.

Inspector of Homes Pays Tribute To Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Sandercock For Efficient Handling of Hastings Home

Outstanding tribute was paid to Superintendent Elmer Sandercock and Matron Mrs. Sandercock of the Hastings County Home in an address given Hastings County Council at its closing session yesterday by Inspector of County Homes, J. Charles.

"Your superintendent and matron are doing a splendid job and are well fitted by their charge," Inspector Charles told the council.

Speaking generally, the inspector informed council there was a decided upward trend in Ontario over ten thousand aged people in homes of municipalities and this number is gradually increasing.

"Such," he added, "thanks to efficiency of administration and the interest taken in these people by municipal governments, they are enjoying the best of care. The standard of care has been raised and officials are striking stiefely to the new rules, thus assuring their charges the ultimate in comfort." Mr. Charles told the council.

Members of county councils, the inspector stated, while providing the best for these elderly people should take more personal interest in them and in their surroundings.

"By this, I think, the county governing bodies should pay more personal visits to these homes than they have been doing in the past."

No two homes are alike, he went on. No two superintendents or matrons are alike. Types differ. Some are excellent and some not so good.

He urged yearly maintenance of county homes. "Certainly," he said "it will cost you money, but it will cost you much more if you delay. Pennies Out Hazard.

The west end of the building, Inspector Charlton pointed out, was a serious fire hazard. "If fire occurred the elderly men would not have a chance." He recommended certain changes principal among which were modern coal bins which would prevent coal dust being circulated through the building.

"Generally speaking," he said "the province would save money by dismantling all the older type of county homes and erect modern structures from the ground up. Not much money," he said, "is being spent in maintenance and repairs."

In conclusion, the inspector told council all information regarding county homes is available, and his department will assist in anything that will go toward the improvement of homes and prevailing conditions. Inspector Frederick Babcock accompanied Inspector Charlton.

Three Physicians Appointed.

Dr. Van Blaikie, Belleville, received the appointment of physician and surgeon to the Hastings County Home after some discussion by council. He succeeds the late Dr. Faulkner. Salary was set at $400 per year. The only other applicant was Dr. Mc. Morgan of this city Madoc Road.

Another discussion followed the reading of the Roads and Bridges report when Reeve Wesley Madoc road being the argumentative member of that. Reeve did not come to any decision regarding the paving or surfacing of the unpaved sections of this road despite the fact that several members queried the matter. Reeve Langlois as to costs of various methods of surfacing and paving.

Reeve George West, Madoc, was the first to speak on the new agreement being taken by the county in regard to the question.

Chairman Fred Wilson of the Roads and Bridges Committee told council that he had interviewed the Minister of Highways at a recent convention and was told that the Minister planned to visit several rural municipalities this summer. He is expected here in the near future, Chairman Wilson told council, and will be taken on an inspection tour of the Madoc road with a view to facilitating the taking over of this highway by his department.

There was much pro and con argument anent the question which some nerves insisted in paving the important seven-eighths of a mile, which is, e.g. to prevent in the vicinity of Ivanhoe, while others held out for temporary maintenance due to the fact that this road will be taken over as a provincial highway as soon as the department can.

Reeve George West insisted that something be done about the five miles of township road between the end of the present pavement and Ivanhoe. Reeve Wesley Madoc, he said, to gainsay any paving of an additional mile or two read if proper maintenance of the aforesaid five miles was kept up.

Council took no action in the matter, although it adopted the Roads and Bridges Committee report.

Patriotic Fund

The county this year, it was pointed out, by Inspector Charles and Warden Donald of the Patriotic Committees has given grants from the Patriotic Fund amounting to $4,800, leaving a balance of $4,191.

Grants Listed

Belleville Navy League $850; Belleville Red Cross $2,000; and $100 to each Red Cross unit in the county, amounting to $1100.

Instead of distributing the money on behalf of various war relief organizations this year there will be one national appeal, it was stated, at the request from the combined organizations, which will be under the head of United Allied Relief Fund and from these organizations. The report was adopted.

Grants

The following grants were made: Belleville Chess Exhibition (if held) $50; Belleville Kinsmen Boys and County Fair Boards, $100 each; Federation of Agriculture, $100; Chamber of Commerce for farm commander-in-chief Bancroft Red Cross Hospital, $300.

Resuming the discussion of the application of a grant for the Trenton Firefighting school section, the council decided to take no action in the matter since the greater majority of members felt it was a municipal responsibility and not a county one.

Appreciation of the efficient service of Warden Thomas Donald was voiced by Reeve R. H. Vivian prior to adjournment of the session. The warden in his closing remarks thanked the council for their fine cooperation and prompt attendance at all sessions. He forwarded his personal compliments and best wishes with the fervent wish that all meet again in Victory year, 1945, in the dark clouds of war, but the warm sunshine of peace. The National Anthem ended the session and council adjourned until Dec. 3, 1944.

County Council Pleased by Small Number of Indigent Hospital Accounts

The shadow of indigent hospital accounts, the bane of municipal property councillors at their regular meetings, showed a silver lining at Thursday session.

In fact, the brighter days of a sum of pleasant surprises lighted up the session when Gordon Barker, Belleville general manager of hospital administration, addressed county fathers in a vein that was vastly different to that of one, two, and three years ago.

The light of optimism gleamed in official eyes when Mr. Barker announced that the accounts of the hospital were at present in the best shape they have ever attained.

"We are not standing on our own feet due to the proper handling of hospitals," he declared. He thanked the county clerk and his treasury, Mr. Bateman, for much their efficient co-operation.

Again during the session were evident when he told the council that a number of old accounts outstanding for years, had been brought before his finance committee and had been written off as bad debts. The amount of these accounts is $4,000, he said, "$2,000 of which were Hastings County debts. They will never come up again." Hastings County this year had only 45 accounts, 26 of which have been paid, truly a record," he said.

Only 36 Accounts Unpaid.

Twenty-six accounts are all that is left and none of them older than 1940, Mr. Barkely informed council. Everything has been done to collect these accounts as they are the "sitting down" of all the old accounts, he stated council would clear them off and start with a clean sheet.

Hospital authorities are assisting council in three ways, he declared. They are, in setting a rate of 75c per day for old age pensioners which is collected at the hospital; in order to get patients on county liability to convalescent homes as soon as they are ready and bringing close contact with families of these patients in an effort to persuade them that it is a moral responsibility for them to look after their parents.

Turning to statistics, the administrator told the council that last year 6183 patients had been admitted; 1008 babies were born; there were 1180 major and 1641 minor operations performed; 602 of the latter being tonsilectomies.

The maternity section which is subsidized by the government, had made over 40,000 laboratory tests for Hastings County hospitals free of charge. This is an important work in checking communicable diseases.

Over the year, he continued, 86 per cent of the hospital was occupied all the time and this with a reduced staff.

Individual hospitalization, promised by the provincial government official, did not materialize as well as expected when it was discovered that 4,000 more beds were in subsequent meeting of officials it was decided that the convalescent homes and not new hospitals were needed and many hospital investments is not needed.

Plans For Convalescent Homes.

Plans for these convalescent homes were well under way, Mr. Barker stated, and all these things lead to the better health of the people, he concluded and to provide for the poor and the rich will be ample, he emphasized. The poor, and this is as it should be as there should be a new class of people in hospitals the basic and the well-to-do. If those who can afford it, he declared, will be made to pay for them but let the basic cost take care of the hospitalization.

He urged everyone to grasp the proposed plan for family hospitalization. A rate of $1.50 per month, or $18 a month in a public ward would guarantee 21 days hospitalization-for each member of a family up to 18 years of age for the year? Salary Increase Raises Rates

The hospital had raised its rates in February, he said, to meet the cost of a salary increase of $7,400. But, he added, it had not raised the general rate one dollar per day as had been rumored. The total increase in rates would amount to $26.25 per day, if every room was occupied. Only a few rooms had been increased to the extent of one dollar per day.

He thanked the council for its co-operation afield and in session, and assured them of every co-operation in his part in striving to collect accounts. He urged council to assist the hospital by signing blank questionnaires, and by confidential correspondence.

Council applauded Mr. Barkely at the conclusion of his address.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Queen of Broadway"

"Queen of Broadway," starring Rochelle Hudson and Buster Crabbe provides entertainment at the Capitol Theatre Sunday midnight and a chance to revive memories of one of Broadway's legendary characters, Jack Doyle, who within the past few months passed away.

In "Queen of Broadway," Rochelle Hudson has one of the greatest roles of her career, that of the Big Stem's loveliest hoofing comedienne. How she rights off love and then sees her business go to ruin because of it, provides one of the most dramatic and most stirring motion pictures.

A Female Jack Doyle

What Rochelle really portrays is a female Jack Doyle—the manner in Jack Doyle was a Springfield, Mass. boy who early in life arrived in New York and from that moment on was a part of the fisherman had me Broadway who with the late John McGraw, then manager of the Giants was the toast of the town's jockey, opened the celebrated billiard academy with started his name. A few years after, Doyle bought out his partners and from then on managed the business himself.

"Happy Land"

Twentieth Century-Fox's long-awaited picturization of MacKinlay Kantor's best-loved, best-seller, "Happy Land," is scheduled to open Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre as the special added attraction.

Filmed from the beautiful and insightful novel which Willis Lindsay Allen White, nationally famous editor, said: "If I had but one gift that I could give everyone in this land, high or low, rich or poor, military or civilian, it would be 'Happy Land.'" The stirring picture features Don Ameche, Frances Dee, Harry Carey and Ann Rutherford in the leading roles.

Produced on the same scale that marked the film produced by Kenneth Macgowan.

AT THE BELLE

"The Unlavited"

Ray Milland is back in his old stamping grounds during the film, "The Unlavited" which opens today at the Belle Theatre, since the setting is in the old England countryside, land of his birth and boyhood.

Much of the action in this spine-chilling ghost story takes place in Devonshire, but about a mile from a fishing village where Ray spent his holidays as a boy. He recalls that afternoon, after his return, he went to him in those days, "I was filled with the usual curiosity of a youngster." Ray said, "and so when I saw the old fisherman tied me horse's tail directly across the channel, eighty miles away, it was a challenge to me. Although I did not tell him, I stored provisions in my bicycle basket and set off." I went."

Asked about the results of his hazardous adventure, Milland explained that his geography had always been a little shaky and so, when he came to a certain village about seven hours, he was much relieved when the French line, Lafayette, bore into sight and restored him to English soil, a very chastened adventurer.

Another feature of "The Unlavited" story is quite applicable to Ray, too. In the picture he plays the part of a man with a certain liking for some tender love scenes with Gail Russell, lovely new Paramount girl discovery. Actually, he does not oppose music as pictured on the screen, but Ray really has a great

New York June 10 —(CP)— A light and mildly naughty comedy on Broadway's current new stage offering during this first week of the Allied invasion of France.

The event for which the world has been awaiting with bated breath notioesably cut down attendance in the playhouses, even though the 1942-44 dramatic season has ended and June has brought the slack, summery days of the 1944-45 season.

Old Theme; The new arrival was "That Old Devil," written by author-playwright J. C. Nugent, who also plays the lead role of the character of the woman she plays takes its name. This entertaining, if relatively inconsequential comedy is based on an old theme.

The "Old Devil" is an elderly hen-pecked husband. A rumor prevails in the town where he lives that a young married woman (not his wife) is about to have a child by him. To encourage the rumor, which of course is false, That's all—except for a few couple of people to get the situation untangled.

Actor Nugent gives a delightful performance as the leading character in Author Nugent's play.

Leading Roles Go

One of the few serious politically-tinged plays of the old season—The Searching Wind," by Lillian Hellman, also languished cast including Dudley Digges, Cornelia Otis Skinner and Dennis King. But the bulk of the other survivors from the old season are light comedies, most of them "sewed" in London as far as the war or politics are concerned.

"CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT" by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER 11.

"Women! All the same! Spur mind justice in a murder. But no, it's always 'Oh, dear, I've broken a wheel'—and you thought Roberts wouldn't snitch on you, Miss Gala Vestall! How do you do—and now tell me the name of your boy friend —before he knows!"

Any got out of her chair in one long, lithe motion. "If Roberts knows my 'boy friend's' name, you'd know it by now," she told him gleefully, walking over to the desk and leaning her arms on it. "Luckily for me, he doesn't. And so keep on asking till you're blue in the face. I still say, I met no one—and so that's that! So long, Inspector Pettengill".

With that she turned and walked out of the room.

"Give the devil his due; the girl has guts", the Inspector said admiringly to the closing door.

Yes, Any had spunk, "guts", as the Inspector put it—and a basic and loyalty besides. But where would it lead her? And where did this whole crazy, eventful afternoon get the murder investigation?

A hidden valley full of radium might be a temptation to hunt for an also hidden safe containing the directions for locating it. But it didn't offer really to the murderer. And Any's clandestine love affair with an unknown man, in the murder house, had been going on so long it probably had no connection with the crime. Unless the mysterious lover was Burton.

The snap of Inspector Pettengill's watch cover put an end of my unprofitable thoughts and made me glance at him.

"Trying to figure it all out, Miss Detective?" he grinned at me. "Why don't you ask some questions? Maybe I could help you —and you me."

"I'm afraid they'd be rather pronunciamentos", I frowned.

"If I think so—they're no law says I got to answer them", he snorted again.

"All right then. Is there anything new in the house since this afternoon, that may help you solve the murder?" I ventured.

He drummed on the table reflectively. "There's a notion. Someone wanted that radium, outside Professor Stoddard", he said after a short pause. "But as to who the someone is—I haven't the slightest idea, so far".

"But you think it may be—Any Forrestall's young man?"

"I'll think better after I been talking to him".

"Then you expect to find out who he is?"

The Inspector shrugged. "In a town this size? There's always a Peter on Ivy Avery didn't name him, right off".

"She is a horrible creature, isn't she?" I agreed with him. "Coming here to supper, and making insinuations against innocent people".

"Miss Rowe was a good idea, setting up shop here and using you for a decoy", the Inspector chuckled. "Next question?".

"It's about Roberts. Do you believe he really threw that stone away?" I asked after some deliberation.

"Do you?" he parried.

I shook my head. "No. I can't imagine he kept it dusted for three years—in the state of his hands, if he'd only known—to discard it on the say-so of Inspector Pettengill.

"Then—why d'you think I'm a greater fool than you?"

That was a way of saying, I was right!

"I don't", I told him. "But sometimes I wish you were."

He laughed indulgently, as if he enjoyed my impudence. "You're okay", he said, wiping his eyes. "Go on. Next question".

"You summoned and ran out of the house, the time I found the Professor".

"You sure they was a scream?" The Inspector glanced at me searchingly.

"Of course there was", I told him, dumfounded. It had never occurred to me that he might doubt the true part of my story.

He nodded to himself, as if satisfied about something.

"Well, then I should say—some woman, from the way you describe it. Not Any, because she was still in the home by that time, with a bunch of company. Some other woman who hasn't come into the picture, yet. Hmmm. I reckon not. Will my next appointment be a help?"

"Your next appointment?" I asked taken back. I thought—

"You thought I was all through for the day? He sighed impatiently. "I sure ain't. I'm apt to still ask people questions after dinner. But don't worry. I'll be making life hard for Roberts and a few couple others over to the Burton house, or headquarters. You'll be rid of me soon as I'm through with Miss Burton, from upstairs".

"Was Gala Vestall" I had a disturbing vision of my handbag and a tiny gilt bobbypin in it. "What can she know about the murder?"

"She lives here, don't she? May about it". Gala smiled charmingly.

"I'm answer your question! I don't mind walking stairs, and visits up! And I'm ask you one: why the Inspector come to the house this morning, the Burton house?"

Gala's voice suddenly seemed a little shocked by her unexpected frontal attack.

"Just to know", he evaded.

"My mom found a couple in the bushes, and they was all covered in hair. And—and—" Miss Kay plotted it up and hid in from me, "and I don't thought I wasn't looking. So that's why we find him".

I could feel myself shrinking in defense. What a fool I had been, to think I could do anything without the Inspector's knowledge! Now he will give me a dig and make a clean breast of everything. My pose as a suspicious—my sore conviction of Bruce's guilt—

"I think that was very mean of you, Inspector—letting me believe I'd got away with it". I told him with an uneasy laugh.

"Thought to get away with babyface", he countered with the special twinkle I had come to fear. "Anyway, it's straightened out. So—no hard feelings?"

"No hard feelings". I agreed. But in my heart I vowed: "And I won't be such a fool again, letting you pull a cagey trick me into telling you my secret".

"I'll tell you was a little mean of you", Gala told him the next moment with a gently accusing smile. "Maybe babyface will get me into a escape some day. I always store up things to tell you, and then I forgetting to save me from a—police grill-ing. But I'm sure I'll remember".

"No. Just a nice, neighborly talk", the Inspector corrected. "And I ain't through with it yet. You know anything else about the Burton house, Uncle's desk in the library?"

"Only that he brought it with him from his trip". Why? Gala wanted to know.

"Why—may have been the murder weapon", the Inspector said jokingly. "But I'm never said nothing to you about it!"

"Then you didn't", Gala told him. "You see, we hadn't been on very good terms, the last time I see him, after his return and before he died. He was in the hospital. He was in severe pain when I see him—the shocks of what I stared in front of her. "It doesn't matter, now. Why he wanted to speak to me before—going on the operating table?" she added after a pause.

"Does not", the Inspector agreed. "Kind of a appendix, didn't he?"

"Yes. He'd neglected it. The Central American jungle isn't exactly a health resort, and he was on the trail of some great discovery he just couldn't give up. I understand".

The Inspector threw me a look. "Tallies with what we found", she checked Gala's story, some hour or last night. "You seen nothing over the house, Miss Vestall, since dawn? A light moving around in it or—anything?"

"Sorry, I didn't. In fact, it was so wet and foggy, I had the curtains drawn early—around six", Gala said.

"And you seen no one before that? Going in by the entrance in front, or the side door?"

"I couldn't see anyone going in by that door, from where I was", she assured him. "The ell of the house—the kitchen wing—cuts off the view. And the part it doesn't hide doesn't count, for I can't see much only can see the windows from the second floor up".

"Then at the times you was in the house before, you never seen nothing or noticed that from some one, using the little sitting room off the rear garage?"

Gala looked astonished. "Why, no. No, I never did. Why do you ask? Has someone been using it?"

"I was hoping you'd tell me", muttered the Inspector disgustedly as he gave up a gesture of dismissal.

Before dinner Aunt Millie and I managed to snatch an hour in the laboratory—our first undisturbed, peaceful time-out since the murder —for a thorough discussion of the various incidents of the day, and to tell each other what had happened in our separate investigations.

Amy's staunch refusal to disclose her connection with Gala puzzled Aunt Millie much. The girl had not committed any secret for some reason or other, and her attempt at upholding the alibi was was only natural. But the scene Stella Avery had created, after her unexpected relation to Inspector drove her into transports of disapproval.

"I tell you, Kay, it was something! Only missed being a regular by the strength of Sergeant Flynn's three right arms. Scandalous hussy! Such flapping and cackling when His Majesty arrived in his car! And Alice Forrestall gave as good as she got. Not that I blame her. Any hasn't defend her chick".

"Especially if she's thrown it into the old servant's mouth herself", said Aunt Millie, with a twinkle. "Any's crush, I mean".

"Yes, I think her warning against Gala was a blind for Aunt Millie's sake", I laughed.

"What else! She couldn't expect we'd believe her inconsequentially, and rush to the police with a story of Gala's visit. She just wanted to find out something; I don't know what. Gala's feeling for Burton, that's my guess".

"Mine, too", Aunt Millie told me. I think she had stood where she was there? It might have been she screaming and running away?"

INCREASE PENALTIES

New York, June 10 — (CP) — The Office of War Information reported yesterday that a new military decree has been issued in Germany increasing the penalties for desertion, defeatism, sabotage and disobedience to "military courses." The Nazis Arbeiter Zeitung said the decree had gone into effect on D-Day.

The War Today—
Allied Progress in Battle Of Cherbourg Peninsula

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press War Analyst

The Allies are making slow but steady progress in the battle of Cherbourg peninsula, with the capture of the main Nazi counter-attack still to come.

There is encouragement in several developments. Highly important is the fact that the Allies have built up men and equipment, are being built up—vital preparation for the coming push which is bound to come if the Germans are to be driven from France.

Another favorable development is the important rail and highway junction of Lisieux, surrounded by which Berlin reports a violent Allied attack, has been abandoned against Cherbourg.

Another hot spot is in the area of the city of Caen, dominating rail and road centre. Here our Canadian, British and Polish comrades-in-arms thrown back heavy Nazi attempts to break up the bridgehead they have established and are pushing towards the city itself.

Looking with realistic and not optimistic eyes at the Cherbourg peninsula, Hitler's own newspaper, the Volkischer Beobachter admits that Cherbourg is the Allies' "most important single mean the end." Probably the question uppermost in the Fuehrer's mind, and in ours, is whether that will be difficult to label the invasion as successful?

That isn't a difficult question. As I see it, we can say safely that the invasion will have achieved success as soon as the Allies have demonstrated their ability to develop and hold a major base through which a great army can be poured into the continent. 'Tis len't necessary that we should have completed this operation in order to make it clear that we are capable of finishing the job.

Actually we may have a definite answer to that question in the near future. That isn't to say Hitler won't throw in all he can, but I shall know pretty well how rapidly the Allies can push on the establishment of the second front.

House Celebrates Invasion Week By Rapid Progress in Legislation

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, June 10 (CP)—The House of Commons celebrated invasion week by making rapid progress with several legislative items in any one day, and in some cases, two days.

In the four days ended yesterday seven important pieces of legislation were either finally passed or advanced through important stages. Much progress was made in the Senate, too, where short and fewer items had to be dealt with. Senators were kept in step with suggestions made by "D-Day" by Prime Minister Mackenzie King and commented on by Gordon Graydon, Progressive Conservative House leader, that the members get along with business.

Here is the record of the week's progress:

The $2,600,000,000 war appropriation bill passed through three readings after several months debate on preliminary resolution.

The bill empowering the Canadian National Railways to buy certain coastal steamships, 14 vessels, passed through all stages.

The war time elections bill, providing for service voting at general elections, passed third reading and was approved in committee but for one clause.

The farm credits bill passed through second reading and was approved in committee.

The veterans' insurance bill, which is set up an air transport board and the basic compensation passed the resolution stage and first reading.

In addition, four private bills were put through third and third reading and five others were advanced through second reading.

SEES CANADIANS SWING INLAND TO JOIN BRITISH

Correspondent Tells of Orderly Pattern of Advancing Movement

SCENE BEFORE CAEN

(From the battlefield where the Canadians and British forces have met the following despatch was written by a British War Correspondent.)

By LEONARD MOSLEY
Distributed by The Canadian Press With the Allied Forces in France, June 2 —(delayed)— (CP) — The Canadians have swung inland to join (Britishi) Infantry who hold a deeper thrust toward Caen.

We still are engaged with the enemy before Caen, at the moment plotting it down dead and its attitudes and reconnaissance patrols.

I have just come back from the area north of Caen where I accompanied a British Infantry battalion moving up and digging out snipers as they went. A German mortar battery was firing on the road as we went along and two men fell.

At a farm on a hill where the village began we paused to watch the infantry moving onward.

As in most of this war there are no fixed lines and, consequently, no positions. There are strong points but otherwise the enemy may be anywhere at any time—in front of you, beside you or even behind you. But out of all this confusion our commanders contrive an orderly pattern—a pattern of advancing movement.

After leaving that village we travelled back along a shelled road and made our way to headquarters of airborne troops who hold part of our flank. They created this flank and have held it against repeated attack by infantry and sometimes by armored forces.

They are under constant fire from guns, mortars and snipers but they have held on and even improved their position.

M. J. SMITH, elected President of the Citizens Association of Fifth Ward.

13-Year-old Russian Boy In German Army

By L. E. B. SHAPIRO
Distributed By The Canadian Press With Allied Forces in France, June 2— (Delayed)— A 13-year-old Russian boy, in a German uniform several sizes too big for him, was among prisoners from the German 31st Panzer Division captured last night.

The boy told intelligence officers he had been forced into the German Army a year ago and sent to France after training.

The boy looked no more than 13 years of age and his age was established by papers found on him.

He seemed apathetic about being taken prisoner and looked around in wonder at British officers but he brightened considerably when put aboard a ship for England.

French People Ignorant of War Conditions in U.K.

By RICHARD D. MACMILLAN
With Allied Forces In France, June 9—French people liberated by Allied forces expressed themselves today as solidly behind Gen. de Gaulle, leader of the French Committee of National Liberation, and were surprised at the idea that there is any difference of opinion among the French under German occupation.

"We are all solidly behind our leader, de Gaulle," they said. "He, as well as British and America, has been our constant hope through the darkest hours. He is the only leader for us."

I found French people had no conception of what Britain suffered in holding out against German air raids, the submarine campaign and the constant threat of invasion following Dunkerque. The French people were even surprised to know that we had rationing. They believed Britain was a land of plenty.

Little Benny's Note Book

After supper me started to go out to meet Mrs. Hews in from of the Narcissis and see the picture with her, saying to pop. Now William, Benny is to go to bed punktually at nine, and I'm depending on you to see to it.

And I'm depending on myself, my dear, so with all that backing I feel full of confidence and I'm sure it'll come off with flying colors, pop said and ma said, Well goodbye then.

And she kept on going and pop kept on reading his paper and after a while I closed by lyberry book and started to do by homework before pop's chance to ask if I needed me, and pretty soon I said O, pop, I'm sleepy and this homework makes me still sleepier. Why cant I finish my book and get up early in the morning and do my homework when I'm good and fresh? I said.

People who are good and fresh the first thing in the morning can be counted on the fingers of one hand, pop said. But I know just how you feel, because I'v nearly dozed off myself half a dozen times right here in my chair yet I feel it's my duty to finish the editorial although the confound thing seems to me so much like a bedtime story that would put stronger and most determined man to sleep. But me fight it to the bitter end if I have to do it with one eye. That's my problem and yours is to get through with your lessons under similar circumstances, so let us fight the good fight together, he said.

Which we kept on doing, and the next thing I knew ma was there saying, Well such a sight to greet my eyes for land sakes.

What happened, couldn't you get in the street? pop said, and ma said, Of course I got in, and it's after eleven o'clock and I come home to find you snoring in your chair and Benny tight asleep on the floor.

We were both overpowered by forces beyond our control, pop said.

"The truth being" ma said, "we to bed and claimed she was going to deliberately let pop get the whole jump of the picture whether he listened or not.

100,000 GERMAN GIRLS WORK ON NAZI RAILWAYS

One Way Home From German Slavery Given Conscientious Objectors' Bar of Soap and Receives Kiss

By LARRY ALLEN
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Just repatriated from a German prison camp)

New York, June 10 —(AP)— One hundred thousand German girls, tossing coupling links about as if they were powderpuffs, are working on the Reich's great railway system.

One of thousands of others are in the Luftwaffe with specially picked squads of "sultry" girls for rescue work and clean-ups after aerial bombings.

During my eight months as a prisoner of war in Germany I was transported through all sections of the nation except the Berlin area, constantly inquiring of my fellow-captives and guards if they knew anything about the girls.

Then on my last trip through southern and western Germany (somewhere) I gave a blonde conductor (across a bar of soap which meant her first real bath in many months) a return, she gave me my first kiss in nearly two years.

It's wonderful, what a bar of soap will do!

Pope Praises Allies For Handling Of Food Problem in Italy

Rome, June 10 —(AP)—Lt.-Gen. Mark Clark, Allied 5th Army commander, said yesterday that Pope Pius expressed to him great satisfaction with Allied authorities' handling of the feeding problem since the occupation of Rome. Clark said the Pontiff, with whom he talked for 10 minutes yesterday, had been greatly concerned that chaotic conditions might arise with the city's fall. Pope Pius said that his concern had been removed.

CALLS INVASION 'CLIMAX OF WAR'

Order of Day Issued by Admiral Sir Bertram Ramsay, Royal Navy Made Public

London, June 10—(CP)—Admiral Sir Bertram Ramsay of the Royal Navy in an order of the day to the Allied Naval Expeditionary Force on the eve of D-Day called the invasion "the climax of the European war."

Admiral Ramsay is Naval commander-in-chief of the invasion forces.

The text of his order, made public today:-

It is to be our privilege to take part in the greatest amphibious operation in history—a necessary preliminary to opening of the western front in Europe, which, in conjunction with a great Russian advance, will crush the fighting power of Germany.

Our task, in conjunction with the merchant navies of the United Nations and supported by the Allied air forces, is to carry the Allied expeditionary force across the channel, to establish them in a secure bridgehead, and build it up with the requisite air strength, which will outmatch that of the enemy.

Let no one underrate either the magnitude of this task.

The Germans are desperate and will resist fiercely, until we outmanoeuvre and outfight them. Outfight them we will do.

I count on every man to do his utmost to ensure the success of this great enterprise which is the climax of the European war.

EISENHOWER WARNS TORIES

General Eisenhower's Command Post, June 10—(AP)—Gen. Eisenhower wasn't at all worried about what the German Air Force would do on invasion day, being supremely confident that Allied power would handle anything with its wallops on its wings.

He told a group of Canadians just before they embarked: "If you see any planes, don't worry—they're ours."

Humbert Asks Redoubled Effort At Allies' Side

Rome, June 10 —(AP)— Crown Prince Humbert today called upon all Italian soldiers, sailors and airmen to redouble their efforts at prosecuting the war at the side of Allied troops.

Only through Allied victory will the Italian people have opportunity to justify themselves and resume their rightful position among the peoples of the world, he said.

"Our people have already given the highest example of moral strength of renewal after a war that was not desired yet nevertheless always heroically borne," the Prince declared.

It was Humbert's first public statement since returning to Rome as Lieutenant-General of the realm.

Meanwhile, Ivanoe Bonomi assumed the task of forming a new Italian cabinet which, it was said, will be wholly anti-Fascist in character and action and one which will collaborated with Mussolini's Fascist regime.

Marshal Badoglio, who stepped down as Premier Tuesday, will not be included in the new government, Bonomi, 71, was premier for a short period in 1922 before the Fascist era.

Canadians, British Landed in Region Of Bernieres-Sur-Mer

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 10—(CP) Field dispatches declared today that the British and Canadian landings on D-Day were made in the region of Bernieres Sur Mer, north of Caen. Bernieres is in Allied hands.

The naming of Bernieres-Sur-Mer confirmed the Canadian Press scout of June 8 which first mentioned the town as a Canadian landing spot. Source of the report was Demmd Tighe, Reuter's Correspondent.

Capital Closeups

By JAMES MCGOOE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Regina, June 10 —(CP)— The familiar faces of Ottawa were the familiar faces of Saskatchewan this week. Members of parliament for Saskatchewan ridings were busy in the provincial election campaign which ends June 15.

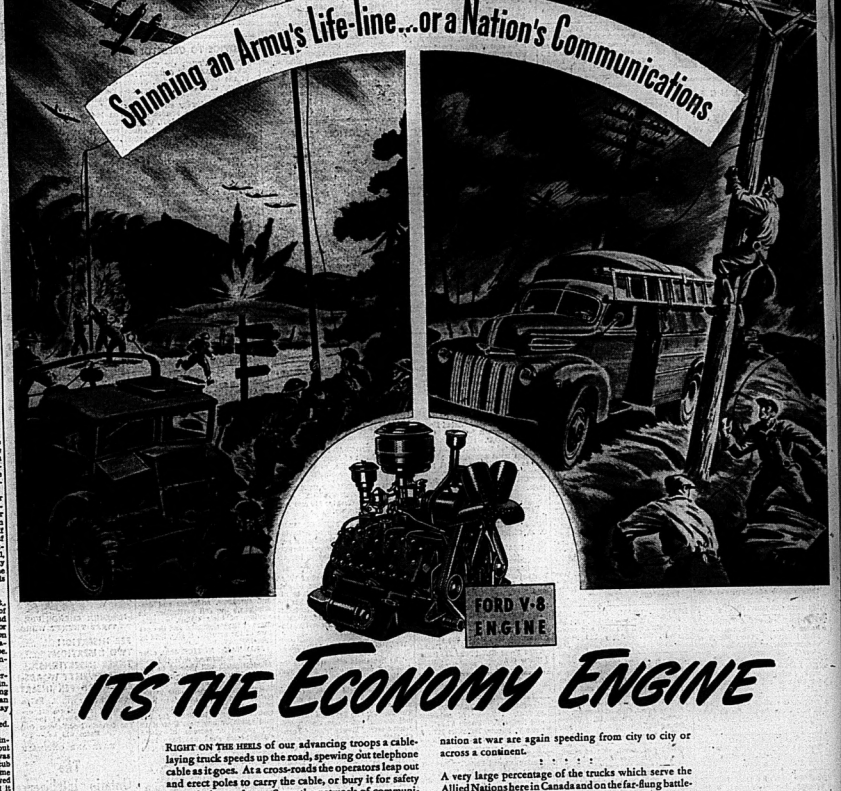
Almost every election speaker has made some reference to Ottawa. Some have indicated their belief that as goes Saskatchewan at the polls, so goes the nation. Off the platform, representatives of various parties have said they expect a federal election this fall, although they doubt whether any decision has been made by Prime Minister Mackenzie King and his cabinet.

Sidelight: At Chaplesu, Ont., Charles Evans, Liberal member of parliament for Maple Creek and Roy Graham, Liberal member for Swift Current, read a station bulletin board telling of pre-invasion air bombardment of Europe.

They commented it seemed increasingly shameful.

"Yes, I know it is," said an elderly man, also overhearing. "I had a letter from my son telling me of their air operations, he's an airman and I had a telegram today saying he was missing."

Then he moved on, his eyes red.



Bear: Hon. J. W. Estey, Provincial Attorney General, was out hunting votes when there was a good bear call at home. A bear cub turned up in the garden of his home in Regina. Mrs. Estey ordered it from a tree by police, who found it were a collie and evidently was someone's pet.

MEXICAN PRES. CONGRATULATES KING

Mexico City, June 10 — (AP) — President Avila Camopo sent a cablegram to King George yesterday congratulating him on celebration of his birthday. The message: "Am sending to Your Majesty my most affectionate congratulations on the occasion to express the admiration with which the Mexican government and people are following, in these moments of such transcendent importance for humanity, the efforts of the heroic soldiers of Great Britain, for whose rapid victory I most fervently pray."

NOTHING NEW

Use of asbestos can be traced to ancient times.

RIGHT ON THE HEELS of our advancing troops a cable-laying truck speeds up the road, spewing out telephone cable as it goes. At a cross-roads the operators leap out and direct poles to carry the cable, or bury it for safety beneath the roadway. Soon the network of communications is bringing in reports and carrying orders to the various army units.

A storm strikes in Canada, telephone poles crash to the ground, and vital threads of communication are broken. But in a few minutes a service truck is at the scene of the damage, wires are connected up and vital messages of a nation at war are again speeding from city to city or across a continent.

A very large percentage of the trucks which serve the Allied Nations here in Canada and on the far-flung battle-fronts are rugged, dependable Ford Trucks. The power plant which drives these trucks is the Ford V-8 Engine. This amazing piece of Ford engineering has been developed, improved, perfected through the years, and today it is setting new records of trouble-free performance. Above all it's the economy engine, easy on oil, and extremely saving of precious gasoline.

CARENTAN, IN CHERBOURG PENINSULA, NAZIS CLEARED FROM AREA SOUTH OF PESCARA R.

Canadian-British Forces Batter Way 9 Miles E. of Caen

(By JAMES M. LONG, AP WAR CORRESPONDENT)

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 12 — (AP) — American troops have captured Carentan, stronghold in the centre of the narrow neck of Cherbourg peninsula, the German High Command conceded today, and British-Canadian forces have battered nine miles east of Caen, threatening encirclement of that eastern hinge of the Normandy battlefront.

American units not only were cracking the Cherbourg peninsula line at the centre, pounding halfway across the cape, but one spearhead had hammered within 14 miles southeast of the great fennel port itself. And Berlin's Trans-Ocean Agency asserted seaborne forces had poured ashore at St. Vaast la Hogue, 15 miles east of Cherbourg.

As for Caen, German broadcasts asserted that a British-Canadian drive had reached nearly to Troarn, nine miles due east of that city six miles inland on the Orne river and that British-Canadian parachutists had landed south of Caen. British and Canadian formations were pushing ahead west of Caen, threatening the other flank. Field Marshal Rommel has mustered his fiercest armored counter-attacks in this Caen sector, and Berlin said major Allied forces were concentrating for a full-fledged assault on the town.

The German Trans-Ocean Agency quoted a Berlin military spokesman as saying Gen. Montgomery has tried "during the last 24 hours to surround Caen, but the town is still in German hands."

Yet Headquarters reported:

This enemy spokesman also asserted the 2nd British Army is fighting in this sector. (Allied quarters have not identified the British formations in the bridgehead, other than naming the 50th (Northumbrian) Division, as engaged in the fighting.)

In the centre of the 80-mile-long front, American troops were advancing toward St. Lo, communications hub 20 miles inland.

As the American frontal attack across the Merderet river on the Cherbourg peninsula reached within 12 miles of the west coast road to Barfleur, whose capture would seal off Cherbourg — Germany's controlled Vichy radio reported American troops had pushed into Quineville on the east coast.

This would put the Allies within 14 miles of Cherbourg on a front-mile front between Quineville and Montebourg, where street fighting was reported.

German reports said 300,000 to 400,000 Allied troops already had been poured into the bridgehead and that these represented either one-third of the assault forces poised in Britain to hurl their home attackers against the continent.

Grand Standing Bid

The bulk of the huge forces of the 21st Amphibious Army group is still standing by for promotion at the important harbor of German broadcasts said.

Continuing a stream of reports on new Allied landings, the German-Overseas Agency declared still seaborne forces had been put ashore northeast of St. Vast La Hogue, near the northeast corner of the peninsula, and east of Cherbourg.

Other enemy reports said the Allies had crossed the Orne estuary,

Japs Striving To Establish New 'West Wall'

Chungking, June 12—(AP)—Japanese troops apparently striving to establish a "West Wall" along the Canton-Hankow railway to protect their home islands, have reported relatively today to have opened a drive northward along the railline to match their westward offensive in the Changsha area.

A dispatch to United States 15th Air Force headquarters said the new enemy push from Changsha, 175 miles southward with the battle for beleaguered Changsha, had brought the China war to its greatest pitch since 1938.

The drive south along the railway the Japanese are hammering at the gates of Changsha, Chungking said, had Hunan province offensive, the Chinese High Command announced last night. The Japanese have claimed capture of Changsha, but there was no confirmation of this from the Chinese, who said the invaders were halted by the Siangtan defenses at the city's southeast.

In Yunnan province, meanwhile, Chinese troops have occupied Lungling, scoring "the greatest success to date for the troops in the Salween offensive," the Chinese High Command announced.

Enemy on Defensive Along Line West and Northwest of Caen

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With Canadian Forces in France, June 12 — (CP) — The enemy now is on the defensive along a line running west and northwest from Caen.

Last night was quiet on most sectors of the Canadian-British front in the eastern part of the expanding Allied bridgehead on Normandy, but east of the river Orne some advances were made. British and Canadian air-borne troops of the British 6th airborne division continue to do a splendid job as flank protection.

Canadian tanks were out reconnoitring Sunday but preliminary reports indicated they ran into strong German anti-tank fire. This foray was followed up by a heavy artillery barrage from Canadian guns and some German counter-battery went aimed at gun positions.

During the night there was more shelling and air and naval guns also were in action.

It is estimated that on the British-Canadian sector German prisoners taken since D-Day total about 3,200 exclusive of the wounded. Casualties on both sides cannot be given yet but they are considerably less than the German total.

The troops have been in Normandy now for almost a week and things are beginning to settle down at last, with a firm base now established for the next offensive phase of the campaign.

Most enemy pockets of resistance have been cleaned up, with one exception, Cherbourg, the chief and the sniper menace behind the front lines is practically eliminated. You can drive to the front now without being under threat of being shot at by some enemy lurking in the woods, sitting in trees or hiding under the roof of a house.

This has been a hectic but highly successful week's campaigning and although Caen is not captured yet a bridgehead in German force has been brought to battle and hit hard.

This is what a small section of the mighty invasion armada looked like on "D-Day". Barrage balloons over head and the White Ensign flying astern mark each merchantman, these Canadian LCT (3)'s and Royal Navy LCI (3)'s are under way in the English Channel. Two hours later they were landing Canadian troops and tanks on the coast of France. Flown by bomber across the Atlantic, these are the first actual invasion photos of H.M.S. ships to arrive in Canada.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 12 (AP) — American heavy bombers and streams of lighter craft pumped a steady hail of bombs and lead into 10 German defenses today in the greatest aerial blows to date supporting the French invasion.

Flying in fine weather, the Allied air forces by noon had run up more than 1,000 sorties for the day — when 7,000 planes slammed the German defenses all day yesterday — and were sent to Berlin—heavies, mediums, fighter-bombers and fighters raced over the battlelines and far into France, bombing and strafing.

A significant new point in the supporting campaign became apparent as thousands of RAF fighters were attacking specific targets in rapid-fire order on calls from ground controllers—which meant that newly established air bases on French soil were clicking.

Main Lines of Campaign

Besides the speedy knockout of particular objectives along the main lines—disruption of transport lines within 100 miles of the battleline over which Marshal Rommel is trying to bring up his tactical reserves and the bombardment of rail centres beyond the 100 mile radius thru' which the Germans might draw on strategic reserves in Southern France.

No Immediate Prospect Civilian Tires in Sight

Toronto, June 12 — (CP) — J. G. Godsoe, chairman of the Wartime Industries Control Board, said today Canada's supplies of crude rubber, with the production of synthetic rubber, are expected to be sufficient to provide for military requirements and highly essential civilian items, but there is no immediate prospect of tires becoming generally available.

In an address prepared for delivery at the annual meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, Mr. Godsoe, who is also controls co-ordinator for the Munitions Department, said stockpiles of crude rubber, built up before the war spread to the Pacific have been exhausted. Canada now is dependent on "trickles" from Ceylon, Mexico, Central and South America and Africa.

"Conversion to the use of synthetic rubber from crude rubber is proceeding remarkably well, although there have been and still are technical difficulties," he said.

"We now are fairly confident that our supplies of crude, together with our production of synthetic, will be ample to provide for military requirements and highly essential civilian items.

The Firmer Corp. Synthetic Rubber Plant at Sarnia, Ont., is exceeding its rated capacity on Buna-s rubber and production has reached a point where "some quantities" have been released for export and restrictions have been removed on the use of Buna-s, other than latex.

"This does not mean there are going to be enough tires," Mr. Godsoe warned.

Limited plant facilities, labor shortages and a scarcity of rayon and cotton tire cord were among other limiting factors.

"In short, while the demands of the armed forces remain at anything like their present level—and we expect them to increase rather than decrease—tires will continue to be made available to civilians only as replacements for the most essential users," he said.

VICHY AUTHORITY IN SOUTH FRANCE IS DISINTEGRATING

French Underground Forces Are Cutting Communications Between Foe Garrisons

HARSH NAZI MEASURES

London, June 12 — (CP) — Reports from Spain today and Vichy authoritly in southern France is disintegrating, except where it is close to German protection, and French underground, forces are cutting communications between enemy garrisons.

Meanwhile, in the harshest of a series of German steps aimed at subduing the increasing resistance behind Nazi lines, Field Marshal Von Rundstedt proclaimed last night Frenchmen resisting the German war machine would be executed when captured.

The German commander in France, in a decree broadcast by the Paris radio, said those found guilty under article 10 of the French-German Armistice Convention (of 1940) proclaiming that French citizens taking arms against the German Reich will be treated by German troops as Franc Tireurs (irregulars)."

French resistance leaders, in a broadcast last night from the United Nations radio at Algiers, directed all Frenchmen and women "to defend themselves mobilized to hamper by the Germans by every means possible and to give all possible aid to the Allies."

PARATROOPERS PUT UP 'TERRIFIC FIGHT' ON FLANK

Canadians, Part of British Division, Made Good Landing

HOLD WOODED AREA

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadians in France, June 12 — (CP Cable) — Canadian parachutists are putting up a "terrific fight" on the eastern flank of the Normandy battlefield, according to officers who have just come from that sector.

The parachute unit was part of the British 6th Air-Borne Division which dropped early on D-Day and won ground northeast of the city of Caen, six miles inland, to protect the beachhead flank.

The officers added that until made a good landing and occupied a wooded area from which they have been fighting for nearly six days. The Canadians had some of the toughest fighting of all in the divisional sector but they have not been "pushed from their position and have been doing magnificently.

Canadian troops have been attacking the air-born force with infantry and tanks, the officers related, but the British and Canadian troops, holding villages and wooded farm land, have given the attacking forces several bad beatings. They ambushed the enemy outside the area and rooted them with machine-guns.

A large amount of German booty has fallen into the hands of the Canadian paratroopers.

HOUSING PLANS LIMITED IN 1944 SAYS J.G. GODSOE

Little Prospect Seen For Early Resumption Of Manufacture Of Civilian Goods

TIGHTNESS IN STEEL

Toronto, June 12 — (CP) — There is little prospect for early resumption of the manufacture of civilian goods, Canada's war effort will suffer, J. G. Godsoe, chairman of the Wartime Industries' Control Board and co-ordinator of controls for the Munitions Department, said today.

In a comprehensive review of the supply situation in Canada, given in an address prepared for delivery to the Canadian Manufacturers Association, Mr. Godsoe said that while some materials now were in easier supply stocks of other goods remained tight.

Steel, Copper Very Short

Materials still in very short supply include steel, copper, brass, rubber, cost and tin. Increased demands of aluminum, lead, magnesium, nickel, zinc and timber are available, but not necessarily in quantities sufficient to allow general relaxation, Mr. Godsoe said.

New demands for steel, combined with other factors, have necessitated a tightening in construction controls and more rigid restrictions are getting put into effect, he disclosed.

The new tightened construction policy will have an effect on practically all types of building, Mr. Godsoe said.

"With the recent tightening in the steel supply position we are no longer able to authorize any projects requiring structural steel unless they are immediately essential to the war effort," he said.

"In fact, because of that steel picture, I am afraid that many holders of facilities previously approved find they are unable to secure materials for their projects."

The industrial and commercial projects approval will only be given where it is established that the work is essential to the completion of a direct war program or of essential civilian requirements," Mr. Godsoe explained.

Housing Program Limited.

"During 1944 the housing program must be limited," Mr. Godsoe said. "We will not be able to permit building of all the houses which we would like to authorize, but must give the broadest kind of licensing to projects which are needed to provide the maximum of housing accommodation. Projects which aim merely at providing luxury accommodation must be deferred until the period of scarcity is over."

Von Mackensen's Army Dispersed To the Four Winds

Put on Every-Man-For-Himself Basis In Retreat to Florence For Assembly

MONT FIASCONE TAKEN

By EDWARD KENNEDY
(AP War Correspondent)

Rome, June 12 — (AP) — Fifth Army troops have occupied Monte Fiascone, an important road junction near the shores of Lake Bolsena, and other columns pushing along the Tyrrhenian coast spearheading Orbetello, 71 miles northwest of Rome, Allied headquarters announced today.

Eighth Army columns advancing up both sides of the Tiber neared Bagno Reggio west of the river and Ilkirl east of the river.

In the mountainous central sector, Avezano and its neighboring villages has been occupied while in the Adriatic sector all Germans have been cleared from the south bank of the Pescara river and Allied troops have pushed within close artillery contact with the withdrawing Germans.

A gain of 15 miles was announced for 5th Army units along the west coast. Near Sunstaldia the Germans counter-attacked with two companies, but the Allies beat them back and continued the drives.

Among the areas to fall into Allied hands was Lake Fucino near Avezano, which some years ago was drained and now is a 40,000-acre tract of rich farmland.

Headquarters declared the 6th South African armored division was among the 8th Army units which advanced through the Liri and Sacco valleys.

Make "Planet Move"

After distinguishing itself in engineering feats, this division won a "ghost move", by entering 5th Army territory from the entirely different Rome despite the congestion of the city and then shooting a hundred miles in a mile up the west bank of the Tiber.

"It is now quite clear" a headquarters announcement said, "that the original 5th Army and Von Mackensen has been dispersed to the four winds.

"The Germans is a few scattered remnants who mainly are engaged in stealing motor transport to get away as fast as possible. Prisoners describe the situation as wholly chaotic.

"The most striking evidence of the degree of disintegration was provided by the fact that captured stragglers were provided with passes as saying he bearer was authorized to proceed either alone or in small groups to an assembly place near Florence."

What is left of the German army, which once included the 4th Parachute, the 65th and 362nd Infantry and 3rd Panzer Grenadier Divisions, thus appears to have been put on an every-man-for-himself basis in a retreat to Florence.

In the Adriatic sector the 8th Army, commanded by Lt.-Gen. Leese, also pushed forward and the Allied communique announced that all Germans have been cleared from the area southeast of the Pescara river.

An Allied spokesman said the Germans sent a new division south in an effort to stem the Allied drive north of Rome, but added it was composed largely of Russian prisoners.

Tactical air operations were restricted by the weather yesterday, but the Mediterranean Air Force sent over 1,500 sorties, night-flying bombers, presumably R.A.F. planes, attacked objectives in Bulgaria during the night.

Sunday's air operations cost 17 Allied planes, including 12 heavy bombers. At least 16 enemy aircraft were destroyed, the communique said.

Motor Torpedo-Boats Manned By R.C.N. Personnel Play Big Role

By SUB-LT. FRANK HEALY, R. C. N. V. R.

A British Port, June 12 — (CP Cable)—Four motor torpedo-boats manned by R. C. N. personnel played an important role during the invasion of France when they possibly destroyed a German E-boat and damaged three others during hot engagements off Le Havre, Allied naval headquarters here say on two consecutive nights while patrolling the eastern approaches of the Allied convoy lanes.

The Canadian craft achieved such success that the second engagement Rear Admiral Philip Vian, commander of the Allied Forces, congratulated and thanked them over the air for their efforts.

These small boats operated in "line ahead" formation with the senior officer of the Flotilla, Lt.-Cmdr. "Tony" Law of Toronto and Lt. Peter Scott, R.N. in the lead. The men and craft was in charge of Lieut. Dave Kilian, R. C. N. V. R. of Vernon, B.C.

Our M. T. B., commanded by Lieut. Dave Kilian, D. S. C., of Vernon, B.C., and Lieut. Peter Scott, R.N., commanded by Lieut. Barney Marshal of Victoria, B.C., brought up the rear.

In the early darkness of D-Day we spotted a pack of U-boats heading toward the convoy route and immediately gave chase. The hunt developed into a 20-minute exchange of gunfire.

Tracers came as us from all directions as the enemy made the area bright as day. One R-boat appeared to explode and our consorts claimed hits on two others. The enemy fled under a heavy smoke screen.

The next night we went back for more. The enemy came out only at night and this time they sent destroyers out to get us. Searchlights were illuminated the sky, the enemy destroyers poured in a hail of shells and fire.

Law decided our only hope was to try to cut off our target, which we did while four-inch shells and tracers almost smothered us, and the enemy fled.

Once more the force was credited with keeping the enemy out of the Allied sea lane.

Petty Officer Harvey Hymers of Hamilton, Sask., displayed bravery under fire when the apparatus on the ship for releasing a smoke screen failed to function and he climbed from the conning-tower hatch on to the stern and released the emergency smoke screen apparatus. He did this although the craft was an open target for the enemy guns and tracers and shells flew all around.

"As far as I was concerned, I had no other choice," he said later, "It had to be released so I released it."

NO CALLS ANSWERED SINCE FIRST OF JUNE

With the passing of reason for any true, true kind of an inactivity-record is being established at the local fire hall when not a single alarm having been rung in at the station since the first of June. This represents one of the longest periods recorded by firemen when fire-fighting activities are at such a minimum. With routine duties about the fire hall however, firemen still have not been as inactive as the absence of calls might indicate.

Heightening the prospect of extinction of Osea was the German report of other parachute troop landings in Holland.

To the west British forces said were flanking the town by a thrust through Hilgen, and were now removed enemy resistance in the suburbs.

Still farther west, American forces were within 10 miles of Bremerhaven to have assembled with gathering force beyond the Weser, bombed Nazi naval control points and into the Forest de Cerisy, a defence point for the Germans between Carentan and St. Lo.

Nazis Say Canadians Given Up

The German account said Carentan was given up by the Germans after a week of pounding by Allied naval gunfire.

The German accounts said the fighting ravaged close to the flood-waters of the Taute River where had held or heavy tank attacks and night penetrations of the plains.

Berlin military circles are said to be expecting a major British-Canadian attack on Caen today.

The Berlin high command spokesman said it "seems that the Allies are making straight for Paris."

Berlin declared that the British and Canadian formations were holding their own satisfactorily in the Tilly-sur-Seulles area and that fluid dispositions said General Montgomery had ordered were paying off.

Amid sneering sweep, with the Allies driving ahead on both flanks down the town.

Headquarters Communique No. 18 said today that the Allies had intensified fighting against German armored and rural pockets between Caen and the Tilly-Sur Seulles area on the British central front.

Move up Reserves

Field Marshall Rundstedt was reported to have moved up far back as Paris to meet this menace, bringing up tanks, self-propelled guns, and the roads over which they moved were jammed with motorized, rocket and machine-gun fire of an Allied air armada which for the past week has been more acutes than all day yesterday.

Allied artillery supported them the Battleship Warspite and the U.S. battleship Texas opened a terrific bombardment of the Cherbourg peninsula.

Sector by sector, this was the latest positions:

CHERBOURG — Whatever the battle of Cherbourg peninsula, the landings east of the port, American troops were only 14 miles away in the outskirts of Cherbourg.

The battle of Cherbourg Peninsula continues to mount in fury as the Americans press on both sides, but we have the gratifying assurance today that the Germans admit that "the Allied armies have secured a firm and good lodgement on the mainland of France."

We mustn't assume from this that the Allies have gained the danger mark. The peak of the battle will probably be reached soon in the main body of his armored strategic reserves for an all-out counter-attack.

However, Rommel himself is in a mighty tough spot. His problem isn't that of dealing with the invasion forces alone. He has to be guarding the entire coastline of Western Europe—from Southern France. If he sends great strength against the peninsula, he lays himself open to Allied amphibious invasions at numerous other strategic points. He might handle one, but he can't deal with all of them satisfactorily at the same time.

Rommel Forced to Defend

Still, he has no choice but to defend the peninsula to the best of his ability. It is the great battle of the crucial engagements of the war, for while Rommel couldn't prevent the Allies from establishing the second route by land through at Cherbourg, yet he might delay our ultimate success greatly.

The Allies have got to the Nazis to attack in force in the immediate future and get them back on the back into the sea. One of our most powerful weapons against this assault will be our vast superiority in the air.

Another tower of strength rests in Allied warships lying off Cherbourg. The great battleships and "enemy mobile batteries have been under heavy fire from these warships." The great naval guns not only have been ironing out batteries, but as well have been smashing concretions.

Allied Troops and Supplies Landed.

Despite the bad weather, the Allies have continued to land troops and supplies. The sentiment among Allied leaders is that the invasion is finally are grinding on both sides of Hitler.

Cpl. Tod Captures, Disarms 27 Huns Single-Handed

By ROSS MUNRO
With the Canadians In France,
June 12 — (CP Cable) — Cpl. Johnny Tod of Prince Albert, Sask., a Canadian Army Service Corps dispatch rider, single-handedly captured and disarmed 27 Germans and a Nazi typewriter yesterday morning.

But stouthy Johnny single-handedly captured and disarmed 27 Germans and a Nazi typewriter yesterday morning.

This is how it happened: The formation moved forward as the infantry battled their way through attack from the hedgehog and "mopping up" operations went up to set up shop. There were pockets of Nazi resistance and isolated snipers and machine-gun nests. Tod's motorcycle helped to clear a reasonable path for the armored vehicles.

Tod was on lone patrol armed with a rifle. He walked down a deep enemy trench and coming round a turn almost bumped into a group of 27 Germans. But he thought quickly and shouting, "Come on the Highland Light Infantry!" to encourage his battalion behind him, walked up to the Germans.

They put up their hands and as the prisoners filed down the trench did the same. The Canadian corporal disarmed them, and one by one marched them into an infantry assembly area. Then he went back and found the typewriter and helped himself to everything that looked like a document.

He came back to headquarters with the prisoners in front of his motorcycle, which he had loaded with Lugers, a radio, a camera, and a field telephone set. But Johnny had forgotten his rifle and had to go back for it.

Meanwhile, Sergt.-Maj. Alex Clot, 700 Wellington Street, London, Ont., received calmly news of another D.S.O. awarded to Lieut.-Col. Bill Zerd, 727, of suburban St. Vital, captured 27 Germans single-handed in France.

His brothers, Flying Officer W.O. Robert Clot, R.C.A.F. WO. Richard Douglas, of the R.C.A.F., have been missing overseas since 1942, and the sergeant-major's wife, Mrs. Clot, has received no word of their fate.

The two missing brothers were principally the Nazis' mobile guns, but by no means all their destruction defence batteries were knocked out.

Beachhead Secure.

The invasion beachhead was reported as secure and firmly established today with "sober satisfaction."

The fight had reached the phase of exploiting the beachhead success and the build-up for the battle further since D-Day, the Allied command was expected to accelerate operations.

Sector by sector, this was the latest positions:

CHERBOURG — Whatever the battle of Cherbourg peninsula, the landings east of the port, American troops were only 14 miles away in the outskirts of Cherbourg.

VALOGNES - CARENTAN — heavy bombers bombed behind the Germ rer river brought American forces along within 10 miles of the town and set up the west side of the peninsula, the last main sector of enemy route for the German forces defending Cherbourg.

CARENTAN-ISIGNY — American troops slugged on yard by yard through flooded country to within 1½ miles of the Carentan stronghold from which the Germans control the flooded area. Gen. Dwight Eisenhower's Supreme Allied Command announced that Carentan has been virtually encircled by the Americans.

The crossing of the estuary forced the Germans to evacuate the towns before the Allied onslaught was checked near Troarn, eight miles east of Caen, by German account. Field Marshall Rundstedt was reported to have moved up far back as Paris to meet this menace, bringing up tanks, self-propelled guns, and the roads over which they moved were jammed with motorized, rocket and machine-gun fire of an Allied air armada which for the past week has been more acutes than all day yesterday.

Allied artillery supported them the Battleship Warspite and the U.S. battleship Texas opened a terrific bombardment of the Cherbourg peninsula.

Allied Achievement in Italy

No one thought that Hitler and his Germans left Rome without damaging it in revenge because they had any compunction against destroying it. They left it as it was after their occupation because they were in too much of a hurry to escape. The immensity of the debacle or disaster which has come or is coming upon the Germans north of Rome is indicated by the extent to which their flight has had to be carried them and by the heavy losses and numbers of prisoners which have been taken by the Allies.

The Battle of Italy and the swift course of the war in the past few weeks in that theatre show most clearly the abundant strength of the United Nations. The pursuit of the enemy goes on apace and the air is full of the Allies flying with the upper hand and the enemy is in headlong flight. The achievement in Italy is amazing.

How far the Germans will retreat before they try to reform their defence lines is difficult to foresee. The enemy losses have been heavy and the Allies will try to increase these greatly with their operations to cut off the Hun forces in Italy.

The words of the German propagandists that Rome did not matter are badly out of focus with the fact. The fall of Rome must be arousing the spirit of defiance in Europe, is encouraging the Allied Nations to intensification of the effort that is to carry on to victory. Mr. Roosevelt has said that the timing of the invasion of Normandy was not linked up with the fall of Rome in the planning. But the fall of Rome and the precipitate dash of the Germans northward before the pursuing United Nations armies have been linked in the mind of the peoples of Europe with the developed Allied strength which is so powerful that two separate events meet and doubly prove that the Allies have the superiority.

It does not appear that Germany looked for the collapse of the Italian campaign before Rome. It is certain that the Germans did not expect the D-Day operations to be centred in Normandy and the Cherbourg Peninsula. Both these developments show the full-fledged power of the Allies, who have revealed especially by the new front in the West that they can choose where to strike and that they are fully prepared with the final stage of the war to push the fight home to Berlin.

The undoing of the Hitler venture in Italy will help greatly the work of the Allies in Northern France by the destruction and defeats inflicted upon the enemy and by the inspiration these joint events are having on the European underground.

Since Dieppe

It is less than two years since Dieppe, but since that memorable morning on the 19th of August 1942 many events have moved. Lessons were learned at Dieppe which have been incorporated in the plans laid down for the Allied offensives which have taken place in Sicily, Italy and now in Normandy as well as in the actions in the Pacific.

The landing on the beaches of Northern France last week was a master blow of strategy. Here the full weight of all branches of Allied power came into play in a perfect unison. Germans used to boast of their blitzkrieg in the early days of the war but their blitz had at no time anything of the power of the smashing blows that the Allies after four years have been able to assemble and to deliver against the enemy.

With all the guesswork the Germans had indulged in with regard to the invasion British, American and Canadian plans succeeded in surprising the enemy and in utterly outmatching him in the completeness of detail in every phase of the invasion.

His Love for the Navy

Prime Minister Churchill is said to have been dissuaded only after a great deal of difficulty from going with the British Navy as it went into action against the Germans in Normandy. His presence on ship would have been reason for pride but also for concern as to his safety. Mr. Churchill is the very spirit of British steadfastness and courage and as a former soldier and war correspondent and from his long association with the British Navy, he has a great love for that service.

Mr. Churchill has the courage to take his place in the theatre of danger. That is what makes his leadership so great, he is the very spirit of freedom and he has the courage of his convictions and his democratic faith.

It is not to be wondered at that the nation which has been so well led during the war finds that leader also one who would gladly go into the front of danger. But to allow him to go into such a position would cause too much anxiety for his safety.

One remembers the account of Mr. Churchill flying the plane part of the way back to Britain after attending a conference in Washington with Mr. Roosevelt. That is right in line with his wish in this instance and desire to be with the fighting men and to see the course of battle.

On Finnish Front

Finland which has played into the hands of Germany is about to reap a harvest of defeat and loss as Russians start their offensive on the Karelian front. Now the Finns have a chance to bow out of the war but she refused and now she is likely to find that the unnecessary war she has been carrying on and has decided still to keep on will prove disastrous for her.

Finland by reason of her geographical position meant a great deal to the Germans for she protected the German flank. Now Russians are on the march against the Finnish lines with the result that can be expected—Finnish defeat.

Churchill Talks About Roosevelt

(New York Post)

When a group of American publishers, including Frank Gannett, visited Winston Churchill, the Prime Minister told them—according to the best recollection of one who was present—the following: "Gentlemen, I am familiar with your individual party politics. I have endless faith in America and in whatever government might be elected. That I would be beneath contempt, and without even an inkling of the meaning of gratitude, should I fail to express to you, and to all other men, American or British, with whom I come in contact, my admiration, friendship and undying affection for Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"His foresighted vision in a blind world," Churchill continued, "his patience and his courage, his chivalry and his ability, have endeared him forever to the people of these lands. I do not hesitate to say that when this war is over, and no matter what comes the internal politics of my country or yours will take, there will be erected on the highest spot of the British Isles a monument to the man who led his people to stand with freedom in its darkest moment. That monument will be to Franklin D. Roosevelt, a great president, whom I only wish, gentlemen, I could call my president."

British Output of Warships

The output of warships in Britain up to the end of January 1944 was only very slightly less than that of the last war, and the ships are of much great complexity today. There is a tremendous increase in detail of equipment.

During 1943, 308,000 lectures on subjects of topical and educational interest were delivered to members of Britain's forces.

GOING ON FOUR

This progress called growth is both rapid and slow.
To youngsters it takes "such a long time" to grow.
To oldsters, like me, who must now back-ward look,
There is only the shock of the short time it took.
Now she is boasting achievement once more:
Ellen Elizabeth's going on four!

Seems only yesterday, let it be said,
Mother and I were both called out of bed;
Informed it we hurried to dress and to drive
On time at the hospital we might arrive.
We did so! For hours I was pacing the floor!
Now Ellen Elizabeth's going on four!

Seems only yesterday, bottle in crib,
I laughed as she dribbled all over her bib.
Seems only yesterday, high in my arms,
I romped with that cute little bundle of charms.
Now she is proudly announcing Time's score:
"I'm free and a half, but I'm going on four."

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

When Summer's heat made it natural for the children to go wading in the nearest stream, the pioneer's help—most called them females in those days—became pleasures and said them they'd have to help with the blankets from the beds, the female contingent carried them forth into the sunshine. Then, rounding up all available tubs, and filling them with warm water, the women proceeded to refresh the wool coverings with the aid of a wooden scrub and much energy. Many settler folk took off shoes and stockings and stamped on the wet blankets in the tubs, finding that this method was the most efficacious in removing dirt.

Wool for the blankets of the home was usually sheared from the pioneer's own sheep. After the shearing, and again in the fall, the insares mother's during the Winter, the farmed dipped his sheep. The benefits of this operation, in promoting the general health of the flock and the fleece of wool, were acknowledged by all sheep owners. The deep sense of its profitableness was indicated by the entries in the records of the Wool Exchanges, which showed that dipped wool fetched better prices.

The expression "Don't be a wet-blanket" may have arisen from the fact that a wet blanket is formerly used to intercept vision on a stage, this was in Shakespeare's day, before the regulation stage curtains came into being.

Two More Lincolns

(Winnipeg Tribune)

—What page of the Government Book do you refer to?

On the editorial page of the local Liberal organ, Wednesday, May 31 appeared a highly satirical piece having huge fun with the Windsor Star's notion that John Winston looks like Abraham Lincoln.

"If Mr. Mackenzie's political fortune is going to depend upon establishing a resemblance to his fair-haired that of President Abraham Lincoln, Mr. Bracken is politically whistling a dead duck. The John 'Abe Lincoln' Bracken movement might fall as well cash in its chips and fervently hope nothing more will be heard in the matter."

In the same paper, same day, on Page 3, appears a laudatory article on Richard Motherwell, new head of the Young Liberal Federation. Here is the first sentence of it:

"A dark-haired, bespectacled Saskatchewan farmer, with inherited political delegate with his resemblance to Abraham Lincoln."

You see, Mr. Motherwell is a Liberal and in the eyes of our contemporary that makes all the difference.

THE CABOT FAMILY

Henry Cabot Lodge, who resigned a seat in the senate to serve in the army is descended from the Cabots of Massachusetts, as his middle name suggests.

Many people naturally suppose that the Massachusetts Cabots are descendants of the famous John Cabot, early navigator and discoverer.

The Cabot family in America was founded by John Cabot, who came to Salem, Massachusetts, about 1700.

He was a native of the Island of Jersey, one of the Channel Islands, where his ancestors had lived for at least several generations.

Notwithstanding numerous assertions to the contrary, no relationship has been established between this John Cabot and John Cabot of Venice, the navigator who explored the northeastern coast of America in the time of Columbus.

The Italian name of John Cabot or Venice was Giovanni Caboto. He appears to have lived for many years in England. With the exception of this one family, no early records of Cabots in Italy have been found.

It is possible that the navigator or one of his immediate ancestors went to Italy from France or the Channel Islands, and that he and the American Cabots are of some common ancestor on the Island of Jersey.

The navigator had three sons, Sebastian, Sebastian and Santius, Sebastian, the best known to the readers of American history and exploration, had no sons, although he had at least two daughters.

It is not known whether his brothers left any descendants.

The lineage pretensions of the Massachusetts Cabots are satirized in the following popular quatrain:

Here's to good old Boston,
The home of the bean and the cod,
Where Cabots speak only to Lowells,
And Lowells speak only to God.

This jingle is a slightly modified version of a toast written by Dr. John C. Bossidy, of Boston, who recited it in 1906 at a Holy Cross College alumni dinner.

Kingston Presbyterial of Presbyterian Church Holds Rally at Madoc

This rally opened with the hymn "O Send Thy Light Forth and Thy Truth" and the key verse was Psalm 43:3. The devotional period was conducted by the Belleville auxiliary with Mrs. (Rev.) Graham, formerly of Sk. Thomas, Ont., as the guest speaker. She chose James 5:17 as a basis for bringing out the characteristic traits in the prayer of Elijah. She spoke of prayer without how the people of today share his weaknesses but do not share his power. Elijah was a man like to his life which we omit. God was the greatest reality in his life. God's will was the controlling purpose in his life and that God's glory was the ruling passion of his life. Fervent prayer by the speaker closed this period.

The address of welcome was finally given by Mrs. Alfred Macdonell to which the president, Mrs. W. Shaw, graciously responded. The Centennial Educational period was conducted by Mrs. K. R. Christie, Presbyterial Secretary and Corresponding Secretary. Secretary-treasurer's report showed that presidents had encouraging reports.

A flannelgraph demonstration by Mrs. John Macdonell of Madoc, which was enjoyed by all followed.

Mrs. Schroeder rounded out the afternoon's session with a series of questions and calling attention to the greatly increased need in Christian Education for foreign fields. With the aid of new methods, it is possible for the illiterate to learn to read in two weeks' time.

A communion service, conducted by the visitors by the Madoc auxiliary and a happy social time was enjoyed on the church grounds during the noon hour.

At interval during a sub-session a business meeting was held when two motions were passed to bring to the fall fall executive meeting.

The afternoon session opened with hymn 262 and the devotional period was conducted by the Belleville auxiliary. The call to worship was read and prayer offered.

Presbyterial greetings were brought by Rev. E. Lazem in the absence of the moderator.

Mrs. Parsons of Belleville gave a report of the annual Provincial meeting recently held in Hamilton.

A beautiful vocal duet entitled "How Great Thou Art" and "Songs of Sounds" was given by Mrs. G. Farley and Mrs. Ross Macdonell, accompanied by Mr. Stanley Hawthorne, who furnished the interlude for the duet.

Mrs. Schroeder brought warmest greetings from Presbyterial, the subject of her address was Opportunities in Christian Missionary Society." She informed her hearers of the Society's up-to-date program and of the needs of the present-day needs. It is gratifying to know that W. M. S. is keeping step with today.

Allied Women Will Follow The Invaders

By ADELAIDE KERR

A picked army of women from 34 United Nations is being trained in England for one of the greatest humanitarian jobs ever tackled—healing millions of wounded hearts and minds of war.

Some hundred women will move onto the continent on the heels of Eisenhower's invading armies. Their job will be to fight every kind of scare, from lack of food and clothing to fear of the conquerors.

Fourteen hundred already have finished a tough course, based on England's war experience in feeding, clothing, housing, health, emergency relief, civil defence, employment, education and rehabilitation. They have had practical training in emergency kitchens, cleaning stations, maternity clinics, hospitals, clinics, clubs, nurseries and canteens. Everything they learn will be directly applicable to the work they will be virtually as important to the history of civilization as that of the fighting men.

Fighters in China

Chinese women, traditionally more secluded than their western sisters, are filling leading jobs in China's war effort. Madame Chiang Kai-shek is the women of the western hemisphere's shining example. Such an army, where several generals accepted them as volunteers. They were given the rank of private and they say as men — a private gets approximately $1 a month. Some of these women who range from girls in their teens to middle-aged women, have seen some hot fighting, but the majority are behind the lines, such as nursing and stretcher bearing.

A number of Canadian nurses are assigned to "hospitals on muleback" operating behind the lines and move from one camouflaged pasture hut to another as fighting progresses. They do a tremendous job from one battle scene to another and they often have to work under cover for hours on end. These units are under the supervision of the Chinese Red Cross Medical Relief Corps.

Serve In Russia

Russian women surgeons have been serving with the guerrillas in the toughest fighting of the Russian campaign. They have been with the troops, letting up their hospitals in trenches or forests. Sometimes they work under very primitive conditions. They operate with just boiled disinfected in the flames of a bonfire and sew up wounds in the light of a flickering candle. Their work has saved thousands of lives.

French women are also doing a dangerous job in caring for the wounded. About 30 of them are attached to French troops at the Italian front, serving as nurses.

The Experts Say

(By The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, June 13 (CP)—Canadian experts say a new source of thiamine B vitamine, will help keep Canadians fit in the days of food and the dietary nutritional value is higher than ever before, says Dr. L. B. Pett, of nutrition, Ottawa.

"We Canadians would be foolish indeed not to make as good a selection of food as the times of food value for health, as we possibly can."

Food waste in the home is estimated by experts at 15 per cent, and they say some of it is inevitable but much of the 15 per cent goes into the garbage in the form of thick peelings from fruit and vegetables, crust cut from bread sandwiches or the last dry heel of the loaf of bread.

Here are some of the suggestions for conserving food:

Watch markets and use foods in season when they are plentiful and reasonably priced.

Store properly. Some foods do not need refrigeration; others do.

Measure carefully and cook properly. Reliable receipts and thereby eliminate possible failures. Check refrigerators every day and use left-overs. Don't keep individual servings too large. Allow for second helpings.

More cups for new homes. Increased supplies of cups are anticipated for Canadian consumers, up on large orders for the munitions department, but householders having to take your beverage from bouillion cups become more remote.

Vacation your living quarters! Rents are rising and you've heard say, that tenants who have been living in the same flat for the next can leave any time before their lease is terminated, or that they give their landlords the notice required by the laws of the province in which they live.

For example, monthly tenants who find a new home in June and give their landlords notice before July 1 then may leave at the end of July.

The greens have "it," and so will you as the days go. Rich in desirable food elements are lettuce, watercress, endive, dandelion greens, and turnip and beet greens. They are delectable when young, tender and crisp.

Kitchen Life Hints—Start cooking frozen foods while they are still frozen; don't thaw them first. Wash leafy vegetables quickly. Don't soak them. Cook just enough foods only, because they are already cooked, and be careful not to use all the liquid or be like potatoes in their skins. Nature's jacket holds in the good. Cook vegetables in shallow water —but no more than enough to prevent burning.

WALLBRIDGE

W.A. and W.M.S. Hold Monthly Meeting

Wallbridge — The June W.A. meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Cecil Sine with a good attendance. The president, Mrs. Josephine, was in charge. A patriotic duet was given by Jane Ketcheson and Ann Sine and a short song service of patriotic songs. The treasurer's report showed a substantial balance on hand. A splendid report of the W.A. Convention which was held in Belleville, May 30th, was given by the delegate, Mrs. Shorey. The Intermediate Girls were asked to see that flowers would be brought to the church for Sunday services. Mrs. E. Lane kindly offered her home for the next meeting.

W. M. S.

Mrs. Radgley, president of the W.M.S. then took charge of the meeting. It was suggested that the donations for the bale be taken by Mrs. Holt's and that the bale be sent away the latter part of this month. New York Yankees Hit the Skids Dropping Two to Boston Red Sox; Cards Gain Two Games in National

St. Louis Sets New Record for Double-Killings in Twin Bill

BROWNS ON TOP

New York Yankees dropped two games to Boston Red Sox yesterday, 3-1 and 4-1, extending their string of defeats to 11 of their last 13 starts. However, last year, when things looked blackest, they won 8 in a row and followed through by winning the flag and the world series.

Tex Hughson and Clem Hausmann pitched the Red Sox to their double triumph. Hughson's effort was a masterpiece. In addition, three-hit masterpiece. In addition, he drove in the winning run in the first game by getting an infield hit with the bases loaded.

Meanwhile, St. Louis Cardinals, National League champs, gained two games over their nearest competitors by whipping Cincinnati twice, 3-1 and 4-1, while Brooklyn split a shut out Pittsburgh twice, 5-0 and 1-0.

The Cards set a league record for double-plays in a double-header by making seven. Big slugging — four in the opener and five in the nightcap — in backing up six-hit pitching by both George Dockney and Harry Gumbert.

Paul Erickson turned in a two-hitter and Bob Chipman a five-hitter for the Cubs as they blanked the Pirates.

Chicago White Sox beat Dizzy Trout, 4-3, for their eighth straight triumph in the first game of a twin bill with Detroit, but their hot streak snapped in the afternoon when Detroit clouted Bill Dietrich and Rudy York's ninth-inning single.

A grand slam smash with two more runs by pinch hitter Gene Moore gave the first place St. Louis Browns a split with Cleveland. The Indians easily took the opener, 13-1 behind Mel Harder, but Moore's round-tripper in the nightcap gave Bob Muncrief and the Browns a 4-3 triumph.

New York Giants swept a doubleheader from the Phillies, both by scores of 6-3 with the second game going 12 innings, before Phil Weintraub singled Mel Ott home with the winning tally. Nap Reyes' 9th-inning single won the opener.

Reno Bertoia and Lonnan Harrist aided by Joe Berry's relief pitching twirled Philadelphia Athletics to a double victory over Washington, 6-1 and 6-5.

IN FOR TROUBLE

Claiming he is feared of no man, John Katan, the pugnacious Palermo Panther, didn't hesitate long in tossing his meat Ralph Garibaldi, one of the fighting Garibaldis from Mt. Louis, when refereed by Promoter Tumey, Katan takes on Garibaldi as the main attraction of a three-bout all-star wrestling card at the Rome Arena Wednesday night. "Garibaldi says he has chased Wild Bill Longson across the continent. That's fine with me, after Wednesday night I'll be the man Tumey needs to meet Longson, not Garibaldi. Beating the Italian-American will be just my style," assured Katan. However, Garibaldi has different ideas. "I hear this Ukrainian thinks he's tough. Beating punks like that is just my chib," Garibaldi told Promoter Tumey as he worked out at Crystal Beach over the week end. Two high class preliminaries precede this feature attraction.

vided their twin bill. The Dodgers won the opener 5-4 in 10 innings on Howie Schultz' triple and in contention. The Braves' six-game losing streak by taking the nightcap, 1-0.

Only two games were played in the major league circuit, both in the senior circuit. St. Louis powered Cincinnati 10-0 behind Dizzy Dean's five-hitter and Pittsburgh downed Chicago 9-4.

New York, June 13 (AP) — Henry Armstrong and Al Davis, who likely will draw a lot of customers into Madison Square Garden Thursday night, hold a notable collection of boxing records . . . and if they perform at all like they did on their last Garden appearance, they'll establish another — one that the Garden's air conditioning system won't eliminate . . . Byrd Leads Field of 129 Golfers To Victory in $17,500 Tourney

By The Canadian Press

With a seven-under par 274 for 72 holes, Sam Byrd, Detroit pro and former outfielder of the New York Yankees, had little difficulty yesterday in adding a field of 129 to his victory in the $17,500 invitation golf tournament at Philadelphia with a one-stroke lead at the finishing holes. Byrd took down $4,700 in bonds as first prize while Craig Wood of Mamaroneck, N. Y., carded a 281 total to win second place and a reward of $3,325. Sgt. E. J. Harrison of Little Rock, Ark., finished third with 282 for 11,250 and Bob Hamilton of Evansville, Ind., was fourth with 285. Harold (Jug) McSpaden and Byron Nelson, pre-tourney favorites, were fifth and sixth.

For the first time in New York's turn history, a triple dead heat was called in a race Saturday when favored Bonnet, Brownie and Wallabout finished abreast in the $10,000 seven-furlong carter handicap at Aqueduct in the presence of a crowd of 32,386. A field of nine started and the co-winners each earned $2,220. The last triple dead heat was registered at Detroit Oct. 6, 1942.

Bisbee- Paul Dean, brother of "Dizzy," returned to the active list of the St. Louis Browns and the latter asked for waivers on him with a view to sending him to Little Rock of the Southern Association for a test.

Philadelphia Nationals yesterday announced the purchases for $7,500 of catcher Johnny Peacock from the Boston Red Sox while Ozonie Mack of the Philadelphia Athletics was sold outright to outfielder Harold Epps from the St. Louis Browns.

FOSTER WARD KIDS WIN BALL GAME

Defeat St. Mike's Junior Ballsters by 11 to 0 Count

Bob Blaind's Foster Ward kids made it two straight over Allan Kelleher's St. Mikes junior ballsters in a friendly baseball game played at the Alemite Field over the week-end the score being something like 11 to 0.

Bob Bunton went the route for the Foster Ward kids one game while the St. Mikes pitching chores were taken care of by Jos Bonnette and Al Cassie. News that Belleville boys are interested in playing baseball and have organized two teams in the community has travelled with rapidity throughout the district. Already junior baseball teams in Trenton and Tweed have challenged the local teams to exhibition games. Next weekend the Belleville boys journey to Trenton for an exhibition game while the following weekend the Tweed junior baseball team comes to Belleville for a friendly tussle.

The Mike kids garnered in four of their nine runs in the first inning against Bunton. Both pitchers and were leading five to four going into the fifth. However, the "old gang" kids rallied in the last two frames of a seven inning tussle to score eight runs.

The line ups:

Foster Ward: M. Bush, Goulet, Strachane, R. Bush, Rewson, Bunton, Reeves, Lowe and Blaind.

St. Mikes: Donovan, Moher, D. Adams, Kelleher, Boyle, Dell, Hogan, Adams, Hunter, and Fitzpatrick.

British Informed On State of Coast By French Patriots

By NOEL MONKS
Distributed by the Canadian Press

With the British Forces Before Caen, June 9 — (Delayed)—(CP)— When German Field Marshal Erwin Rommel inspected this section of the French coast two months ago he remarked, "This is just the ideal spot for an Allied landing. It must be strongly fortified immediately."

Every day hooded Frenchmen and women was conscripted into making beach fortifications and building huge obstacles to impede landing fields.

Fortunately Rommel's defence plan was only half carried out when we landed.

The people of the village near Caen who told me this today added with a twinkle in his eye, "Some of us are in that half the British knew the state of the defences."

Canadian Sport Snapshots

Toronto, June 13 —(CP)— The horse Canadian has led a blameless life for five years after returning from his earlier mean but unhappy career as a cripple, the old days threw him off in Toronto's Dufferin Park last week.

The Knight, owned by W. T. Northgrave, was a mighty fine youth, and in the meanest of mean actors. The beatings he got when his trainers were trying to gentle him only made him worse— until his present carter took over and tamed him with kindness. For five years he was a model of propriety and a steady if stout-hearted racer.

But when they tried to start a race at the seven-furlong post at Dufferin, Canadian Knight acted like a crazed, and then set off right hastily through a gate that was carelessly left open. He was eventually pulled up and brought back, but in disgrace.

Nearest for his fall from grace was found to find. The stable where he was quartered in his early days and took so many beatings was just behind the seven-furlong post. And that one fact put fear into the Knight's head again, and momentarily overnight took the comedown after all these years.

Say Uncle?

Uncle and nephew don't often meet in an athletic event, and it's not often they are evenly matched.

But that's what happened at Cincinnati's old park during a track meet. Gerald Gillett wound up in deadlock with nephew Gilbert Billett after a stirring contest in the sprints and jumps. Nephew and uncle were identically as 12 years old, and they met in a school track meet.

Monday Meanderings:

Day and Wentworth were familiar names along the N. H. L. rinks a few years back, and they may be again in the future. Kerry Day, nine-year-old son of Toronto Maple Leafs Coach Hap Day, won first prize at a Christmas party at Braves who won the Islington School League in public skating last year. Marvin Wentworth, 10, played defence for Bishkoke Pee Wee in the city's league. Cy Wentworth of Montreal Maroons, taught him . . .

They met at three dead heats in one day at Mount Royal race track in Montreal. This is believed a record of some sort or other . . . Herb (Winnipeg Tribune) Manning has a good chance of being a boxing a lightner are much better than they look like one. Gail Smith mightn't have been the best rider in the world, Herb continues, but certainly travelled in the highest of high styles and associations, only with nothing horsemen. End of the success story came when Smith rode bounding home to a victory over the favored Penalve in the Belmont stakes.

Casual Comment

By K.J.C.

Unprintable

A clergyman was about to start a lecture tour, and on being interviewed by a reporter, he asked him particularly not to publish anything of the forthcoming lecture as it might spoil the attendance at other meetings he was holding in the district.

The following morning he was horrified to read in the local newspaper: "Our versatile vicar delivered a delightful lecture in the church hall. He told some excellent stories, but unfortunately they cannot be printed."

(Kefoje affiliation.)

The executive of the Belleville Ladies' Softball League met over the weekend, and voted to refrain from affiliating with the Ontario Provincial Ladies' Softball Union. Secretary Eddie Schreiber had been in consultation with Miss Gladys Mortimer, of Peterborough and secretary of the O.P.L.S.U., who are anxious to include Belleville in the provincial gala softball picture. After studying the situation from all angles the team representatives were unable to see any benefit to be derived from organization for the time being at least.

"We're worked four or five years now to attain the successful league we now enjoy. Why move into something we are not certain will be of any benefit to us?" asked Tommy Coldin, coach of the SWACO gals. Bill Blaind of the Reliance was also of the same opinion. The league would have liked to let Miss Mortimer come here only as an experiment, but the stumbling block was thrown down by the team managers. However, plans to bring a Peterborough girls team to Belleville for an exhibition game later in the season are pending. It is summer, the league and fans alike are certain just whether or not the Belleville girls' softball played in Belleville is on a par with other centres or not.

Otherwise in local softball circles the teams have settled down to the surface. There is an open date in the gala schedule on Friday night, an ideal night to play the Combine-Deacon game that was rained out Monday, SWACO and Reliance are dominating the standing with two wins and no loses.

In the men's loop Max People's Marines won two last week to hold C.N.R. by half a game in the league standing as of today. The men's loop sees doubleheaders at the Fair Grounds on Tuesday and nights.

For any who doubt Bill McKechnie has achieved results as a handler of pitchers since taking charge of the Cincinnati Reds in 1938, there is real-evidence to convince them that the Deacon is the Miracle Man of the Mound.

In the six years, starting in 1938 and ending in 1943, a total of 2,402 runs were scored against the Reds in 917 National League games. In that period all eight teams played practically the same number of games, the low being 810 and the high 831. The number of runs scored against the other teams ranged from 2,599 (or 190 more than Reds) were made against the Reds) to 4,621.

John "Fingers" Katan hasn't got too many friends when numbered in the paying public sector, Katan is one of the few wrestlers the promoters love. Why, it's simple — Katan is a ring villain the public hate and the arena crowd always enjoy good crowds when the Palermo Panther is about. Wednesday night will be no exception when Katan meats Ralph Garibaldi at the Rome arena. Garibaldi comes from a family of high-caliber wrestlers and may be just the man to upset Katan's wrestling future.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 402

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Mrs. Jabberpuss can talk your head off in a bridge game. When she gets wound up about her operation, your eardrums get an awful beating. Even if you already knew all about it.

But a good bridge player will not open his yap to tell you something you already know. Every bid he makes tells you something you did not know before.

If he opens his yap with an opening bid, he says he has better than average in everything. If he opens his yap about a suit, he says that suit is (biddable) better than average.

An opening bid of one no-trump shows having five high cards (aces, kings, queens), two sure tricks (ace, K Q, A K-two), and denies having a biddable suit.

An opening bid of one in a suit shows five suit tricks (high cards and short cards), four high cards, two sure tricks, and a suit that is biddable (Q J 3 2, J 5 4 3 2, 7 6 5 4 3 2, or better.)

See the difference? One in a suit guarantees a biddable suit; one no-trump does not. One in a suit shows four high cards among his five tricks; one no-trump guarantees five high cards.

Give yourself a hand like this:

♠ A Q 7 4
♥ A 9 4 3
♦ 8 5
♣ K J 7

Your hand contains a biddable spade suit; two sure tricks (the two aces); four high cards (two aces, a king, a queen); five tricks (four high cards and a short card in diamonds).

Thus, an opening bid with that hand is one spade) in a suit. Why not one no-trump? It does not contain five high cards. And it does contain a biddable suit.

If your club jack was the club queen, you would have five high cards. But don't open with no-trump. You have a biddable suit.

No-trump means not any trump suit.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Woman of the Town"

Dora Hand, the mysterious night-spot entertainer of Dodge City in 1878, when it was known as the toughest town in the Wild West, had a dual personalty tnat baffled "Bat" Masterson the celebrated peace marshal who fell in love with her.

Dora, of a good family, had come to Dodge City from Paris where she had tried unsuccessfully, to carve a niche for herself as an opera singer. Although she seemed at ease and happy in the lurid surroundings of the saloon where she danced and sang nightly, Dora also was quite at home in church on Sundays, when she sang in the choir, much to the distress of the conventional townswomen. She also went around the town, aiding the poor and sick, and was instrumetnal in building the first hospital in this town, noted for its gun battles.

Her tragic death by a bullet changed the entire course of "Bat" Masterson's future life, as he promised Dora on her deathbed that he would renounce his job as marshal and return to the career of a newspaperman, which was his earliest ambition.

A film picturization of Dora Hand, played by Claire Trevor, can be seen in the historical romance produced by Harry Sherman, "The Woman of the Town," now playing at the McCarthy theatre through United Artists release

"So's Your Uncle."

After several weeks as a jeweled and perfumed society girl in one picture Universal's golden haired Elyse Knox had to start living the way the other half lives.

In "So's Your Uncle" which opened Saturday at the McCarthy Theatre, Miss Knox is cast as the spoiled debutante-niece of socially prominent Billie Burke, Elyse wears mink, rides in town cars, drinks champagne, lolls in bed in her Fifth Avenue apartment, and gazes at life through a lorgnette.

But in her next picture, everything will be different for Elyse.

She chauffurs a group of boisterous sailors about Manhattan, changes tires, smudges herself with grease, learns a bit of seagoing jargon besides the Manhattan "dese, dem dose" and eats in a beanery.

The latest edition of Universal news and an all color cartoon round out a most enjoyable program.

AT THE CAPITOL

"Happy Land"

Sunday midnight, 20th. Century-Fox's great and heart-warming picturization of MacKinlay Kantor's "Happy Land" came to the screen of the Capitol Theatre and brought with it a stirring film experience you'll cherish for all the days of your years.

For this inspired filming of MacKinlay Kantor's best-loved, best-seller, which features Don Ameche, Frances Dee, Harry Carey and Ann Rutherford, is the story of the greatness of an every-day man and woman who found themselves only after they thought they had lost everything .. of all the laughter and tears and courage of an American boy and girl—rolled into one great human story as gallant as America's own dauntless heart.

As such, this triumph of hearts too strong to break, of courage too valiant to shatter, and of love too powerful to be conquered is as glorious a story as any victory on the battlefield. "Happy Land" is indeed a picture that mists the eyes, arouses your laughter and warms your heart with the joys and dreams of triumphs of people you'll find a rare delight to know.

"Queen of Broadway"

In the title role of "Queen of Broadway," the P.R.C. drama opened Sunday midnight at the Capitol Theatre, Rochelle Hudson plays the unusual role of a betting commissioner. This beautiful actress manages to appear very natural as a sophisticated Broadway character who does business with a motley gang of sporting and gambling men.

Buster Crabbe plays opposite Miss Hudson, as the owner of a professional football team who is piqued when the sports expert puts his team's chances in a coming game a bad second. The play is anything but sophisticated, however, as it concerns itself principally with the adoption of a little orphan boy by the actress, and her troubles with John Law when she tries to adopt the youngster.

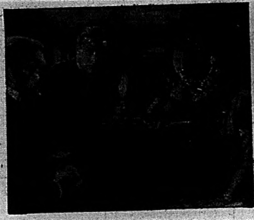
The Canadian Universal News completes the big program.

AT THE BELLE

"The Uninvited"

From high school student to movie queen in less than a year—that's the remarkable story of eighteen-year-old Gail Russell who, until a short time ago, was studying commercial art at Santa Monica High! So outstanding is her performance in Paramount's "The Uninvited" which is now on the Belle Theatre screen that the studio big wigs are now grooming her for stardom in a big way.

Don't think Gail hasn't been affected by her sudden rise to success! After discovering that she had been chosen for the coveted role of Stella Meredith in the film and was to play in the company of such stars as Ray Milland, Ruth Hussey, Donald Grisp and Cornelia Otis Skinner, Gail went into a complete mental funk.



During the first few weeks on the set, the young starlet trembled in agony before every scene and cried afterward in the privacy of her dressing room. Her terror at times equalled the fright she was called upon to assume in the playing of her role as the fear-stricken spirit of her dead mother.

Exercise seemed the only answer in combatting this violent case of jitters and Gail spent every spare minute away from the studio in almost violent physical exertion. She rode horseback, went roller skating, took strenuous hikes until ready to drop from exhaustion.

This course of action apparently turnd the trick for she regained her composure and was no longer afraid. To Gail all this was a new and terrifying experience. But the top-notch actors in the profession know that because of this experience she will attain her goal—for stage-fright at the beginning is almost invariably the "measles" of a coming star.

The Canadian News of The Day, a clever colorfun cartoon and an entertaining musical film precede the feature offering.

Don Jail Guard Slain, Two Men Held for Murder

Toronto, June 12 — (CP) — T. M. Gourley, Ontario Inspector of Prisons today began a thorough investigation of the slaying of Robert Henry Canning, 49-year-old jail guard at Toronto's Don jail Saturday night.

Charged with the murder are Allan M. Baldwin, 32, and William Joseph O'Sullivan, 34.

Baldwin, who escaped from the jail after the slaying, was captured by a posse of more than 200 police last night hiding under a bridge over the Humber river just outside the western city limits, but O'Sullivan was arrested in the jail shortly after the discovery of Canning's body.

O'Sullivan, who was convicted to four years in penitentiary on a charge of armed robbery, was being held in Don jail pending his transfer to Kingston penitentiary. He will appear in court today and is expected to be remanded a week.

Baldwin, sentenced to 15 years in penitentiary for his part in the $34,000-robbery of the Royal Bank of Canada branch at Wheatley, Ont. last September and an additional 4 years for receiving stolen goods, was taken to hospital after his arrest for treatment to a broken right forearm suffered in his escape from the jail.

The police magistrate is expected to go to the hospital this morning, read the charge to Baldwin and also remand him for a week.

Arrested an hour after the capture of Baldwin, were Harry Hedderson, 34, and Steve Barry, 26, on charges of aiding a prisoner to escape. They were taken into custody after a struggle with police. Arrested with them was Vernon Lacroix, who is charged with escaping from the Galt jail in 1940.

Canning, a veteran of the First Great War, had just been discharged from the Army last March and taken on the staff of Don jail in April. He has two sons in the armed forces. He was killed about 10:30 p. m. while making his rounds in the jail hospital.

Police said he was repeatedly struck over the head with a metal pipe and then strangled.

The attack took place in view of seven other inmates of the hospital, who, police said, were threatened with a long knife by Baldwin and ordered to lie on their beds.

Baldwin escaped by sawing through an iron window bar and lowering himself down knotted sheets. The knots broke, however, when he was 20 feet from the ground and he fell to the pavement.

He was being held in the jail because of an attempted prison break from Chatham county jail, in which he and four other men were being held pending trial on charges of holding up the Wheatley bank.

TO HOLD REFERENDUM

Canberra, June 12 — (CP Cable) —Acting Prime Minister Francis Forde announced last night in a broadcast that a referendum would be held Aug. 19 to decide whether the Commonwealth government should be given additional powers for five years after the war to carry out post-war reconstruction plans.

'Atlantic Wall' Tough to Crack

By EDWARD V. ROBERTS
Distributed by The Canadian Press

Allied Advanced Command Post in France, June 12 — The initial success of the Allied landing operations in France represents a penetration by ingenuity and "guts" of one of the most remarkable fortifications of all time.

This is the view of military experts here who ridicule reports that the west wall turned out to be a myth. They said it was in reality steel-reinforced concrete, with mines interlocking flooded areas and every type of land and sea blockade conceivable to the modern military mind.

I am informed that there was not a single point on any of the landing beaches that was not originally commanded by at least one group of machine guns and which, under the German "master plan," could also be blasted by either mobile guns or concealed artillery which was protected from air bombardment by reinforced concrete casements as thick as a house.

The fact we cracked the west wall at all was due entirely to the smashing, concentrated air and sea bombardment that preceded D-day and to the sheer guts of the men who went ashore in a pile-driving frontal assault.

BERLIN IS GIVEN

German Air Force Responding

The German air force was responding with increasing strength. About 100 enemy planes were over the battle area last night and American fighter-bomber pilots returning from an early morning foray reported opposition "the roughest yet."

U.S. Bombers Hit Rails, Bridges

American light bombers hit railroad and highway bridge targets at Aunay Sur Odon, southwest of Caen, La Haye Du Puits, west of Carentan, and Conde Sur Noireau, south of Caen, without loss, and panicked concentrations of troops at Falaise, southeast of Caen, flying so low that a sergeant gunner reported, "you could pick out German lieutenants from sergeants and shoot the lieutenants."

Earlier, railroad yards, German road convoys and a seaplane base near Caudebec were attacked by RAF mediums.

Then a force of about 1,000 heavy bombers with swarming hundreds of escorting fighters swept in upon some of the airbases into which the Germans belatedly were shuttling part of their lean air force.

The heavies bombed the fields at Lille-Nord, Montdidier, Evreux-Fauville, Dreux, Vitry-en-Artois and Beauvais-Tille, while part of the Armada concentrated on bridges and the escorting fighters strafed small targets.

For some hours after dawn the noise of aircraft was heard over the English south coast as planes headed out to give direct support to Allied troops on the Normandy battlefront. The formation of heavy bombers winged its way over London.

At 9 a.m. (3 a.m. E.D.T.) the Paris radio left the air in the middle of its news broadcast, indicating that area again was under attack.

The big Thunderbirds of the RAF and RCAF seventh straight night of invasion-supporting raids, ranged over France last night all the way from the Paris area to the west coast port of Nantes.

They bombed the rail junctions at Evreux, Nantes, Tours and Massy-Palaiseu. Nantes and Tours, respectively 225 and 130 miles southwest of Paris, are junctions through which Field Marshal Rommel's embattled forces might receive reinforcements from the German army group in the south of France. The Evreux and Massy-Palaiseau junctions are potential channels for German reinforcements to the area of heavy fighting around Caen. Evreux is 70 miles east of Caen.

7,000 Planes Out Sunday

The blow against Berlin was delivered by twin-engined Mosquitos which pounded the German capital with 4,000 pound bombs.

Nearly 7,000 Allied planes, flying in support of the Normandy offensive yesterday, gave the Germans the heaviest series of daylight blows since the invasion began.

A paucity of reports from aerial bases indicated RCAF participation in these Allied operations was not as great as it had been on previous days. Presumably Canadian squadrons were reorganizing after a strenuous week.

A small force of Canadian heavy bombers last night joined the RAF in attacking rail targets. From RCAF operations over the past 24 hours, one heavy bomber and one fighter were missing.

Bombers Hit Balkans

Across Europe, U.S. heavy bombers took off from new bases in Russia and bombed Balkan air fields of the Axis yesterday during their return trip to the Italian bases they left June 2.

Both on the outbound trail-blazing shuttle trip to Russia and on the homeward journey the American heavy bombers were personally commanded by Lt.-Gen. Ira C. Eaker, chief of the Allied Mediterranean air force.

"Every inch" of the enemy positions along the 50-mile-long Normandy battle front was declared scourged by yesterday's blows. These attacks, plus flights from Russia, provided the final dramatic touch to a weekend which saw the Allies give these further demonstrations of their mastery of the air over Europe:

1. Allied planes were declared Saturday to be flying from French soil for the first time since 1940. The first planes to take advantage of newly-constructed Allied landing strips on the Cherbourg Peninsula were American C-47 troop carriers, which were used to fly the wounded men back to Britain.

Strafe Major Refinery

2. Squadrons of Italian-based U. S. ships went out on the longest fighter-bomber mission ever flown in the Mediterranean theatre Saturday, and attacked the last major refinery still producing for Germany in Romania's Ploesti oil fields. Leaving the target enveloped in flames, these fast, twin-finned planes strafed locomotives and tank cars on the way home.

3. R.A.F. heavy bombers delivered a huge blow Saturday night against the rail yards at Versailles and Acheres near Paris, the Orlean yards 90 miles from the fighting front in France. Mosquitos hit Berlin both Friday and Saturday nights, serving notice on the German air force that it will have to divide its strength between the fighting zone and the Reich homeland.

A force of 1,000 U.S. heavy bombers spearheaded yesterday's aerial operations in support of the Normandy beachheads. They smashed at nine enemy airfields, eight bridges, a German army headquarters and other objectives in an area stretching from the beachhead to Paris and as far north as the Pas De Calais area.

Allies Lose 26 Planes

Allied aerial losses over France yesterday were 26 planes, most of them victims of German anti-aircraft guns. In all operations, a total of nine German planes were reported knocked down — five of them by the 8th. Air Force.

The R.A.F. lost 20 heavy bombers during the attacks Saturday night on French rail yards, while six German night fighters were brought down. The Mosquito raid on Berlin Saturday night and the simultaneous mine-laying operations in enemy waters cost two planes. Patrolling Allied fighters meanwhile shot down 10 Junkers 88s, of which nine were blasted over the battle area and one over the ocean.

NEW FIGHTER PLANE

London, June 12 — (CP) — The Tempest, Britain's newest single-seater fighter plane, is taking part in the invasion of Europe, it was learned yesterday. Few details of the planes have been released although it is known to have phenomenal speed and a highly super-charged engine which enables it to fight at great heights.

HUGE GLIDERS USED

London, June 12 — (CP)—Britain disclosed last night that a "secret weapon" used in the Normandy landing was a huge new glider called the Hamilcar, with a wingspread greater than that of a Lancaster four-engine bomber, the Hamilcar must be towed by a heavy bomber, but can land in a small field. It can and did carry a small tank.

He was placed in Bancroft jail overnight and taken to Belleville Friday and lodged in the county jail and will appear in Bancroft police court on June 14th.

Owen and Washington Grant of St. Ola were arrested Wednesday by Provincial Constable Palmateer of Bancfoft and Provincial Officer Hatch of Madoc charged with breaking, entering and theft and other thefts and they were lodged in county jail at Belleville and will appear in the Bancroft police court Wednesday, June 14th.

PERFECT CROSS ON MOON

Vernon, B. C., June 10—(CP)— A perfect cross on the moon was visible here the morning of the invasion. Mrs. Annie Reade said she awoke early and noticed the moon, unusually bright, was encircled with a luminous ring. A cross appeared at its base.

WATCHED FROM DESTROYER

London, June 12 — (CP-Reuters) —Leonard W. Brockington of Winnipeg, former special adviser to Prime Minister King, watched the invasion on D-day from the Canadian destroyer Sioux and last night described it as "the greatest operation I or anyone else will ever see."

"CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT" by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER FOURTEEN

"No," I told her genitively. "Its very long time. Where's Grace? She ran downstairs too quickly."

"But, with your stumbling and bumping, you said," Aunt Millie reminded me.

"That's true. Still—it was more the way you'd run, in the dark, if you weren't familiar with a place," I explained. "Oh, I don't know! I haven't an idea how fast a person can run with an artificial leg."

"Then what did you suck your breath in for?" she asked.

"Gala — going there Thursday night. I bet she went after a book the way I did after the compact I hadn't had."

"Meaning: she went to see Bruce?"

I nodded. "Yes. It may be the explanation to the whole thing. His staying here secretly. She went for a business talk with him. After they both knew each other well. Being relations by adoption, and she's next in line to inherit the estate. Didn't know he was here —when Forrestall knew it."

"Why, certainly. Bright girl!" Aunt Millie applauded. "That's the whole thing. It is established. Bruce came here to talk things over with Gala. Probably didn't want the ugly pile. And didn't want all cliffport butting in on his affairs either. Quite right. Except for his secrecy! From what I've seen of dear Gala, Stella Avery and so on—I can't say I blame him."

"And also another motive for Forrestall's and Roberts' complicity, and—I wonder if he's told her about me?" I ended hesitantly.

"I hardly think so. She'd have shown it, by some look or remark," Aunt Millie ventured.

"I'm not so sure of that, but—let's assume he hasn't. Let's just stick to fact—in the murder?"

"You mean did he commit it?"

"Yes." I nodded.

Aunt Millie shot straight for a moment. "I think he did. I think this is what happened: Bruce is to his room upstairs—where you've seen him. Probably has his own bathroom, and he hears a noise in the library. He goes to investigate and finds Mr. Stoddard there. Just after the stone and the radium map. And he—well—he knocks him down."

"Yes. And knocks too hard," I agreed.

"Right. And when he sees he's killed a man, he gets panicky—he's who wouldn't, in a case like that, very. Sky-y-y! I bet you put a worse spoke in his wheel than you had any idea! I could swear he and his Roberts put their heads together and, if things had gone their way, there wouldn't have been a corpse in the Roberts' house. The dear Professor would have been found somewhere on the cliffs, or in his own house—"

"Then you think Roberts' alibi isn't so watertight as it appears. He was in his room and not—"

"Oh, his alibi's all right, up to a point," Aunt Millie corrected me, with conviction. "He came home from the garage and he did. Right after seven. But—from seven to nine he was in his room. Time to dismantle a room and get a man out of a house, especially with the help of Roberts. Time to get rid of your Nettie and Mac, and Gala's Aggy."

"That's right. Maybe Bruce was taken into Roberts' after the police were gone, from some distant station or airport or bus stop," Aunt Millie said at last. "By now he's probably at the other end of the country from where he'll arrive, in his time—openly and quite—oh, quite! ignorant of the murder in his house."

"I hope you're right," I said fervently.

"Of course I am," she insisted. "It's really a very simple story, complicated by—an accidental killing. Buck up, Kay. It will all come out right for you, if you don't weaken and give yourself away."

I'm afraid the smile with which I answered her optimism was pretty sickly. I quite agreed with her and had no intention of giving myself away. But with so many others bent on doing the same thing — how I could tell when my secret would conflict with theirs — to my disaster?

Somehow it was impossible to talk of anything but the murder during dinner that evening. A question or Dad's about our activities of the day, brought up the subject with the soup, and it stayed with us to dessert and after-dinner coffee.

Perhaps it wasn't ethical or correct, but Aunt Millie and I talked freely of what had happened in Inspector Pettingill's so-called office, relating Mrs. Libby's strange tale of poor Stoddard and his radium map, and Roberts' and only keeping quiet, by tacit agreement, about Forrestall's predicament and Stella Avery's unwarranted meddling.

Both Dad and Allan were definitely excited about the adventurous aspect of the supposed radium robbery.

"If that pitchblende is really so rich in radium that handling it has ruined Roberts' hands, it's the find of the century!" Dad pronounced, and then teased Gala: "If your cousin doesn't return, and it fails to pour [illegible] what you do with it?"

"Yes—what would I do with it?" she echoed with a wry smile. "Can you see me go exploring in the cellar?"

The quick shadow that passed over Dad's face told me what I'd been wondering about: he knew of Gala's terrific accident.

"Why should you do any such thing? Someone else can do the exploring for you," he said casually. "The thing is much too big for an individual to handle anyway. If I were in the lucky bet's shoes, I'd go straight to Washington with it. The government would be about getting the radium out of — what's-its-name? Utah?"

"How do you think Pyrjesco, Stoddard got the idea to take the ray uranium before examining it?" Allan asked when the outcry over the treasure hunt were exhausted.

"That's simple," Aunt Millie told him. "He came here with the knowledge and the idea to exploit it. What else should have drawn him to this out-of-the-way dump? He told Kay he'd been travelling in Central America. That's probably the first she'd heard of Mr. Burton's supposed discovery. And when he didn't succeed in locating the valley himself, he traced his fellow explorer to his home town, figuring he'd win his way in on the ding some way or other. Only — Mr. Burton was dead, by the time he got there."

"And so he settled down to wait for the heir and dance attendance with him," I cobributed.

"Which you couldn't have had any proof," Gala said thoughtfully.

"Not until he saw Roberts' gloves in the brain constantly." Dad agreed. "And he must have known a great deal about it. But somehow he got on to it. That's the interesting point. Stoddard was murdered because he went to harvest his illicit find."

"That doctors' squabble over Roberts' hands, at the Libby party," Aunt Millie reminded us. "Stoddard listened to it, and how! But so did a lot of others. The murderer may have been among them."

"Who were the 'lot of others'?" Dad inquired.

"Every physician in the party," Allan informed him. "And almost everyone not a physician. It was one of those crowds that grow and grow. I know. It was going to be break through it on one side, to reach Kay, while she was trying to fight her way out of it on the other. You certainly have a wide choice, if you're looking for that mob."

All during our talk I kept watching Gala surreptitiously—so-called for a sign of conflicting knowledge. But her lovely face showed nothing but natural interest in an unexpected and, indeed, developments and what, a little later, Dad brought out the chessboard, she abandoned the murder talk without a trace of relief or reluctance, and sat down to it with the wholehearted pleasure of the addict.

Either Gala was much less in the know of what had been going on than we'd thought, or she was a consummate actress. At the moment I couldn't decide which, and soon afterward I stopped wondering about it altogether.

Because, for once, our plans went well. Dad only nodded absently when Allan announced he'd like to take me for a drive, without so much as mentioning work, and we left quickly, joyously, and with Aunt Millie's blessing.

"Don't you worry about me," she told us, with an apologized lamely for leaving her alone. "I have letters to write, for one thing, and for another—I'm all set to do a spot of Lone Wolfing."

When I returned—quite late, I am glad to confess—Gala had gone, and Dad also was no longer in evidence. But Aunt Millie was waiting up for me in the room, flushed and very charming in a fetching night ensemble.

Cutting short my rhapsodies about moonlight on the bay, the combined charms of lilac and jasmine, and Allan—especially Allan—she told me pridefully:

"Nope, Kay! The Forrestalls are going to present their future son-in-law to us tomorrow. His name is Robert Jordan, and he's something or other in a bank. Something lowly, I fear me."

That was news indeed. "So they got the name out of Amy at home! How did you hear the glad tidings?" I asked, getting out of my clothes.

"From Conley Forrestall, the not-so-prodigal father himself," Aunt Millie told me. "It's part of a long story."

"Sounds that way. Go on, don't stop bathing in mid-air!" I urged, half amused and half serious.

"Well, I told you I'd play Lone Wolfe," she began with her cutest smile. "And I did—starting with a walk in the garden among the lilacs and jasmine, which the windows so poetically just now. And naturally, my walk took me near the Burton house—to which the windows were lighted."

"The inspector was there, grilling Roberts?" I asked.

"And Forrestall," Aunt Millie supplemented. "Very decidedly Forrestall! Without kid gloves and all the joy of his voice. It didn't take any eavesdropping to hear him. I sauntr you."

"You followed? I'll run you both in as suspects if you don't come clean!"

"Oh, oh! not so good!" I worried.

"How d'you know?" she challenged, with twinkling eyes. "I'll do it. Perhaps—oh, what's the use! I'm not going to tell you all the fool things that have occurred to me. Anyway, the inspector has found out something — or found something—I don't know which of the two. Because, just as he was launching into a speech about the library and the safe in it, up pops a policeman in front of me and wants to know what but I going there for?"

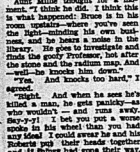
"What did you tell him?"

"Just I'd come to see Inspector Pettingill, naturally," she said, pleased by the touch. "So he did—what I'd been playing for. Took me inside."

"And how did the Inspector act?"

"Delighted. Pleased and smiled and [illegible] compliments, the hypocrite!" Aunt Millie reported, with another sniff. "Then he ushered after your whereabouts, and seemed happy for your—Gala's—young dream. And then he mentioned Robert, that after the past he in the str. Mr. Forrestall had just informed him of his daughter Amy's engagement to the dear fellow. And I said, how wonderful and wasn't it a sudden and wonderful how like to come over and drink a toast to the young couple. But alas, they would not. The Inspector had to go home and Conley Forrestall didn't go home, too. That's when he told me, his wife was planning to present the new son-in-law to the family tomorrow afternoon. And so ends my story. Except—poor Aunt Millie and Gala weren't playing chess when I came in. They were on the terrace, in the moonlight: she with a cost of his around her shoulders, and he with a light chin. "I may be wrong, darling, but —it's beginning to look like the real thing, to me."

"It's looked that way to me from the start," I told her. "And do I hope, I hope, I'm right!"



"Smart talking like that, letting your father properly settled before going off on your own," Aunt Millie grunted. And after a pause she added: "It must be serious. It's very nice, that young Gala's leg. And it doesn't seem to make any difference."

SERVED AT TALAGI AND GUADALCANAL

Master Gunner Lew Diamond With U. S. Marines Since Last May Pays Visit to City

Turned as the "Marine's Marine" in a recent American magazine article, Master Gunner Lewis Diamond, veteran of 27 years' experience in the United States Marine Corps, who served through the Talagi and Guadalcanal in the South West Pacific campaigns, was a visitor in Belleville last week. He and a friend, Irvine Diamond of Toledo, Ohio, were the guests of their brother, Mr. Fred Diamond, 149 Foster Avenue.

A member of the United States Marine Corps since the time of the last war the ideal marine had a difficult time getting posted to active duty when America entered the war following Pearl Harbor. His knowledge of gunnery stood him in good stead however and he was posted to the Pacific where he drew as a master gunner. Weighing 230 pounds and standing 6 feet 2 inches, he lost over 60 pounds on Guadalcanal. He says the food on the American supply lines and his company was excellent in the matter of their own provisions.

Now back in the United States he has written a book on his experiences in the Pacific area in which he said he never got good advice for those on the home front what to do to limit their own ex active service that their morale might be kept high. Master Gunner Diamond's brother in Belleville was his first in over 15 years. He returned to the United States Saturday.

Post-War City, Its Requirements

Montreal, June 12 —(CP)— Harold S. Buttenheim of New York, editor of the American City Magazine, said here today "It would be folly for municipalities to assume that the present conflict necessarily proves that huge expenditures for collecting billions of dollars to reduce their unemployment will not worken from the air."

In an address prepared for delivery at the annual convention of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, Mr. Buttenheim said that although "city building" in the United States may lack the imagination and far-sightedness many an English community possesses, it could be put to use in the immediate post-war city that "might be and must be" as one with:

A safe and healthful water supply; recreational use of water fronts; spatially adequate parkways; planned industrial wastes; streets and highways that are well-designed, well-lighted and well-maintained; ample facilities for air transport; fire and police departments properly trained and equipped; plenty of well-kept parkways, playgrounds and swimming pools; well-planned and well-maintained residential areas; well-planned real-subdividing; a "rational system of taxation; an able and well-financed city planning commission.

Tired German People Taught To Hate American 'Gangsters'

By LARRY ALLEN
(Associated Press War Writer)

New York, June 13 — Intense, all-consuming, day and night hatred of the American people is the order of the day in Nazi Germany.

Hate" press and radio pound it into the war-tired minds of the German people constantly.

Hey Joe" is the battle cry.

Leading the campaign is Robert Ley, chief spokesman for Hitler.

Ley's job as head of the Nazi front is to keep every able hand working for the war machine. He travels all over Germany with his cry of hate and blames it daily in the Berlin newspaper, "Der Angriff."

This is typical.

"Hate! Hate! Hate! Every German must hate the gangsters, the murderers, the assassins who come from the United States of America.

"Its hirelings murder your women and children, they destroy your homes.

"In this war, there can be no compromise with these half-breed American who come across the sea to slay in a war that does not concern them.

Rosenberg Talks Culture

Rumbrage is Reichminister Alfred Rosenberg, who travels from the Baltics to Southern Scandinavia.

Recently, before a capacity audience in Prague, he said:

"There is no culture in the present home of a German peasant when in all of the United States.

"Americans are the bloodiest sinner on earth. Their cultural world has ever known.

"They erect great skyscrapers of steel and concrete; they live on sex, and propagate a cross-section of the world's worst examples of humanity."

Thinks Yanks "Soft"

The average German thinks Americans are "soft" because they have ice cream cones and good food to eat and plenty of it.

German prisoners released from the United States frequently tell their German friends—and they treat them as guests.

"You," a German prison camp official told one, "will be glad when we give you or go without anything. Germany produces soldiers. Here everything works. In America, everyone plays and hopes the war will go on a long time so everyone will make more money.

"To us, this war is life or death.

"To you Americans, it is just another exhibition of gangsterism. And, of course, as long as your principal officials think Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek is a great statesman, they accept it, but, secretly they think you Americans are, like Chiang, gangsters."

Cattle Car, Black Bread

In Germany, a German captain dragged me out of a cattle car in which 1 had been riding for hours with only a slice of black bread and a ring of German sausage to eat. "I am glad my sons come over here to fight!" he stormed. "Why don't they Americans get out of the European Doctrine of America for Americans and stay out of Europe? You Americans want all the oil and gold in the world!"

"You forget," I answered, "that you first declared war on the United States. The United States doesn't want anything in Europe. We fight only to preserve the right to live our lives the way we want to live it."

"Americans are a mean dog!" he screamed. "You will someday live under the Deutsches Reich. We will take, we will have all you Americans think of is money, getting back in your rowens, whisky and

FIRST AIRMAN TO LAND IN FRANCE

First Allied airman to "touch down" on the French invasion coast is believed to have been Flight Lieutenant Harry Dowding, D.F.C., of his 3rd., Sarnia, Ont. An R.C.A.F. Spitfire pilot, P/L Dowding came in with his wheels down to land on an emergency strip established on the beachhead, when German flak punctured his gas tank and the gas began spraying into the cockpit. P/L Dowding, (above) R.C.A.F. O. 6 Bomber Group Public Relations Officer, Alby, "beat up" the landing strip a few times to warn people on it that an aircraft was about to land. Everyone scuttled off but a French farmer, who apparently thought they were taking up their positions for the day's work, and carried on ploughing his field. Dowding climbed into the hayrack, but escaped unhurt to return to England by boat and take off with a fresh Spitfire. — (R.C.A.F. Photo).

SERVED AT TALAGI AND GUADALCANAL

Master Gunner Lew Diamond With U. S. Marines Since Last May Pays Visit to City

Turned as the "Marine's Marine" in a recent American magazine article, Master Gunner Lewis Diamond, veteran of 27 years' experience in the United States Marine Corps, who served through the Talagi and Guadalcanal in the South West Pacific campaigns, was a visitor in Belleville last week. He and a friend, Irvine Diamond of Toledo, Ohio, were the guests of their brother, Mr. Fred Diamond, 149 Foster Avenue.

A member of the United States Marine Corps since the time of the last war the ideal, marine had a difficult time getting posted to active duty when America entered the war following Pearl Harbor. His knowledge of gunnery stood him in good stead however and he was posted to the Pacific where he drew as a master gunner. Weighing 230 pounds and standing 6 feet 2 inches, he lost over 60 pounds on Guadalcanal. He says the food on the American supply lines and his company was excellent in the matter of their own provisions.

Now back in the United States he has written a book on his experiences in the Pacific area in which he said he never got good advice for those on the home front what to do to limit their own ex active service that their morale might be kept high. Master Gunner Diamond's brother in Belleville was his first in over 15 years. He returned to the United States Saturday.

Post-War City, Its Requirements

Montreal, June 12 —(CP)— Harold S. Buttenheim of New York, editor of the American City Magazine, said here today "It would be folly for municipalities to assume that the present conflict necessarily proves that huge expenditures for collecting billions of dollars to reduce their unemployment will not worken from the air."

In an address prepared for delivery at the annual convention of the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, Mr. Buttenheim said that although "city building" in the United States may lack the imagination and far-sightedness many an English community possesses, it could be put to use in the immediate post-war city that "might be and must be" as one with:

A safe and healthful water supply; recreational use of water fronts; spatially adequate parkways; planned industrial wastes; streets and highways that are well-designed, well-lighted and well-maintained; ample facilities for air transport; fire and police departments properly trained and equipped; plenty of well-kept parkways, playgrounds and swimming pools; well-planned and well-maintained residential areas; well-planned real-subdividing; a "rational system of taxation; an able and well-financed city planning commission.

RUSSIAN CRACK FINN DEFENCES ON 25-MI. FRONT

Drive Designed to Knock Finland Out of War and Isolate 100,000 Nazis

TERIJOKI CAPTURED

By HENRY C. CASSIDY
Associated Press Staff Writer

Moscow, June 13—(AP)—Launching a big offensive designed to knock Finland out of the war and isolate approximately 100,000 Nazi troops in that northern part of that country, the Red Army rolled forward along the Karelian Isthmus north of Leningrad today after cracking Finnish defences on a 25-mile front.

A communique last night announced the new drive and Soviet troops already had advanced 13 to 25 miles, and indicated they were moving forward everywhere in high gear.

The offensive evidently was coordinated closely with Allied operations in France, and represented a step in the grand Allied strategy worked out at the Teheran conferences.

Troops under Col.-Gen. Leonid Govorov, who lifted the siege of Leningrad, launched the push Friday, just one month after the fall of Sevastopol—a month devoid of major activity along the long front.

The Soviet communique declared Russians forces had captured 82 towns and villages, including the rail junction of Terijoki, 27 miles airline northwest of Leningrad and 100 miles east of the Finnish capital of Helsinki.

Also captured, the bulletin said, was Yapolyra described as "an important strongpoint" seven miles northeast of Terijoki.

Terijoki, situated on the Leningrad-Helsinki railway, is about six miles west of the 1939 Russo-Finnish border, and 70 miles east of the frontier established by the peace treaty which ended the war between the two countries in the winter of 1939-40.

At Least 48,000 Volunteers Needed As Reinforcements

Ottawa, June 13 (CP) — Brig. James Layton, deputy adjutant-general in charge of recruiting, said in an address carried over a national network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation last night that at least 48,000 volunteers are needed this year to reinforce the Canadian army in the field to care for "normal wastage and casualties in the battle now on."

"The long-awaited invasion has started," he said. "The European coast is alluve. Of the price to be paid, we do not speak—but this we know, that unless we reinforce our field army its blitting power must rapidly decline and its valor be unavailable."

Men and women who through no fault of their own cannot "join up" deserve sympathy, not censure. Those individuals who "flagrantly repudiate the call to go for fear, laziness or sheer selfishness deserve our contempt, but still have the opportunity to redeem themselves."

Between these groups are the thousands who are "ready to serve and have got what it takes but have not yet seen where their duty lies."

Tank Production Halted by Strike

Detroit, June 13 —(AP)— Production of amphibious tanks at the Graham-Paige Motors Corporation plant was halted today when nearly 3,000 employees on three shifts joined a strike of 26 truck drivers and helpers.

The drivers and helpers left their jobs, Saturday, A spokesman said they acted in protest against the disciplining of several drivers. The company said the latter left their jobs without permission.

The men are affiliated with the United Automobile Workers (CI.O.).

2,500,000 WORDS READ BY CENSORS.

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 13 (CP)—Chief censors scrutinized 2,500,000 words in the five days of the invasion. An official estimated they deleted an average of less than one word from every 100. They also viewed 25,000 still pictures and 100,000 feet of movie film.

Fiery, Itching Toes and Feet

Here is a clean, stainless antiseptic oil that will do more to help you get rid of your trouble than anything you've ever used.

It's action is so powerfully penetrating that the itching is quickly stopped and in a short time you are rid of that bothersome, fiery itching. The name is true of Sarbey's Itch, Scratch, Blotch—other irritating unsightly skin conditions.

You can obtain Mooney's Emerald Oil in the original bottle at any modern drug store. It is safe to use—and failure in any of the ailments noted above is rare indeed.

Trenton Officer Sends Home Copies of Official Victory Messages

Trenton (Special)—Major T. S. Ketcheson of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment has sent home in a letter to his father Watter Ketcheson copies of congratulatory messages received by them during their recent struggle in Italy, when they were successful in breaking the Hitler line.

Message from Commander First Canadian Corps to Commander-in-Chief of Canadian Infantry Division

Message from General Officer Commanding First Canadian Division to First Canadian Infantry Brigade reads: "Well done. We have won a resounding victory. The victory is the fruits of your magnificent courage, endurance and the will to win. Now we have the Jerries on the run, we must keep them running. All we need to do is keep cracking. Good luck; I am the proudest man in the world."

Message from Commander French Forces (Free French) to First Canadian Infantry Brigade reads: "I send my greetings and congratulations to your magnificent fighting men. From here we can see the heroic smashing and cringing under your lash. I wish particularly to congratulate your pioneers on the skill and their efficiency and speed on emergency targets. Your reserve tank crews and your admirable infantry. You have done great things in this valley."

Major Ketcheson went overseas with the First Battalion, Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment in December 1939 as a captain. Shortly after arriving in England he was promoted to Major and spent considerable time taking various courses in England. He returned to Canada more than a year ago and spent about nine months at different camps throughout the Dominion as an instructor, returning to England late last summer, having on his arrival in England to join the regiment in Italy. He received slight wounds in Italy in the early days of the battle but was soon able to again be with his men. At the time of writing he is second in command of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment on the Italian front.

Two brothers of Major Ketcheson are also serving overseas Lance-Bombardier Douglas Ketcheson who enlisted in August 1942 is with the Forrest Corps in England. J. Horace Ketcheson, who enlisted with the Signalers from Kingston, went overseas in September 1942 and is now also in Italy.

Prompt Action By Farm Commandos Saves Early Crops

Toronto, June 13 (CP) — Ontario Department of Agriculture officials today said reports of early crops threatened with disaster being met by the prompt action of Farm Commando Brigades in sending out volunteer help already have started to arrive.

One report from the Chatham district said approximately 100 acres of onions were saved from disaster when more than 300 volunteers went to the fields to aid in weeding and hoeing the plants after the farmer said the crop would be ruined unless help was at hand immediately.

A similar report was received from Tillsonburg district.

CHINESE GENERAL KILLED

New Cry Raised For Recognition Of French Committee

By SIDNEY GRUSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, June 13 —(CP Cable)— A new cry for the recognition of the French National Committee as the provisional government to play a full part in the liberation of France was raised by London's weekend press, which met with sympathy General deGaulle's plea to "end confusion" between the Allies and the Committee.

This fresh evidence of Britain's strong feeling about an old political sore was given against a background of report after report being received from war correspondents on the Normandy beachhead that the French people's choice of General deGaulle as their leader was emphatic and unequivocal.

The sentiment of all front dispatches received the general is summarized in one which reported this Frenchman as saying "He, as well as Britain and America, has been our contact hope through the darkest hours. He is the only leader for us."

The substance of Britain's feelings on the status that ought to be accorded the committee is summarized in a Sunday Times editorial which, noting that responsibility for law and order must pass from military to civil authorities as more and more of France is liberated, asked:—

"Who can these be in France but Frenchmen? Who except the National Committee can be given the authority to direct and co-ordinate their work?"

The urgency of the matter was pointed out by political correspondents of the Daily Herald and the News Chronicle. The Daily Telegraph editorially joined the Herald in warning against using President Roosevelt's invitation to General deGaulle to visit Washington as an excuse to delay solving the current problems.

"France cannot simply be shelved," the Telegraph said, "Somehow France must be treated as France and not as Italy — that is to say like an ally and not like a former enemy and co-belligerent."

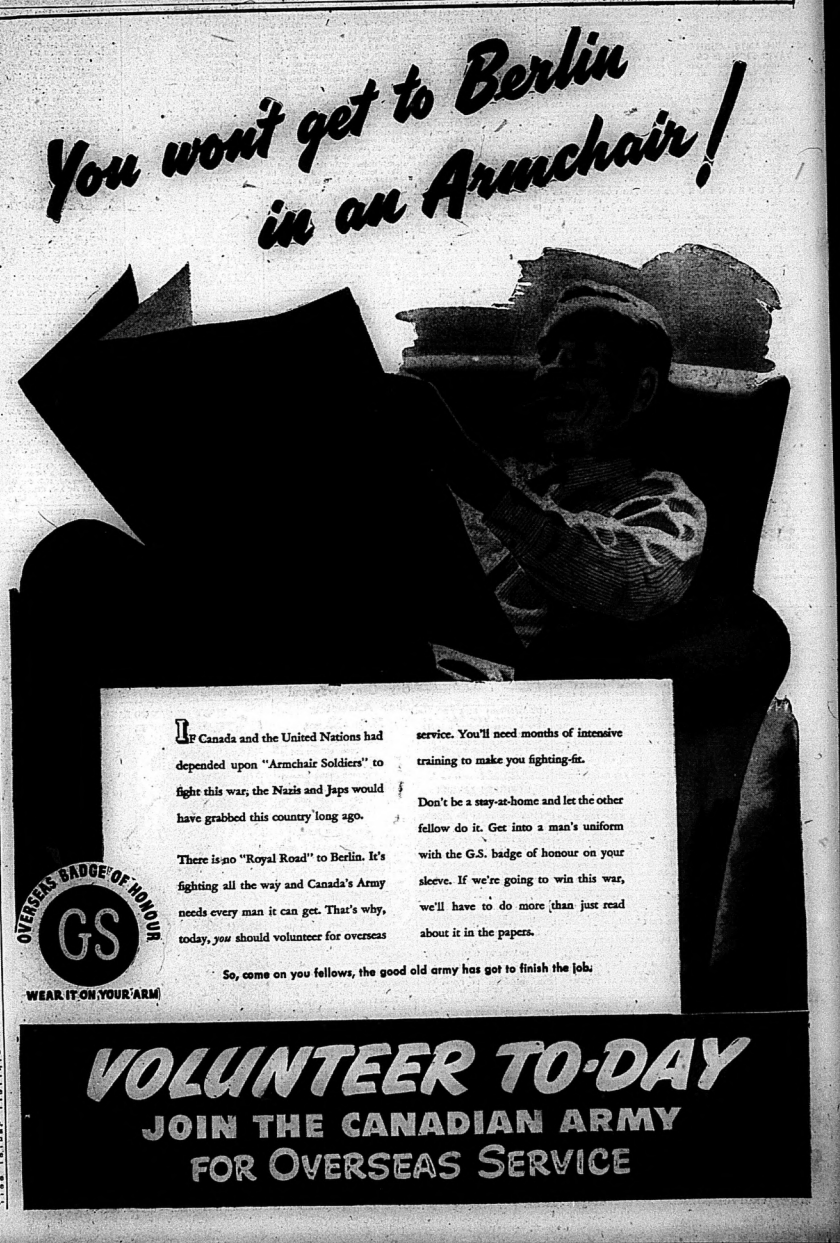
4 Great Powers' Security Parley Seen in Making

Washington, June 12 (AP)—A Midsummer meeting at Washington of Britain, American, Russia and Chinese representatives to discuss the formation of an International security organization apparently is in the making.

The State Department is reported to have received informal assurances that Britain and China are ready to talk business on implementing the Moscow pact and a Russian acceptance is expected as soon as it can be cleared through diplomatic channels. Andrei A. Gromyko, the Russian Ambassador, is returning to Moscow and officials here expect him to report on the matter there.

Meanwhile, Allied diplomats are known to be working on an agreement for the handling of a defeated Germany in the time immediately to follow the fighting. While there is no evidence here that any early collapse of Germany is expected, the ultimate is to be prepared for any possibility.

Terms for Germany are understood to call for its complete industrial demobilization—dismantling of all war plants that can not be devoted to peaceful production.



Plans for the big-four meeting in Washington, which President Roosevelt has insisted cannot be classed as a full dress conference, are still indefinite but British authorities are reported to favor conducting the preliminary conversation on an ambassadorial level.

Henroit Says Nazis To Attack French Resistance Movement

London, June 13 — (CP-Reuters) — Philippe Henriot, Vichy Propaganda Minister, in a broadcast over the French radio network, said today Field Marshal Rundstedt, German Commander-in-Chief, in the west, "is about to launch an energetic drive against the French resistance movement."

The broadcast, heard in London, asserted that French guerilla units no longer will have it all their own way following the German announcement that members of active resistance movements will be treated as Franc-Tireurs.

"Hitherto the Partisans, have been able to roam all over France unhindered, but their extermination is imminent," Henriot asserted.

AMERICANS CRACK DEFENCES OF CHERBOURG
GERMANS REELING BACK TOWARD FLORENCE

Allies Register Spectacular Gains Near Bridgehead

British Forces Take Troarn, Canadians Outflank Caen

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 13 —(CP)— The Allies in Normandy registered spectacular gains in each end of the expanding bridgehead today, with American troops sending advance patrols within 10 miles of the great port of Cherbourg and British forces capturing Troarn, nine miles east of Caen.

On the Cherbourg peninsula the Americans advanced to crack the defences of Cherbourg itself, capturing three towns.

The thrust into Troarn, east of the Orne river, outflanked the city of Caen, for which stubborn, bitter fighting has raged since D-Day.

The British 6th Airborne Division, which includes Canadian paratroopers, has been fighting in the sector northeast of Caen, across the Orne river, since the initial landings a week ago.

It was not immediately disclosed whether this division took Troarn.

CANADIANS IN THICK OF FIGHT.

In the centre of the flaming front, British and Canadian forces plunged south of Bayeux in a "big advance" flanking Caen from the west. American troops captured Balleroy, east of the Forest of Cerisy and 12½ miles inland.

The U. S. 4th Infantry Division troppled Montebourg, 14 miles southeast of Cherbourg, and advance patrols pushed on four miles closer to the strategic port.

The American columns slashed halfway across the Cherbourg peninsula in deepening threats to lop off the port.

One of these driving inland 11 miles near Ste. Mere-Eglise captured Pont L'Abbe, only five miles from the west coast railway still in German hands, and 14 miles from the western shore. The other fought west of Carentan and was roughly halfway across the peninsula at its narrowest, 20-mile neck. Le Ham, three miles southwest of Montebourg, also was taken.

HEADQUARTERS PLEASED.

Supreme Headquarters described the day's sweeping advances as "very, very satisfactory."

Fall of Troarn in a seven-mile advance by the British was the first big gain registered in this desperately-defended area since the British 6th Airborne Division landed there on D-Day a week ago.

British troops in another 3½ mile advance won a village on the outskirts of Caen itself.

New airborne troops were dropped in France. The Germans reported airborne landings on the west coast of the Cherbourg peninsula, presumably as part of a pincers to snip off the cape.

ROMMEL REPORTED "OUT."

The crumbling of Nazi defences on more than an 80-mile front coincided with unconfirmed reports that Field Marshal Rommel, the "Desert Fox," had been removed from his command.

Five landing strips have been constructed and are in use in France, the Allied air forces announced.

The road junction of Balleroy is nine miles southwest of Bayeux. The Germans reported a developing drive on the communications hub of St. Lo, and said American forces were only six miles away.

Berlin accounts asserted airborne Allied forces were landed on the western shores of Cherbourg peninsula.

Supreme Headquarters reported progress all along the battlefront now lengthened to 80 miles.

Another American force driving across the peninsula between Montebourg and Carentan captured Ponte Abbe 3½ miles west of the railroad to Cherbourg running near Ste. Mere-Eglise.

STRONG RESISTANCE AT CAEN.

Although German Field Marshal Rommel was reported to have brought up new Nazi reinforcements, Communique No. 15 from Supreme Headquarters said small Allied gains were registered in all but one sector—at Tilly-Sur-Seulles, west of Caen, where strong resistance continued.

Tilly-Sur-Seulles changed hands with each attack.

Allied airborne landings on the west coast of the Cherbourg peninsula were reported by the German radio and enemy accounts said Gen. Montgomery, over-all commander of the ground forces, has launched a large-scale attack on the road junction of St. Lo, 12 miles south and a little east of Carentan.

Berlin claims said American troops were less than seven miles from St. Lo.

Terrific Air Battles Over Whole Invasion Area Raging With Thousands of Planes

REICH HIT BOTH WAYS

By GLADWIN HILL
(AP War Correspondent.)

London, June 13 — (AP)—Several hundred heavy bombers again pounded German airdromes behind the battle lines in France today as medium bombers struck at targets from the beachhead to far inland.

The German radio indicated Allied daylight raiders were striking into the Reich from bases in Britain and Italy following a night attack by more than 1,000 R. A. F. and R.C.A.F. heavy bombers on Gelsenkirchen transport facilities and the synthetic oil manufacturing centre of Gelsenkirchen in the Ruhr.

The giant force was escorted by fighters, mined explosives on airdromes at Evreux-Fauville and Reux-Illeville-L'Evesque, were further made possible visual bombing. The assaults followed up yesterday's attack by up to 1,400 American heavy bombers against 16 airfields in Belgium and Italy-based bombers struck at Munich.

The combined attacked railroads, fuel dumps and other targets in close support of the beachhead forces.

In a series of broadcasts, the Berlin radio told of heavy air battles raging over the whole invasion area and Allied planes surging over the Alps had penetrated to Munich and Brunswick. Other daylight raiders were reported in small numbers over Belgium and northern Germany.

Following up yesterday's record assault by 1,400 American heavy bombers on 16 fields in Europe, included in its overnight targets bridges near Caen, centre of some of the fiercest fighting in the Allied invasion drive, and Cologne in northwest Germany— an important railway hub.

Germans Move King Leopold To Safer Place

London, June 13 (CP)—Belgian authorities in exile here said today they had learned that the Germans have moved King Leopold from Belgium to Germany as a security measure.

Since the Allied landings in Normandy, they said, the King has been confined to his palace and heavy guard on the ground that Belgium is a "communications zone" chief of the Belgian army—and therefore a potential rallying-point for Belgian resistance.

Officers, Ranks Given Decorations

Ottawa, June 13 (CP)—Stories of gallantry displayed by nine officers and other ranks of the Canadian army during bitter fighting for Caen, Carpiquet and Tilly were told today with release by the defence department of citations covering awards made by the army and announced May 19.

Canada Heads Into Most Acute Labor Shortage Country Ever Faced

Toronto, June 12 (CP)—More Need 150,113 Men.

There could be no assurance that Canada's fighting forces will be met, Mr. MacNamara appealed to employers to meet their labor problems "as a patriotic duty in their own plants.

At June 2 there was need of 134,117 men to fill job vacancies, other than logging and farming, and the figure—double that of February—was increasing rapidly, he reported. In addition there were 67,223 vacancies for women. Beyond the 134,117 was the requirement of the armed forces for 80,000 men in 1944.

While more persons would have to be placed on compulsory transfer, Mr. MacNamara said he already been picked over and shifts would have to be extended to high priority industries. The director called for close co-operation between employers and National Selective Service and asked employers where possible to "lend" employees to other industries, even for short periods.

Mr. MacNamara said would primarily be the responsibility of the proposed new reconstruction department. Post-war economic problems would probably continue to be a responsible for the labor department, he said. Survey systems in regard to post-war employment were now being set up.

CHURCHILL, SMUTS AND EISENHOWER VISIT BEACHES

British Premier Sees Navy Pound Shore Targets, Visits On Land, Tours Coast

SAFE RETURN

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 13—(CP)

—The Normandy beachheads of the Allies' European invasion front appeared serene today and this was amply demonstrated by the extended visits by the British Prime Minister Churchill, General Eisenhower and a galaxy of stars from the High Command.

The Prime Minister yesterday spent seven hours on the Allied left flank sector of the front, touring the front lines on various ships of the Royal Navy pounding hard at the enemy's rear formations. At about the same time Eisenhower, Allied Invasion Commander-in-Chief, was touring American areas, on the western flank of the invasion arc.

With Mr. Churchill were Field Marshal Smuts, Prime Minister of South Africa, and Field Marshal Sir Alan Brooke, chief of the Imperial General Staff. The top men of the United States High Command were also present—Admiral Harold R. Stark, Chief of Naval Operations; Gen. Carl Spaatz, Commander of the U.S. Strategic Air Force; Admiral Ernest J. King, Commander-in-Chief of the U.S. Fleet, Lt.-Gen. Omar N. Bradley, Commander of American ground forces in France, and other high officers.

The parties did not meet. Each stuck to the fighting men of its particular headquarters. Churchill was made public at headquarters late yesterday, but last night the word had returned safely to England. The visits demonstrated D-Day had not caused the Allies to maintain over the 80-mile invasion front, Supreme Headquarters said.

4 Nazi Minesweepers Sunk by Saboteurs

Stockholm, June 13 — (CP) — The Free Danish Press Service reported today that Danish saboteurs had sunk four minesweepers and damaged seven others in the Svendborg harbor, Fyen Island, Denmark.

This presumably accounted for a declaration by Danish saboteurs at Svendborg, announced officially by the Germans, that they had destroyed 4 gamas Telegrambyra last night.

14 PRISONERS TAKEN

Ottawa, June 13, (CP)—Fourth U-boat victim of the hard-hitting Canadian Navy in ten weeks was announced today by Navy Minister Macdonald who also announced the first action in mid-Atlantic in which the sprawling new frigate Prince Rupert sunk its underwater foe and brought back 14 prisoners as proof.

Prisoners were also taken in the three previously announced successes. It was announced on April 6 that the frigate Swansea had sunk a boat; on May 31 that the corvette Chilliwack got one and on June 6 that the corvette Drumheller had scored.

As in previous actions, the Canadian frigate was aided in the hunt by other units.

The fourth successful action came in the Mid-Atlantic gap where Allied Atlantic supply line but the growing concentration of U-boats in the area has kept the raiders on the run.

Of the prisoners, two are R.C.N. men.

This growth in power is chiefly Canadian. Of the 110 ships of about 45 per cent of the convoy escort work now is Canadian under the command of the Royal Navy and the United States Navy.

Finnish Troops Fail to Halt Red Army's Karelian Offensive

NEARING VIIPURI

By EDDIE GILMORE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, June 13 —(AP)— Backed by terrific gun fire provided by Soviet Gens. Leonid A. Govorov and Artillery specialist, Red army mobile units moved steadily over roads and forest trails deeper into the Karelian Isthmus today, reaching points beyond captured Raivola, about 26 miles from Viipuri.

A Soviet dispatch to London reported the surrendering of many Finns who appeared dazed by the relentless Soviet attack. Viipuri was not burned. The Finns did not have time to apply the torch.

It was the Soviet advance that Raivola fell in 40 minutes. But the Finns were reported hurrying many reserves to the Karelian front to stop the Allied flanking and enemy fighting appeared in store for Finland's defenders in addition to the hard core of resistance.

The Moscow midnight broadcast by Berlin said the Finns had repulsed all attacks against their defensive positions. Many of Soviet tanks were destroyed in three days, Stockholm declared today, misty weather hampered the Soviet drive, Helsinki declared.

Lithuania, benefitting Finnish troops in the war, is in process of "stabilizing the front."

German Prisoner Arrested on Tip

Detroit, June 13 — (AP)—Robert A. Guerin, agent in charge of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, said today that a telephoned tip from a German-born United States citizen led to the capture here of Fritz Fuchs, 35-year-old German prisoner of war who escaped 10 days from a farm camp where he was working in the Wallaceburg area.

Guerin said the German-born American's report led to the arrest of Fuchs on the street and notified authorities. He added he was not inclined to believe a story told by Fuchs of swimming across the Detroit River from Windsor.

Fuchs was a merchant seaman, captured on the high seas by the Nazis.

He was the second prisoner to escape in Ontario recently. The other being 27-year-old Henry Abt who escaped from a camp at St. Peter-Insula in northwestern Ontario.

8th Army Troops Cross Saline River Five Miles North Of Pescara

PORT ESTABLISHED

By SID FEDER
Associated Press War Correspondent

Rome, June 13—(AP)—The Germans north of Rome fought bitterly today along a new line of defense from Lake Bolsena to the sea but the Army troops assaulted through and overran the north end of the western shores of the lake and all but completed a pincers movement at Orbetello, 71 miles northwest of Rome.

Moving up both sides of Lake Bolsena, Allied forces on the western shore have captured Valentano, junction of three highways some 85 miles north of Rome and pushed on, nearing Latera, four miles further north.

Northeast of the lake, South African forces moving toward Orvieto ran into a stiff battle in Monte Regio.

On the Tyrrhenian coast American troops encountered a new series of dug-in defences east of Orbetello and attacked through high ground directly toward Lateral highway 74, which is about 20 road miles from Rome at that point. In a sharp and bloody engagement they captured Hill 370 and from the German 162nd Turcoman Division and killed 100 more of the enemy.

The advance was considerably more rapid on the Adriatic sector, where 8th Army troops crossed the Pescara river, some five miles north of captured Pescara, at several places.

Captain Popoli.

These Allied forces took Popoli, on the Rome-Pescara road 10 miles north of Sulmona, where the advance had halted not long enough to take 20 prisoners.

South Terali, in the centre of the advance line, the enemy continued to put up a fierce fight as some progress was made there also.

The 8th Army forces in the Tiber valley pushed on in the direction of Carsoli, reaching high ground across highway No. 5 and taking a number of villages.

It was announced by the Allied command that a port party was established at Civitavecchia June 8 to begin restoring the facilities which had been heavily battered by Allied bombing and enemy demolitions. Many mines have been swept up from the coast from Anzio northward.

Last night R. A. F. bombers swept the Adriatic coast to attack the Aimas-Pozzilo oil refineries near Ancona, port of Bologna, starting large fires.

'Monty' Praises Western Canadian Infantry Brigade

By WILLIAM STEWART
CP War Correspondent

With the Allied Troops in France, June 11. (Delayed).—(CP) Chaba Gregoire, reporting on the Normandy campaign last night paid high compliments to the work of a Canadian infantry brigade which has been in the thick of the fighting since D-Day.

The Allied invasion commander, in a chat with British, Canadian and visiting American correspondents, during which he reported 7,000 prisoners had been captured, declared the Canadians described the work of a Western Canadian brigade which is part of the Canadian 3rd Division as "excellent".

"The brigade landed on the beaches and went right away to its objective inland and still stands there", the General said. "It was good work. It was excellent".

Montgomery added the western troops' feat had not been equalled on the "British front", explaining by that term he meant British and Empire invasion troops.

Tanks Helped to Stabilize Assault, Prove Vital Operational Factor

By WILLIAM STEWART
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadians in France, June 13 —(CP) Cables—Churchill tank forces have supported the ground troops in the Normandy battle moment of the landing. They have fought in some fierce battles, including the capture of Buron, and by high and heavily-armored panzers.

The Churchill tank has suffered casualties but in one area alone 43 Churchills were knocked out of action. Their ace is Lieut. G. K. Hall, 25, Calgary, who has destroyed four enemy tanks knocked out and four probables since D-Day.

This hedgehog area, with rolling fields, mostly unfenced, and with few roads, is ideal tank country where tall grain crops grow, is just about right for the Churchills which is a battle of manoeuvre and co-ordinated fire rather than sweeping, cavalry-like charges.

The first day of corn in the fields, high hedges and numerous little groves. However, the enemy capture of the intelligent battlefield also is full of hazards for the tanks. Even the fast, high velocity anti-tank gun may be concealed in the bushes, behind a haystack or even the next rise of ground.

Tanks must lie in wait for a false move on the part of the opponent and often there is no second chance after a tactical error.

Tanks have proved an battle-ground unless infantry has been there first, because the narrow streets make them ideal tank traps where the lumbering land battleships are blocked and quick by anti-tank guns concealed in buildings.

Lieut. Campbell has commanded and Sherman under his command quickly helped stabilize the assault forces when the landings were made on the Normandy coast on D-Day, for instance, the tanks fought up the beaches and helped infantrymen put concrete pillboxes emplacements out of action.

Meanwhile ships unloading on the beaches during the Britishers-Canadian sector of the bridgehead have brought in hundreds of Shermans since D-Day along with guns and other needed heavy equipment.

Urban Residents Are Urged To Offer As Volunteer Farm Workers To Assist in Harvesting Crops

An urgent appeal for volunteer farm workers to assist in the harvesting of the crops, especially will be a record one, is being made by the Hon. T. L. Kennedy, head of the Department of Agriculture for Ontario.

This year, the minister states, we are confronted with what may be the most serious situation in any of the war years, with the possibility of one-quarter or one-third production below all demands of food, producers have all designated as essential to the war effort, and essential in maintaining production at its highest level. That can be accomplished this year,

Unless every acre of all Ontario farms planted this year, and every acre suitable will be cared upon to the greater sacrifices will be made by the people of Ontario, Canada and the United Nations, Mr. Kennedy declares.

Urban residents may be recruited by this year's crops, provided the task is undertaken in order to provide the assistance required.

The farm labor shortage has reached the acute stage, Mr. Kennedy, Minister of Agriculture, declares. The crops must be harvested, and every person available who can possibly do so, should offer their services. Write before or register at the Chamber of Commerce, Pitch in and "Help Feed the Nations" is urgent and every one in needs to help. Farmers alone cannot do it heavy. But unless they are harvested, their usefulness is gone.

Rev. A.R.L. Keevil is Consecrated Bishop of First Synod of R.E. Church

Consecration Service is Conducted at Emmanuel Reformed Episcopal Church

FOUR CONFIRMED

On Sunday, June 11, three outstanding services were held at Emmanuel Reformed Episcopal Church. At eleven o'clock, the time of the regular service of morning prayer, the confirming bishop of the held, Bishop Frank C. C. Cheak, D.D., the consecrating bishop of the Reformed Episcopal Church in the Province of Ontario, preached the first one. The four confirmed were, Gerald Draycott, Phyllis Draycott, son and daughter of Mr. Gerald Draycott, Sr., of 83 West Main St., Belleville; Marion and Phyllis Large, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Large, Plainfield, Ontario.

Bishop Cheak preached the sermon, which dealt with the confirmation class, counselling them to a life of Christian consecration and to high profession represented in confirmation and pointing out the responsibilities and privileges of the rite if divorced from the reality of personality in the life. His words of rite counsel to these young people were, "Be true to all you present and many expressed great joy in the confirmation. The Rev. Archibald R. L. Keevil, of New Westminster, British Columbia, took part in the service as well as the rector, the Rev. Telford S. Russell.

Consecration Service

In the afternoon at three o'clock the consecration service with Holy Communion, was held. The Rev. Mr. Russell presented Bishop Keevil to the First Synod in the Dominion of Canada of Reformed Episcopal Church, the consecrating was done by Bishop George Marshall, former rector of Emmanuel Church, assisted by Bishop Cheak. Those participating in the service and laying on hands were the Rev. Mr. D. D. Shannon, pastor of the Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, and the Rev. Mr. Wright, Emmanuel's pastor of the Alliance Tabernacle, and the Rev. Telford S. Russell who preached the sermon. Bishop Keevil is now the Bishop of Canada of the Reformed Episcopal Church. He left the city for Ottawa on Monday to visit friends there, and will thence proceed to his own parish in New Westminster.

In the evening the service was conducted by Bishop Cheak, assisted by the rector, and a very inspiring sermon was preached by the newly consecrated bishop. He spoke of the challenges of the day; the challenge of spiritual conflict, the challenge of peace when it comes. Bishop Keevil said, "Let us examine ourselves that the Church can meet the challenge of the day in a spirit of Christian brotherhood more spiritual than in a spirit of denominational bigotry, and painted on the fraternal ideal as upheld in the Reformed Episcopal Church and on the Sacrament of Holy Communion which is the bond of union with the Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ in Heaven, and her pulpit open to every faithful minister of every true Church of Christ. These words were inspiring and challenged by the opportunity lying before this Church equipped as she is in doctrine and spirit to meet the challenge of the day."

Emmanuel Church Choir served at the services with the choir master, Mrs. Stanley Symerop singing the solo part in Gounod's anthem "Oh" and her daughter, Molly, in the evening; Miss Phoebe Wilder presiding at the organ.

LATE MRS. THOMAS OWENS AND MRS. STEPHEN GREEN

Picton, June 13—The funerals of Mrs. Thomas Owens and Mrs. Stephen Green, who died within a week after fire destroyed part of their home, were held yesterday morning. That of Mrs. Owens was held from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Magdalene at eleven o'clock, while that of Mrs. Green was held at the Presbyterian church at 2 o'clock. Only immediate relatives were present. Rev. W. Gordon Hope Swayne officiated. Interments were made in Glenwood cemetery.

Mrs. Owens was a member of one of the lovely leading families she was born 91 years ago in Birmingham, England, where her father was a merchant. She married the late Thomas Owens who was also a citizen of Birmingham, factories in Bloomfield, Trenton, and Picton. For the past 70 years she had resided in the palatial residence purchased from the late C. B. Wilson. Besides her husband, Mrs. Harry of Montreal, E. A. Pearce of Mrs. Stanley Symerop of Picton.

Mrs. Green was born 78 years ago in Picton and lived here all her life. She had been a life-long friend of Mrs. Owens. Formerly Miss Ella Ross, she married Mr. Green in 1892 who died four years later. She has a daughter, Mrs. Lester living in England.

No new facts concerning the origin of the fire have been unearthed. Both houses were damaged by smoke and water. Nothing of the contents recovered it was found that each of the two families was in a different bedroom to those in which they were accustomed to sleep. It appears that Mrs. Owens had been awakened by the fire which was most intense in the room, and had a very inspiring sermon was preached by the newly consecrated bishop. NAZI SUB

First spotted and attacked by a Wellington bomber the latest Nazi victim was finished off by a whirlwind attack of the Liberator. The guns after it had been blasted to destruction by the Wellington, the United States ship, a destroyer and a corvette moved in and Grumman Avenger plane from an American aircraft carrier shared in the kill. Then after the submarine broke surface, Prince Rupert's destroyer joined in the pounding starting it with high-explosives and ended with depth charges. The Cornilson's deadly cross-fire prevented the U-boat from making any attempt to man their deck guns, while shells from the frigate's 4-inch gun shattered the U-boat's conning tower and ripped a gaping hole in the hull.

Sub Sinks Here First.

The destroyer's submarine sank, seen first, with its survivors swimming in the water. Then the Prince Rupert's prisoners, two were officers, one was a petty officer and three C. P. O. Other survivors were rescued by the American ships.

The sinking was another example of combined operations", Mr. Macdonald announced, "not only between the sea and air power, but between ships of the Canadian and the United States navies".

Considerable interest was shaped between the Wellington's spotting of the sub and the start of the naval hunt. Both Canadian and United States ships were in the area. Then the Cornilson, the United States ships carried out their depth charge attack. Almost at this period and finally exposed the U-boat in the Atlantic.

St Cross Corvette.

A Newfoundland Port, June 13—(CP)—Canadian sailors were in the thick of the action when the frigate Prince Rupert sank a Nazi U-boat in the Atlantic. Three officers and 44 ratings from Ontario and Quebec.

Lieut. Lorne F. Miller, Toronto, was in charge of the Canadian contingent, many of whom had served in the submarine its death-blow after it had been blasted to the surface by gunfire from the destroyer Cornilson frigate and two United States warships, the Prince Rupert, Stormes, Pembroke, was in charge or one of the Prince Rupert's depth charge guns.

The ship's medical officer, Surg Lieut. Cmdr. Donald E. London, was ready with an emergency surgical kit, but he said: "Fortunately because the Prince Rupert's barrage was so terrific the U-boats never had the chance to man their deck guns.

Two of the ship's quick-firing Oerlikons were supervised by Ordinary Seaman Cody Caicedon, Picton; Clarence Millard, Kemora; John Hooper, Toronto; Jack Pearson, London; John Patterson, Welland; Glen Harrison, Peterborough, and Ordinary Seaman Leading Seaman Leighton.

Ab. George Dann, London, said he saw a U-boat last winter at a distance while sailing in a Canadian corvette on Atlantic toward Gibraltar.

"That was the first time I'd seen one up close, and it was a thrilling sight," he said. "Later I helped to pull some of the German prisoners aboard after the depth charges went. They surprised me, they were so young."

The ship's cook or accountant rating, Bert Quincey, Belleville, had a regular part in his activities as an "plotter's mate" on the bridge.

Trained "nurse" to the frigate's crew was Leading Artificer Mert H. Olcorn, North Bay, who has been for years in the Navy and served for eight months in the destroyer Kootenay in the Mediterranean and Greek Lovely Candidian.

"When we knew we were going into action, we inspected all the ammunition from bigger around St. Lo, and the German forces pushing down from Carentan. The Germans were fighting stubbornly yesterday. The report from the south of the landing area said.

Try to Halt Drive

All the reinforcements also were pushing up the west coast of the peninsula to help in the drive to halt the American drive toward the open port of Cherbourg, Berlin and Montebourg areas.

It was learned here that a fourth U.S. infantry Division veteran from invasion beaches, has joined the strength of 61 Division of many Canadian Infantry Brigades which opposed the British Second Army's drive toward Caen. The fresh unit has been in England for many months and was said to be preparing on a pakeland training area, today of throwing in reserves at the most threatened points of the enemy defence. Front dispatches also said, that the Germans do not know Allied strategy and fear other strong offensive thrusts and new landings.

The Allied air forces, greatly in the flow of German reserves, particularly into the Cherbourg peninsula, by knocking out a key bridge at Pont Au Baudi - near the west bank of the Vire estuary. The bridge feeds the St. Lo area as well as the part of the peninsula remaining in German hands.

Severe Damage to Airfields

Photographs showed severe damage to seven of 16 enemy airfields hit on the Caen area assaulted yesterday by a record force of 1,400 American heavy bombers. The air campaign against German transport surged on through the night, British bombers attacking the railroad centres on key points on the Rhine-Ruhr network.

The comparatively feeble challenge presented by the German air force in the past 24 hours has resulted in destruction or 76 of the enemy planes in the air, Allied aircraft.

German E-boats were active in the English Channel last night, but in less strength than on the previous night, and their attempts to break into the traffic lanes of the Allied invasion coast were frustrated, Wind Freshened

The wind freshened to a strong breeze off shore during the night, but it did not interfere with the loading of supplies and troops on the beachhead, which now extends 60 miles in length and from six miles in depth.

British and Canadian forces have been locked with the German in a desperate battle around Caen since the original landings a week ago. The Germans are devoting their main defensive effort in this sector by using armor in counter attack. Bayeux fell to the Allies last week.

FINLAND

The Russians already were moving down both roads toward Viipuri.

Make Great Advance

Beyond Helsinki they made good progress down the main highway toward Hamina, 80 miles away, and also were running along the Gulf of Finland from the Soviet naval base of Leningrad, which is now under an Izvestia dispatch said.

The Russians were blasting their way through deep lines of fortifications in the Finish border, German troops have been stalled there since 1941.

Izvestia correspondent Vasily Sayanov declared the Finns were "losing confidence" and were unable to withdraw their machines or their heavy guns.

"I saw many anti-tank guns with their barrels twisted into the earth, light tanks bearing black and white German crosses, and abandoned Red Army anti-tank units which captured Kivennapa 13 miles north of the Gulf of Finland border, cleared and cleared a sector at the end of the Karelian Isthmus, between Kivennapa and Leningrad, eliminating any Sanz threat.

Wedge Driven Into Nazi Lines.

The German DNB Agency admitted the Americans had been driven into the German line east of the River Orne, where British and Canadian soldiers of the British 6th Air-borne Division have been engaged in heavy fighting since landing on D-Day.

The German High Command communique said there was "particularly heavy" fighting west of Caen, and south of Bayeux, in the Tilly area.

Canadian 3rd Division troops and British formations are engaged in bitter fighting in the sector of the Caen - Bridgehead, where heavy tank engagements with the enemy are raging.

The American 4th Infantry Division attacked with powerful armies southeast of Carentuy and there were conflicting enemy reports as to the town had fallen.

(A CBS correspondent in France said Canadian soldiers of the British 3 Division is Action.

His American division now are fighting on the plains of Normandy, it was disclosed.

Nazi-controlled Paris radio declared Montebourg—already reported in Allied hands—was "fiercely" contested and the Germans still held it.

American forces pushed on across the neck of the Cherbourg peninsula, the enemy high command newly captured Carentan, possession of which, the communique said, materially strengthened the link established between our two major beachheads.

Napanee Citizens Want Hospital For Lennox, Addington

Napanee, June 13. (CP)— About 200 people voted unanimously last night in favor of establishing a 50 bed hospital for the County of Lennox and Addington. The meeting was held in the Flemish Hall of Napanee, and Warden J. O. Deir at the request of a local service club (Lions). There was no discussion on location or cost, it was felt that while major surgical cases would still have to be taken to the larger centres a large many medical cases and minor surgical cases could be handled locally and it was much better for those who can't ill not be there to go a long distance and be away from friends.

House Debates Mutual Aid, Relief for Liberated Peoples

By HARCT CROMBIE.
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Ottawa, June 13 (CP)—Provision of relief to the peoples of liberated countries, full support for mutual aid to the United Nations, and the continuation of the wartime rationing of essentials are set out as a variety of debate in the commons yesterday.

Finance Minister Ilsley announced that Canada proposes to contribute $75 million this year to the United Nations relief and rehabilitation administration, and that it will provide relief for countries liberated from the enemy.

The amount, representing a little more than one per cent of Canada's national income, would be about one of the $800,000,000 Canada proposes to spend during its mutual aid.

Mr. Ilsley spoke during passage of a resolution to a bill authorizing the expenditure of the $800,000,000, the total which was given first reading, and is scheduled for a second reading today.

Earlier, Defence Minister Howe announced that March 31, totalled $913,693,356.

Major beneficiary was the United Kingdom which received aid to the extent of $723,793,788. Next in line were Russia, with $131,881,000; Australia, $34,965,945; China, with $4,101,587, West Indies with $874,478 and Newfoundland, $67,557.

Expenditures for war supplies to be transferred to reciprocal aid account in the future amount to $130,123,563, and the total of the lend and expenditure, $35,672, went to administration costs.

RE-WORDED

Budget Soon Down.

Before the session settled down to the study of Government Legislation, Defence Minister Ralston revealed that Canadian casualties in France have so far been "moderate."

Prime Minister Mackenzie King said it was hoped the budget would be brought down "shortly."

Mr. Ilsley said there had been some delay in completing arrangements for mutual aid to allied recipient countries, and the figure for shipments up to March 31 were not representative of the proportions in which supplies now were moving to the countries concerned. Mutual aid shipments to the French Committee of National Liberation did not start until last March 31.

"It took longer to arrange mutual aid supplies for Russia, China, the French and even Britain," he said, than it did for Britain, and consequently their total share in shipments had been lower than it would be now," he said.

"Countries other than Britain will, therefore, receive a larger share of the total mutual aid supplies this year than last year."

Purchases Substantial.

During the year, all the countries receiving mutual aid, with the possible exception of China, bought war supplies in Canada, Mr. Ilsley said. Purchases were substantial, Mr. Ilsley said.

It was possible that some of the United Kingdom purchases, for the first time this year for mutual aid.

Maxime Raymond (SP—Beauharnois-Laprairie) asked what mutual aid was being done for Canada.

Mr. Ilsley said when Australia were engaged in a common cause with them, they did in that case what was mutual aid for the others. When British soldiers were fighting they were fighting Canada. Britain had done much for Canada in this war, than Canada had for Britain. Outcome of Sense.

Rev. E. G. Hazell (SC)-Mac-Leod) said he wondered why Canada did not trade with the United States and all the rest of the world. He wanted $800,000,000 off the debt of the United Kingdom and Canada.

Mr. Ilsley said he believed the country would be willing to contribute probably be the same, but mutual aid must always be needed the most money distributed in the most effective way.

C. O. C. Woodsworth (C—Vancouver-Burrard) said he welcomed the forgiveness of mutual aid was that Canada was not impoverishing itself the Dominion. It had shown that Canada could found her financial resources.

"When peace comes then we can help Britain and the rest of the land to other countries to find money to finance the building of Canadian industries."

Humphrey Mitchell (Hove—said that in addition to the $77,000,000 contribution to U.N.R.R.A. Canada should make a contribution to military relief in liberated territories. The relief should be given to the people given to civil populations by the armies.

POLICE COURT

Cecil Lennox, 58 West Moira St., was suspended sentence by Magistrate Lloyd in police court this morning on a charge of theft and also being found in the house of another on Dec. 31 last year when arraigned before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd here today. He was charged with theft from his employer.

Prior to making restitution to his employer the 16-year-old Lennox was placed on a year's suspended sentence and ordered to pay the costs. He was fined ten dollars and costs on the second charge. Lennox was given until the end of two months to make the costs and costs. He must also report to Chief Norbert Donnelly, of the municipal police.

Children Asked To Bring Paper To Their Schools

Theatre tickets for a free show on Friday afternoon are awaiting those children of Belleville public schools and of St. Michael's Academy who bring in the greatest weight of paper salvage to their schools. The campaign is in connection with the re-opening of paper shortages and school children are being asked to co-operate in bringing the paper to their school, where collection will be made.

Each afternoon for the balance of the school week collections of paper salvage will be made at each of the public schools in the city. The first of these collections having taken place on Monday when over 9,000 pounds of paper was realized. Collections are being made by the local paper salvage committee.

"Monday afternoon's collection of paper at the schools was highly encouraging," stated an official of the local committee today, "and the children are to be highly commended for their co-operation. If collections at the schools for the balance of the week measure up to that of the first day, the effort will be really worth while."

School children in other centres have made a splendid contribution in gathering paper salvage to assist in the war effort and it is hoped by officials of the local committee that results in Belleville will equal, if not surpass, that in other centres.

Phil Huddleston Honored By Kinsmen Club

Presentation of Citation of Merit Made at Meeting Attended by Members and Their Wives

SEAMAN HONORED

Members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club paid tribute to a fellow-member and to the personnel of the Belleville Orchestra, at their Monday evening, when at their regular meeting in the Quinte Hotel they held "Phil Huddleston Night" in recognition of the valued service rendered the club by this member. Orchestra personnel was presented individually to the Kinsmen by Kin Wally Berry with a suitable presentation to Phil being made on behalf of the club by Jeff Appell and Cecil Lloyd.

In fact it was a night for bouquets to be handed out all around when Kin Berry in his introduction of Alec Gordon and Bruce Sills also paid thanks for services rendered the club at various times throughout the years.

Kin Harry Rollins expressed the welcome of the club to the many guests present. In a brief response he, paying especial tribute to Huddleston, presented a citation of the Athabaskan, who is now home on furlough.

"This citation rendered a great service to your country," stated Kin Harry in his presentation, "and one of the Belleville boy in the naval service who has been a credit to Phil's splendid personality and his outstanding ability in getting his time and talent for many worthy causes, which makes for his popularity," added Harry.

Expressing his appreciation for the kindness shown him by fellow members, Phil disclaimed any credit. All the credit, he declared, was given to the spirit of Kinsmenship, he said. Any credit should be given to boys serving "Uncle Sam" whose courage their sacrifice have made it possible for Belleville today to continue its operation.

Words Congratulated.

President Matt Currie read a letter of congratulation from Kinsmen Clubs in communities throughout the local club on its efforts of expansion which this year has seen Kinsmen and Kinsmen clubs sponsored by the Belleville club. The local club was now leading all clubs in the Dominion in sponsoring new clubs, their record now standing at seven clubs.

During a brief business session the club voted $100 and $20 for the Milk for Britain Fund from employees of the Bell Telephone Company, Belleville. Mr. Wenham was introduced as the most Kinsman present, but he says he withdrawn from circulation on distortion of the propaganda ministry," they said.

SGT. DON THOMAS THANKS CHAPTER

Tells of Distribution of Socks Sent by St. Julien Chapter to Boys in Central Mediterranean Force

SEAMAN HONORED

Sgt. Don Thomas who has been serving in the Central Mediterranean Theatre of war wrote on May 21st to Mrs. A. L. Neale, Regent of the St. Julien Chapter, I.O.D.E. thanking the Chapter for the gift of socks. He says:

"Dear Mrs. Neale:—

"The parcel arrived last week from the St. Julien Chapter and as we have been on the move a bit lately I didn't get a chance until today to distribute the socks. Even then I didn't get around to see the boys individually but sent it to the different troops with the socks. I shall enclose a list of the names of the boy I gave them to and I hope it is satisfactory. The boys were all glad to get them for they all feel the same way, that socks are the one article of clothing that you cannot have too many of. Especially in the weather is in the country at present. The weather is so necessary to change very often, so it is handy to have a few extras on hand.

"In writing 'thank you' in a letter seems rather inadequate for all the kindness you have shown not only to me but to the boys serving here. Some day, I hope, not too far away I shall be able and try to repay you in some small way for everything.

"We are having lovely weather here but sunny days with it just cool enough at night to sleep well. The main drawback now is the dust and is it really black during the dirt roads. There is a carpet of fine dust more like a Persian rug on the roads and when you get a few of vehicles moving about it is almost impossible to see!

"Well, I must run along, saying thanks again and best wishes to all of you.

"Don."

"Atlantic Wall" Books, Pictures Disappear From German Shops

Moscow, June 13—(AP)—A Tass News Agency dispatch from Zurich, Switzerland, today quoted "certain arrivals from Germany" as saying that books, pamphlets and pictures of the "Atlantic Wall" have disappeared from German bookshops and newsstands since the Allied invasion of Normandy. "They were withdrawn by the Nazi censorship. It seems through collections taken among the working class more than $1,100 has been raised for the club, $900 of this being this year.

Guest artist for the evening was Len Fossard who mystified members with his bag of varied tricks. Jimmy Bankier was also heard in two popular songs of vocal numbers. Gardiner Duff acted as song leader and Bill Dennis as Sergeant-at-Arms.

Very Little Profit

It happened during a lull in city police court today when a local youth had pleaded guilty to the illegal possession of a quart of liquor for which he admitted he had paid a friend $6.00.

"Well, at least he made a little profit," remarked Crown Attorney R. C. Donnan.

"That is the usual practice in a business, I believe," replied Inspector J. C. Rhyes, who had just concluded his evidence in the case.

"You mean if they hope to remain in business a profit is necessary," drily added His Worship Magistrate Lloyd with a smile.

Sees, Indications U.S. Paratroopers Tortured, Murdered

New York, June 13 — (AP)—Stanley Richardson, NBC reporter in London, said in a broadcast last night that there is "indisputable evidence that the Germans tortured and murdered" American paratroopers during the early hours of the Normandy landings.

Richardson, who had just returned from headquarters of an American airborne division near Carentan, said the mutilations the bodies of three American enlisted paratroopers, stripped to the waist, with their hands bound, were found in a heap beside the wall of a former German guard post.

"There is every indication," said Richardson, "that these Americans were executed after they had been captured, in violation of the rules of war.

"In a second case the body of a lieutenant was found with his throat cut and a German army knife beside him. Richardson said according to the men of the command post who discovered the body, the officer landed in a tree and was murdered as he hung helpless there."

A third mutilation murder is made by who was found in a village "dead of multiple stab wounds," Richardson declared.

De Gaulle Expects To Visit France

London, June 13 (CP)—Gen. De Gaulle was expected today to pay an early visit to France, where the Allied invasion has spurred resistance movements against the Nazis, in the hope of winning public support for the French National Committee, it was disclosed.

French quarters said yesterday the general, dissatisfied with official British and American reaction, was willing to make a popular demonstration from his countrymen to strengthen his hand before leaving for Washington to fight for recognition of his committee as the provisional French government.

Reports from Spain, meanwhile, said a German order that French-men caught with arms would be shot had beencopied and that thousands of new recruits are joining the underground. Marshal Rommel Believed 'Out'

London, June 13. (CP Cable) — Leslie Hunter, Canadian Press 21st army group headquarters published in the Sunday Express today, said: "It is now believed that Rommel is out."

No definite news of him has reached this headquarters since the invasion began but all pointers are that he is not in command".

By Wed GALLAGHER
(AP. War Correspondent)

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 13. (AP)—Unconfirmed reports reaching this headquarters today said Marshal Rommel has been removed from command of the German 7th and 15th mobile armies, formed for strategic counter-attacks against the invasion.

Rommel and his superior, Marshal Von Rundstedt, the over-all German commander in the west, are known to have been at odds since D-Day.

The younger and more impulsive Rommel has been reported anxious to launch counter attacks in an attempt to break up the Allied beachhead. Von Rundstedt, 68-year-old Prussian long steeped in German military lore, has favored a policy of holding back in order to save his men for the great land battles are made elsewhere in France or the low countries.

Rommel had been described in German broadcasts as a brilliant tactician, whose decisive defeats he suffered in North Africa, Sicily and Italy at the hands of his present counter-part, Gen. Montgomery, Von Rundstedt,

Canada's Contribution to Assault On France 'Vast and Decisive'

By LOUIS Y. HUNTER
(CP War Correspondent)

First Canadian Army Headquarters, Somewhere in England, June 13 (CP-Cable) — Lt.-Gen. H.D.G. Crerar, commander of the Canadian Army, told correspondents today "it will be difficult if not impossible to exaggerate" the importance of the Canadian contribution to the "vast and decisive" assault on France.

The genial commander made the statement at the conclusion of a comprehensive off-the-record conference at which silence will be fully relaxed.

"It will be difficult if not impossible to exaggerate it.

"During the war in Sicily and Italy and now in France, Canadian all troops have always had certain inherited qualities. You can count on it they will continue to do so until the end and will spare themselves nothing to ensure that final victory suffers no delay."

magnificent part played by Canadians.

"We know beforehand how well Canadian troops would fight. Canadian troops would carry out a difficult and vitally-important task.

"The enemy certainly shares that knowledge now.

"I believe that when the time comes that the complete story of and decisive Allied assault landings in France is told the importance of the Canadian contribution to its success will be fully realized.

"It will be difficult if not impossible to exaggerate it.

"During the war in Sicily and Italy and now in France, Canadian all troops have always had certain inherited qualities. You can count on it they will continue to do so until the end and will spare themselves nothing to ensure that final victory suffers no delay."

Sea Power

The lessons of the sea have been well learned by Britain and the United States and it is also most satisfying to realize that Canada too knows the importance of sea power.

It has been remarked that German ships were conspicuous by their almost total absence in the channel on invasion day, whereas the British and American forces which included Canadian ships numbered four thousand large transports and troopers and several thousand smaller ships which crossed to France to land their cargoes of soldiers and supplies and weapons on the coast of Normandy. Overhead was the closed bank of Allied planes and travelling towards France were forces of Allied paratroops. Even German airpower scarcely put in an appearance all the day.

This situation prompts the Ottawa Journal to say of German's impotence on the sea that "we have heard a great deal in this war, and rightly, of air power. Yet the fact is evident that no superiority in air power that the Allies could have marshalled would have sufficed without supremacy on the sea. Hitler, after Dunkerque, had superior air power. Yet, though a practically defenceless England lay across the Channel, he did not dare invasion; the reason being that he lacked sea power to make the adventure possible. Air power alone could not have done it for him; could not have brought the munitions and supplies essential for the success of invasion forces.

Again the Journal says "What it all seems to add up to is that air power alone cannot win wars of global dimension. Without command of the sea, a command that enabled thousands of merchant ships to take supplies to all the far-flung war areas, the Allies today would not be on the way to victory. Hitler, in fact, might have been victorious."

The whole story of the invasion so well told by the press, according to Prime Minister Churchill, showed the perfect co-ordination of every factor in warfare, sea power, land power and air power.

Once again the sea has been Britain's great friend and the friend of the free. It was from Britain governed by sea the might of the Western democracies as well as the supplies. Even the great Napoleon who said that an army travels on its belly also could not have achieved victory over England had he tried to invade that country for he had not the means of getting his soldiers, food, implements and munitions of war across. In this war Hitler was in a similar position unable to strike because he had not all the weapons.

Britain wisely has kept a powerful navy and the United States has been building a mighty navy which has been able to throw its strength against Hitler. Canada too among the other nations has had a remarkable naval and shipbuilding development that has stood her and the Allies well in war and will stand her well in peace. She has about 700 ships in her navy and over 80,000 men.

Canada is proud of what the Canadian navy has been able to do especially in this recent undertaking.

Canada opened the other day in Montreal the H.M.C.S. Donnaconna which is a ship ashore with accommodation for 1,000 ratings and where the routine is as on shipboard. Such centres cannot but have a very important part to play in Canada's navy's future.

Norman Influences

Normandy has been associated with British and Canadian history. Before 1066 King Edward the Confessor of England had been often a visitor to Normandy. There was a steady intrigue between the Norman and Saxon court parties of England for the succession to the English throne. While Edward the Confessor had been under Norman influence, towards its close he came under the influence of the Saxon party and nominated Harold as heir to the throne. On Edward's death Duke William of Normandy who held that he had promises from Edward and Harold prepared an invasion, landed at Pevensey Bay and met Harold at Hastings where Harold was killed and the Normans were victors. Norman dependence upon the British people and the continental wars in which Normandy was engaged estranged the Normans in England from their former compatriots in France so that in two centuries the differences between English and Norman in England was wiped out. Only eleven years after the battle of Hastings, Robert son of the Conqueror took Normandy from his father but it was reunited with England in 1106 under Henry 1st. In King John's reign Normandy was lost. It remained part of the French monarchy for more than two hundred years but after the battle of Agincourt in 1415 it was reconquered by the English who held it until 1449 when it was finally wrested from them by King Charles 7th of France.

There is a further close relation with Normandy that many families from Normandy came out to Canada during the French Settlement in Quebec and their descendants live there. In the last war it was at Le Havre a port in Normandy where Canadians landed.

During the Middle Ages histories of the relations of England and France have many records of Normandy and Britain.

Killed in Mishaps and in War

(Montreal Gazette)

Harry Guilbert, of Chicago, director of safety and personnel, the Pullman Company, made it very clear the necessity for better accident prevention methods in his recent address before the Quebec Association for the Prevention of Industrial Accidents. He pointed to the fact that 1,000 persons a week for the Japs on Pearl Harbor, 190,000 persons in the United States have been killed in accidents in industry and on the streets, while only 30,076 United States citizens have been killed in war action. He pointed also to the further and more vital fact that many of these civilian casualties were preventable.

Problems of Airways

Increase in plane size and performance creates a problem to the men who build the runways on airfields in England. The added pressure creates more wear and tear on the runways and all fields which are not used exclusively for light aircraft, must have runways built like a main highway, according to the United Kingdom Information Office. Most of these have from 8 to 12 inches thickness of concrete, from 50 to 100 yards wide. Besides the main runway in the prevailing wind, an airfield usually has two subsidiary runways, for taking off into winds that deviate from the prevailing one.

Frozen Goods

(Wall Street Journal)

Some Boston men bought a spring supplying a Canadian table water, but found themselves in a quandary when a tariff of 25 cents a gallon was imposed on the importation of the water into the United States. They wrote a New York lawyer and asked him if he could suggest Canadians whereby they could avoid the levy.

He replied:

"Freeze the water. Import it in cakes, and tariff it like this side of the border. There is no duty on ice."

The plan worked.

JUST FOLKS

ONE TERRIBLE MAN

Time to go fishing and everything fine
If Hitler, the madman, would only resign!
The blue skies above and the waters below,
The bass in the favorite places we know.
All things as they should be according to plan,
But the joy of them spoiled by one terrible man!

Time to go fishing again, and the shore
A tangle of willow and sumach once more;
Pond lilies in bloom and gray wings in the wing;
The glory of nature again in full swing,
But the heart for it missing. Enjoy it who can,
Since all has been spoiled by one terrible man!

Time to go fishing again, and the breeze
As fragrant as ever; as shady the trees;
Still crested with silver a way down the sun;
But madness is loose, and a war must be won!
There's wood for the fire and there's fish for the pan,
But it all has been spoiled by one terrible man!

Jumping Fun as Chute Opens

(The Christian Science Monitor)

London — One often hears the question asked: "I wonder what it feels like to drop out of the sky in a parachute." Here is description by a young commando officer who made his first descent with the parachute course:

He said it was a pretty intensive course, as he did eight jumps in 10 days. On one day he made three jumps, one after an express lift —very unsettling to the stomach. The worst moment is when you first arrive at the disembarkation point, but once you are through that and in the floor and falling into space, you feel immensely relieved and happy about it, particularly when you look up and see that your 'chute has opened properly.

He did one night-jump from a balloon from the first, but the sudden plunge sideways from the open hatch, he said, you have to get used to quite suddenly. 200 feet, and reach a speed of about 100 miles per hour. Your descent is so rapid, he says, you rush feet first into blackness, with a full moon above you and in the face. And not a sound but the rushing of the wind streaming up past your feet—completely cut off from everything; a very unreal and unearthly experience, though it only lasts about three seconds, it seems like half an hour.

Canadian Scene
A Century Ago

By J. E. C.

Beyond the end of the sunrise, Beyond the end of the sea, And east of the wonder-world, west Will not the end be?... Yes, the urge to explore was strong in the pioneers, but the building of roads and transportation facilities lagged behind. Many settlements had the length and breadth of their province in 1840, but they were, in other words a friend that in traversing Upper Canada, he must go north and west by the name but that the three best roads through the territory were Dundas, King and Yonge Streets.

One of the first macadamized roads was built between Kingston and Napanee. Begun in 1837, this construction was completed in 1839 at a cost of $132,000. Toll-gates set five miles apart, were expected to cover this outlay in a short time. During this early stirring the government appointed commissioners as agents to road-builders in the province. In 1840 the Kingston Road Association functioning and completed the work, taking on new methods of roadbuilding. At long last came Macadam, who was earlier in Canada was the Toronto-Hamilton Highway, finished about 1835.

The development of macadamized roads gave impetus to the rock-crushing industry. Before the rock-crusher was built towards the end of the 19th century, the macadamizing process has since accomplished an increase of capacity. Formerly workmen not only crushed the stone but also separated it into sizes.

Mr. E.B. Jolliffe And Canadian Newspapers

(Kingston Whig-Standard)

Mr. E. B. Jolliffe, Ontario leader of the C.C.F. Party, is in Saskatchewan helping the party in the provincial election there. On one of his platforms at Assiniboia he had something to say about Canadian newspapers. Speaking at Assiniboia, dater June 8, he is reported to have said in a speech that "Canadian newspapers are with few exceptions, were becoming "increasingly reactionary and biased." We recorded in their editorial pages." As a result of this, Mr. Jolliffe no longer had any influence in public life.

Coming from the youthful leader of the Ontario C.C.F. Party, such statements will not disturb anyone. The trouble with the newspapers is, of course, in the eyes of Mr. Jolliffe that they do not see eye to eye with him in the matter of socialistic doctrines. We think that the newspapers of Ontario have been very fair to the C.C.F. Party. The fact that is what the newspapers of Ontario have given the party more than the officials of the party in Ontario. Unfortunately, we did not have a party which came to this office, but our recollection is that we were always willing to say a good word on his behalf for our very fair treatment of the party during the last election.

As we said before, it is refreshing to hear such outspoken opinions of the press from a former candidate for the C.C.F. Party, but we hope in the interests of the Canadian people as a whole that Mr. Jolliffe will never come when Mr. Jolliffe and his party are in the province of the country what to print, as they would very much like to do.

Pitchforked Salmon In Bay of Quinte

(Trenton Courier-Advocate)

An interesting item appearing in the Toronto press report of 1942 gives some reminiscences of Mrs. White of White's Bridge. Mrs. White of White's Bridge tells of her early childhood days when she resided in the Bay of Quinte country in the latter part of the 18th century. She writes:

"Mother used to help chop down the trees, and as the children grew older, she and the children would pull up the bushes and burn them. The children trained in industrious habits. We were very proud of her, attended the school, churned the butter, making cheese, dressing flax, and in the early days the spinning wheel looked cheerful—candles, candle sticks, candlestings; I have a gown now in my possession that was made of homespun 80 years ago.

We had no neighbors but an old Englishman and an occasional visitor. Before the crops came round, there was a scarcity of food us, supplied by the government, but we had plenty from the military posts, also when these were nearly exhausted we had plenty of fish, sturgeon, cheese and spinning, taking them in a batteau to Kingston and bringing back flour, pork for salt, tea and flour. We had no grist mill at that time and used a hand mill.

The Bay of Quinte was covered with fish and the Indians used to gain any quantity from the Indians. Up to the time of my father's death fishing with a scoop, I have often speared large salmon with a pitchfork. Now all the provisions ran very scant, but there being plenty of bullrags we fared exceptionally. In the time of the famine, I think it was 1788, we were obliged to dig our potatoes after planting them for fear of frost.

Of an evening my father would make shoes or clothes for the children, and mother made homespun dresses.

We had no doctors, no lawyers, no clergy, we had prayers at home and put our trust in Providence. An old Indian in the settlement was the chief physician to the surrounding country and if anything serious was ill one day and settled. A fire fell one day and hurt mother's back very much. We sent for the old woman who came, stepped some wheat, made rye, applied it to the hurt and kept me in a very short time mother was as well as ever.

That Radio News

(Editor and Publisher, New York)

The astonishing ignorance of the public on fundamentals in radio was again illustrated, as reflected in a survey analyzed in a recent bulletin of the American Society of Newspaper Editors by L. D. Hotchkiss, managing director of the Los Angeles Times, revealing that a majority of people think radio presents more accurate news than newspapers because "radio gets direct news than newspapers" and "radio commentators investigate more carefully.

Even the newspaper and radio field knows that broadcasters get the majority of their information from one or all of the three major press services. They also know that the radio and radio reporters ever investigate or originate any news items but rewrite what they receive on the teletype, interpreting comments.

As Grove Patterson, editor of the Toledo Blade said in a recent column: "Radio's news service is a skeletonized report, based upon the three press services gathering agencies and upon the ceaseless work of a trained army of newspaper reporters. To say that its coverage is of more range and scope than that of the newspaper is only to reveal an astonishing ignorance of the simple facts."

30,000 Bags of Unsold Potatoes

(An editorial in The Orangeville Banner).

Potato growers of Dufferin first met together with 30,000 bags of unsold potatoes on their hands. They face the probability of having to take a stiff loss on a crop and to them there a lot of hard work and a considerable outlay for seed, fertilizer and spraying. What added the disappointment, however, is the fact that during the winter months these potatoes could have been sold at a profitable price.

It is rather hard to say where the blame for the present unhappy situation should be placed. It is charged on one hand that Dufferin farmers refused to sell their potatoes last winter when they could have realized good prices, preferring to hold until spring in the expectation of a higher market. This is partly true. Many did hold on, were ready to sell, but trucks were not available for transporting the crop to the Toronto market.

It is undoubtedly true that Toronto dealers and packing centres were very short of potatoes last winter. The need was there and steps and special means were taken to induce growers in the Maritimes to make shipments to Ontario points. When this source of supply was tapped we are informed, owing to a breakdown in the ferry services between Prince Edward Island and the mainland, steps were taken to secure potatoes from the State of Maine, About 240 carloads of Maine potatoes were actually shipped into Canada and served to avert the threatened famine in Toronto, Montreal and elsewhere.

It seems strange that Toronto should have been on the verge of a potato famine, when thousands of bags were held in storage by farmers only fifty or sixty miles from the city. Mild weather and the Toronto market.

Abraham Lincoln, in 1864 was the first President and Vice President elected for a period of eight years.

William H. Harrison, of Ohio, and John Tyler, of Virginia, were elected in 1840. Oddly enough, they were the first Whigs to run on the Virginia and Ohio were adjoining states.

In 1868 U. S. Grant and Schuyler Colefax were elected president and vice president. Grant was a native states of Illinois and Indiana respectively.

That also had been one of the only two times that both the president and the vice president were residents of states not among the original thirteen.

The other time was in 1860, when Abraham Lincoln, of Illinois, and Hannibal Hamlin, of Maine, were elected.

On every other occasion either the president or the vice president has been a resident of one of the original thirteen states.

HANDS SHOULD be handsome, for they are the tools of their enthusiastic gardeners, who are digging in the dirt, creating the sunlight when seeds pop forth green leaves, when they harvest the delicious and the radishes! During their farming activities they remain their own with "horror!" Where are their gardening gloves? How will they look at the end of the bridge table? One can be patriotic, and still have regard for appearance.

Give your hands a fair deal. If you don't you'll be sorry. Because young, lovely hands can look old after a few months of neglect. Once in a state of wreckage it is a long, long task to get them looking form again.

Correct Cleansing

After the washing, plunge your finger tips in a cut lemon; the saves will be as white as snow even though they have looked as if you had been playing in the coal bin.

Don't fancy because it is summer, that you need not use your hand lotion; you should apply it during the busy life. Vaseline, milky, semi-liquid preparations are fine for your hands.

Rub some toilet lanolin from your druggist; apply it every night with gentle massage. Work it from finger tips to the wrist. Wring your hands together, forcing the fatty substance into the flesh. BEAUTY By Helen Jameson Complexion Packs.

Warm weather brings blessings and troubles to the complexion. It offers no chance of a vacation for those who labor in the cause of publicity. The gay weather must go on, so Old Pop Time won't catch up with us.

Outdoor life boosts circulation, and that puts good coloring in the cheeks. But the skin seems to catch more atmospheric dust because of open pores, needs a loi of revivifying. Sunlight lays on freckles and tan, but by stimulating the great glands it washes the pores, helps to heal facial eruptions, if the trouble is not apt to be present.

Hot weather, when appetite isn't as keen, should inspire the roly-poly darlings to start reducing campaigns during the swimming season the string bean contingent has a chance to develop chest and breasts by means of the most perfect of all exercise. So it goes.

If the feminine face is to look fresh and spring-like when the leaves begin to fall, it must have special care right now and until then. It requires considerable lubricating. Excessive tanning should be avoided as the skin will not thicken, look leathery. A complexion pack now and then is recommended for refreshing the skin and cleansing the skin.

Ask your druggist for a package of kaolin; this is our old friend Fuller's earth- (used to cleaning felts and furs-) which has been sterilized, made clean, safe to use.

In a small bowl place two heaping tablespoonfuls of the powder if the skin is dry, add enough salad oil to the powder to form a paste the consistency of whipped cream; if the complexion is inclined to be oily, if blackheads are present, mix with hazel witch hazel instead and add one teaspoonful of peroxide. The pack must be thin enough to spread easily. Stir enough water to thin it.

Apply to a clean skin surface. Keep clear of the hair line; it is wise to slip on your shower cap or tie a bath towel with a towel. Include the neck and ear lobes in the application. All facial treatments should include the neck, so that skin will start to flake there. Necks don't fare very well when beautifying agents are being distributed.

Now you pick up your mystery jar. Its down, have a good old rest period. You ought to be able to enjoy a couple of good movies before removing the pack. Keep it on for at least half an hour, by the clock. Then it will start to flake. Remove with warm water, dry the beautified flesh, apply a little cream with light friction. Your complexion will be fresh and glowing.

Blackheads will disappear under this treatment if given twice a week. Also it is recommended in treatment of acne.

The Marry-Go-Round

TABLOID REFLECTIONS

A Serviceman Muses

The pictures that adorn my study wall,
Like stars upon a dear, familiar sky,
The books that line my shelves—good comrades all—
The friendly pipes that at my elbow lie,
A lamp alight, a rose abloom—and you
Make Home for me, where'er God puts us two.

No hut so squalid but it would suffice;
No battlemented castle, grim and stout,
Too cold to hold my little paradise.
Or holding that, could bar contentment out.
With just these things—so simple and so rare—
And You, via Home, Beloved—anywhere!

In a synthetic summer romance, as in any other gamble, the "cheerful loser" is the only sure winner.

Many a girl has gone through life unblessed by love by the simple accident that a strong man never happened to be around at her weak moment.

A happy marriage is an altar on which a girl cheerfully sacrifices her vanity, her comfort and sometimes her independence. And a cheerfully lays down his pet indulgences, his ego and most of his freedom. If you are already wedded to your ambitions, your habits or your prejudices, don't marry a husband. Because that is the most dangerous form of bigamy.

It never occurs to an average man to wonder if he would be more attractive to the woman if he got a permanent wave or had a facelift. Whaddye mean "more" attractive?

The wonderful thing about the girl of today is that she can keep her pep and her cheerful disposition, and a streamlined figure, at the same time. If the old-fashioned girl stayed sweet and cheery, she usually got fat.

If a man would only use his head when he proposes marriage to a girl, instead of waiting until he loses it, he would save himself lots of regrets and avoid the sad necessity of having to choose between mercy and alimony.

You can do almost everything these modern days of ours just by pressing a button—except start a man's heart beating, or stop a woman's tongue.

PATROLS STOP OVER 20,000 CARS

Los Angeles, June 13 — (AP) — Highway patrolmen and military police set up red-lantern blockades on California highways after Monday night, stopped more than 20,000 automobiles and cited more than 7,000 motorists for faulty lights, brakes or other equipment; lack of operator's license; failure to heed traffic signals, and other causes.

Olsen Comes Here Highly Recommended As a Wrestler

OSH Olsen, the Swedish-American lad who hails from Minneapolis, comes to Belleville highly recommended as a big-league wrestling star. Olsen, a 227-pound blonde giant, meets Johnny Cyrnyk, the Polish-Canadian grappler, in the curtain-raiser of Wednesday night's all-star wrestling card at the Arena.

"Olsen was sent to me by Promoter Tom Packs of St. Louis after both he and Ralph Garibaldi had cleaned up Bill Longson from Sault Ste. Marie in a bout at Kingston during a bout. Packs says Olsen is one of the best prospects he's seen in years, equally as good as Garibaldi in face," revealed Promoter Frank Tunney today.

Garibaldi, on the way, has been engaged to try and put an end to the villainous reign of John Katan, the Palermo Pasha, who claims to beat the Italian-American and gain recognition for a shot at a Longson crown. A good semi-final is also on this week's card.

THURMAN TUCKER FATTEN AVERAGE

New York, June 13 — (AP) — Thurman Tucker, slugging centre-fielder for Chicago White Sox, fattened his batting average 15 points during the past week and now is in the select group of players who have the crown of best batter in the major league while in a year ago when he was batting .348 a week ago to .360. Tucker is the only Dodger player of yesterday.

Phil Weintraub, New York Giant first baseman, was ninth a week ago with .318 but his slugging of the past seven days has raised his average total to .342 and third place.

Dixie Walker, who enjoyed his best day for Cleveland Indians, increased his American League total eight points during the week but his runner-up .361 is dwarfed by the scorching clouts of Tucker.

WORLD-CHAMPION YANKS NOW IN SECOND DIVISION

Lose Six Straight and 12th Setback in Last 14 Games

DODGERS WALLOPED

(By Ted Meier)
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

The world-champion New York Yankees got biffed-banged on the nose again last night and nose-dived into fifth place in the American League, the first time in five years the Yanks have been in the second division, and it's three in the row.

When Jake Powell singled in the 11th inning to give Washington a 4-3 victory Thursday, the Yankees' sixth straight defeat and their 12th in the last 14 games.

The regulation game had ended in 1-1 deadlock and it appeared that the Yanks would win when they scored twice in the 10th. But the Senators tied it up again in their half and proceeded to the relief pitcher Atley Donald for the winning run in the 11th.

In another American league night game Cleveland nicked Detroit, 6-5, mainly on the strength of a five-run outburst in the fourth. Mickey Rocco and Oris Hockett drove in four of the tallies in this fourth inning each delivering a two-run single.

New York Giants spoiled Brooklyn's four runs in the first inning then went on to defeat the Dodgers, 12-9, in the only National League game scheduled. Manager Mel Ott and first baseman Phil Weintraub each socked two homers for the winners.

Chicago White Sox and St. Louis Browns were tied, 1-1, after 2 1-2 innings when rain forced a postponement. Other clubs in both circuits had an open date.

Toronto, June 12 — (CP) — The girls on the west coast are all in favor of either a suggestion or proposal to hold a Dominion play-off for the female fastball (that's swank for softball) championship. The suggestion hasn't got beyond the talk stage yet, but there are signs it is receiving favorable consideration, at least, in some quarters.

The Ontario softball body has always had a soft spot for a national play-off, and attempts were made to promote one back in 1937. It fell through, that time because of lack of interest, not to mention financial and transportation difficulties. Now the interest is cold on the idea, some action might be stirred up if the girls get a thing the right way. Girls' softball is flying high all through the west and it shouldn't be difficult to promote some keen interactional play leading to the national finals.

Grounds for Suicide:

Doug (Windsor Star) Vaughan tells about a pal of his who had a harrowing experience at the Detroit race track. He picked himself a "sure thing" and bet heavily on it. Then a friend gave him a hot tip on the bet that one to place. He finally he placed a wager on a nag recommended by another friend, betting it to show. So what happened? The horse he picked to show won the race; his choice as winner came in second; and his place choice limped home fourth in accompaniment of much finger-chewing.

Flight-Sergeant Gordie Ross, former western hockey and football star and later sportswriter of no mean ability, has been discharged from the R.C.A.F. . . . Jockey Wally Roy defied his racing silks just a few days after the Calgary sprint meeting ended. He's wearing the Johnny Canuck colors now — and khaki . . . BALTIMORE BEATS ROYALS TO TOP INT. LEAGUE

Buffalo Blanked Jersey City to Help Orioles Up the Ladder

TORONTO DEFEATED

(By The Associated Press)

Baltimore is on the comfy side of the torrid International League baseball race today. The Orioles moved into first place by blasting out a 13-5 victory over Toronto Royals last night while Buffalo blanked Jersey City, 2-0.

Sparked by Pat Riley, with four for four, and Howie Moss, who drove in five runs with two homers and a single, Baltimore walloped four Montreal pitchers for 13 hits. The Royals got 13 hits off Rolland Yarbrough and Frank Rochevot, but left 13 runners stranded.

The veteran Eddie Rocco turned in the shutout for Buffalo, limiting Jersey City to six hits. Buffalo batters scored all their three runs off Bob Barkdull, in the seventh frame.

Syracuse nosed out Toronto, 2-1. Herb Moore's fourth-inning single drove in Len Rice with what proved the winning run. Toronto's Dave Kaiser, pitching his 10th game of the season, made the most of their scoring opportunities.

Rochester and Newark had an open date.

SCARECROWS IN NUDE

CASUAL COMMENT
by K.J.C.L.

All Irish soldier in the Middle East received a letter from his wife telling him that she had given an addressless man lent, and she was going twenty miles to see her parents.

Pat wrote at the beginning of his letter: "Dear Mary, Thanks be to Heaven's sake don't flip the garden; that's where the guns are." At the end he wrote: "Darling, dearest and in a short time a lorry-load of men in khaki arrived at Pat's house and proceeded to dig the garden from end to end.

Bridget wrote to Pat in desperation, saying that she didn't know what to do, as the soldiers had got the garden dug up every bit of it. Pat's reply came in short and to the point. "Put in the spuds."

(Ball player's dream)

Barbara Cooney, the hard-hitting first baseman for the Combines, nearly realized the zenith of a lifetime ambition—namely to hit a home run with the bases loaded. Last night Barbara came to bat in a pinch with one aboard in the last inning to give the Combines a 10 to 8 victory over the Deacons. She hasn't lost any of her power at the plate during a lengthy absence from the game.

Deacons were playing their first game last night attired in natty new gold and brown uniforms and a new smock to match. As is generally the rule the new "suits" of a baseball team help the team wearing new garments for the first time to win.

(Good shooting)

See where "Hank" Ryan captured the opening handicap sweepstakes at the Belleville Golf Club over the weekend. Hank had a 86 gross with a handicap of 14. Good enough took the low gross with a 82. Other equally as interesting weekend tournaments are being staged over the games committees over the tricky Belleville Golf Club course.

Incidentally the Tip Top Trophy tournament at the Bay of Quinte Golf and Golf Club is now under way and all first round games must be in by Tuesday of the games committee by sundown of June 18th.

(Billy the Kid helps)

Billy Southworth, Cardinal manager, deserves a lot of credit for helping Ray Sanders, his first base-man, out of his recent batting-bust.

"I discovered what was wrong with Ray during batting practice," said Billy. "He was leaning too much on his front foot, losing too long a stride and his timing and off balance, hitting from the wrong foot. He got his weight back on his back foot and his stride; he willingly took the advice and soon his started coming back." Southworth now is studying other batters with the hope he may help them by changing some little detail in their swing.

(Remember when)

Jimmy Braddock jumped from the obscurity of the wrestlers to the world's heavyweight boxing championship when he defeated Max Rear at New York nine years ago tonight. In dire financial circumstances the New Jersey belter was matched for the title one of the biggest ring upsets in years as he took a 15-round decision. Incidentally Braddock was referee wrestling bouts at the Hume Arena on two occasions since retiring from the boxing ring. Actually it is too bad that Jimmy Braddock couldn't time Braddock up to act as the third man in the ring for Wednesday night's feature between Villainous John Katan and Ralph Garibaldi, one of the finest sportsmen Belleville's from St. Louis. Incidentally Garibaldi was engaged expressly to try and put an end to Katan's unscrupulous ring antics here.

(Did you know—)

George Stirwelis, Yankee flyer, registered his first eight bag of the season for the McCartymen on the many attempts thereof. "The Point Commandos" will seek comspace in the Intermediate O.A.A. playoffs tonight when they entertain Trenton at the Bay of Quinte ball park. . . . It seems too bad to have to say . . . Cementmen's hitting power wasted in idle moments. Had a letter from Sergt. (Bud) Lickford yesterday in which he says, "Am getting fed up to flaky are all in the fortnite. . . . Jack Dempsey has gone to Montreal to referee a bout there. . . . Dempsey doesn't get much excitement in that combination. . . . Most men close to the boxing game might be called Golf Club bums for the reason that Dempsey offers...Look's sassy duties aren't confined to calculating boxing trim, but the "Bomber" hasn't done any compounding . . . No one would blame him for not mixing with Billy Conn at this late date. Conn has proved that he has nothing to gain as a champion. . . . Dempsey may be back over the heavyweight records Louis' behaviour right from the start will rank with the best.

Second Baseman for Baltimore Orioles Closely Watched by Big Loop Scouts

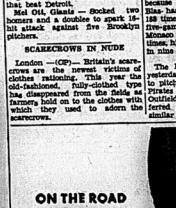
By The Canadian Press

Walloping the ball for a .345 average, second-baseman Jerry Priddy, lead-off man of the Baltimore Orioles, is being watched closely by major-league scouts but Manager Tom Ferrick of the International League leaders has been fighting shy of deals for the slugger because of "unrealistic aspirations." Priddy's leaders has been 101 out of 293 times at bat this season. In 1942 he was with Buffalo, Monson got on base 16 out of 38 times, had 10 home runs and drove in nine tallies.

The Draft Board at Pittsburgh yesterday gave classification 4-F to pitcher Nick Strincevich of the Pirates because of astric ulcers. Outfielder Vince DiMaggio was deferred pending X-ray tests when badminton singles trophy for several years.

Pitching Of Newhouser, Trout Boasts Hopes Of Detroit Tigers for Another A. L. Pennant

Hal Newhouser



By WALTER L. JOHNS
(Central Press Canadian)

Pitching wins pennants and 20-game winners are more or less prerequisites.

The Detroit Tigers, now edging toward the top of the American League standings, appear to have pitching and two 20-game winners in Hal Newhouser and Dizzy Trout.

Between them, Lefty Hal and Righthander Dizzy won 14 games by June 1. Newhouser's contribution to that total was eight victories, which is all he could win last season in 36 games.

Trout, the 20-game winner last year, appears to be on his way to another banner season and if Newhouser continues his present pace they should be setting the Tigers back in the world series picture they last appeared in after the 1940 season.

Dizzy Trout

Trout Star in '43.

At Beaumont, Trout was the pitching star of the league, winning 20 games and only losing 11 in 1943. That brought him to the Motor City and he has stayed on there since. At first he was used sparingly, pitching only in relief but he finished the season with 20 victories, in 36 innings pitched.

One season at Beaumont and he was brought up by the Tigers although he had no minor league record to marvel at.

In the past three seasons he has struck out at least 100 or more batters. His best season with the Texans was in 1940 when he won nine and lost nine.

From Beaumont.

Both Newhouser and Trout are products of the Tigers' farm at Beaumont in the Texas League. Trout, who is something of a colorful character when he burst into the majors, came to the Texas Rebels as a remarkably fast ball and strike out pitcher in the 1938 season.

Newhouser came up from Beaumont the next year.

Trout was bothered with wildness earlier in his career, has settled down and become one of the Tiger aces. He has a remarkably fast ball and strike out record to date.

At the same time, he walked more batters, 111, than any other pitcher in the league.

Trout began his career as an all-over-old youth. He hit the minors with Terre Haute and then moved up to AA ball with Indianapolis. Toledo was his next stop and then he was sent to the Tigers' Beaumont farm.

ON THE ROAD TO Mandalay

An airgraph letter received recently from a Canadian flier in India "on the road to Mandalay" says "I received another batch of Three Cups . . . Both cartons were in very good condition and the cigarettes were as fresh as the day they left the factory."

Whether Canadians go, Royal Cups go along. On every duty or, in the far North, in Great Britain, Royal Cups are standard equipment. The solace and cheer of the cigarettes which are first in their flavour ever have, over there, everywhere!

LESSON NO. 485

By SAM GORDON

The Situation

Yes, Tom. We soon start working on opening bids of more than one. Meantime, be sure you know responsibles. They are essential with any opening bids.

If one of the cards in your bid is a suit, you say that suit is biddable (better than average). If the cards with two faces, or two cards with one face, or any six cards. A face is a jack or higher.

A biddable suit is a suit that you can bid without fear. It not supported, you must not bid the same suit unless it is re-biddable. For a third time unless it is re-rebiddable.

Add honor to what it takes for a biddable suit and you have a re-biddable suit. Add an honor to that and you have a re-rebiddable suit. An honor is a ten or higher.

Adequate support for a biddable suit is a queen and two small; or any four. Adequate support for a rebiddable suit is one less; and for a re-rebiddable suit is one less than that.

With two equal length suits, first bid the higher rank. With two different length suits, first bid the longer. When one suit is two cards longer, bid it twice before the other.

That's a hunk of stuff about bids and support. And what I have not told you is the correct mathematical basis. But even amateurs expect do not seem to know it.

Take it easy with this pair of partnership hands.

South bids 1♠, North has adequate support for a re-rebiddable suit.

Many fall for lack of support.

With a cast as important as the one in "Birth of the Blues" it is practically a foregone conclusion that this wonderful music is going to receive full justice. And there's no plenty of free and easy fun between tunes. After all, it's not Bing Crosby and Mary Martin at the head of the cast.

Some of the songs heard in "Birth of the Blues" are those classical blues favorites "St. Louis Blues", "Memphis Blues", "Birth of the Blues", "St. James Infirmary Blues" and "At a Georgia Camp Meeting". Among the other popular numbers are "Melancholy Baby", "Basin Street Blues", "Diga Diga Doo", "Lover, Come Back to Me" and "Wait Till the Sun Shines Nellie".

In the picture, Bing Crosby, as a clarinetist and leader of a dance theatre leader who forms a band that becomes progressive blues music. Jack Teagarden who is conceded to be the noblest trombonist in the country, is his pal, who helps him round up the most talented instrumentalists in New Orleans' birthplace of blues music. Brian Donlevy portrays the role of the trumpet player. Lillie Carolyn Lee, the dainty beauty in "Stormy Weather in Salt" and "Virginia" is Mary Martin's tiny singing and dancing sister.

With this wealth of talent, under the direction of Leo McCarey, some great things can't fail to happen.

"Ladies Courageous"

Geraldine Fitzgerald, Diablo Swan, was featured in one of the former dramatic stars to reach Hollywood from the British stage, when she first came to America in 1936 to picture a few years ago.

In "Ladies Courageous", "Ladies Courageous" Universal feature thriller, which opens at the Capitol Carthy theatre, Miss Fitzgerald, pictured with glamorous Jean Parker, Young portrays Virgie Alford high-strung, reckless aviatrix who proves to be a valuable ace in the women's Auxiliary Ferrying Squadron, a civilian unit of the U.S. Army Air Force.

Miss Young portrays the executive officer of the WAFS and as the latter more responsible of the two pilots, Virgie has to carry the burden for the latter's foolish adventures.

Dorothy, Carolyn Lee, Jack Teagarden and Leo McCarey opens tomorrow at the McCarthy theatre.

"Birth of the Blues" sends out with a bang, a fine cast of performers including "The Waiter and the Porter and The Upstairs Maid." In this chronicle of how the first white bands took those blue and sad rides born of the levees and plantations and buried them across the nation through the scalding-hot jazzes, the clarinets and the throbbing trombones, Paramount has given a subject that's surefire for seven entertainment.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Birth of the Blues"

That historic, happy time in America's history when the spirit of lavender was crowded out by the hot, choppy swing of blue rhythms forms the dynamic and melodic background of "Birth of the Blues" Paramount's tribute to a form of music that America took to the heart and made its own as its text.

The melodic newcomer, whose cast scintillates with such stars as Bing Crosby, Mary Martin, Brian Donlevy, Carolyn Lee, Jack Teagarden and Leo McCarey opens tomorrow at the McCarthy theatre.

"Birth of the Blues" sends out with a bang a fine cast of performers including "The Waiter and the Porter and The Upstairs Maid." AT THE BELLE

"THE UNINVITED"

So much happens in Paramount's "The Uninvited" which opens at the Belle Theatre that the audience is left gasping for breath. The plot-twists and surprises succeed to keep movie fans in a dither.

Ray Milland, Ruth Hussey, Donald Crisp heading an exceptional cast of talented performers. Cornelia Otis Skinner and Alan Napier, the picture presents, for the first time in the screen career of Gail Russell. The story is one which combines the elements required for the theme is based on weird happenings in a Cornish country home, called Windward House.

The home is purchased by Milland and Miss Russell as a present for sister and brother, from Donald Crisp whose grandmother formerly owned it protects the sale, since it was at Windward House where her mother died in a plunge over the cliff which bordered the great estate. Disregarding partners' whisperings about the house being haunted, Ray and Ruth settle down to lead a quiet and peaceful life, but what a surprise they find in store for them.

Frightful sobbings awake them in the middle of the night, weird apparitions stalk the house continually, and cold, clammy fingers mysteriously bang doors and open windows in truly mysterious manner. To top it all off, Gail is apparently influenced by these spirits which plague her so and since by now he is deeply in love with the beautiful young lady.

So expert is the production that while the series of strange incidents defies all earthly conventions, the film has a peculiarly realistic value throughout. The tangled web of circumstances and the deep, dark mystery is finally cleared up but not before everyone in the audience has experienced that spine-tingling sensation of fear which causes the blood to race a little faster.

Donald Crisp, as the strait-laced grandfather, turns in an excellent performance while Cornelia Otis Skinner portrays a stern nurse to perfection. Also in the cast are a sterling group of supporting players including Barbara Everest, Ivan Simpson, Helena Herbert and Rita Page.

3 SWELL FEATURETTES

Three swell featurettes precede the feature attraction, including the Canadian short "Lumber Camp", a full-length reel Paramount musical Parade in Technicolor, "Lucky Cowboy" and a funny Popeye cartoon "Wood Pecklin'."

AT THE CAPITOL

"Queen of Broadway"

Lovely Rochelle Hudson appears as a famous Broadway sports betting commissioner in the PARA drama, "Queen of Broadway," which is now at the Capitol Theatre.

More beautiful than ever, Miss Hudson is given a very appealing role that carries a big heart-tug in her interest with a two-faced little tyke named Donald Mayo, six years old, possessing plenty of experience in pictures. Buster Crabbe, the handsome Western star, plays opposite Miss Hudson as owner of the Professional Football team having business dealings with the betting commissioner and more anxious to win the tale him on as her serious romantic interest.

This is brought about through the entrance of a little fellow, Donald, into her life. She is given temporary custody of the child upon the death of his mother. But when the court investigation learns that she is doing business as a betting tipster with a lot of colorful sports characters, the legal machinery is set in motion to send the child to an orphan asylum.

"Happy Land"

"Happy Land," Monday-Tuesday Kansas' touching story of a contemporary American family who gallantly struggle to keep together that can come to any man and woman, has been brought to the screen by 20th Century-Fox, and is now at the Capitol Theatre.

Heading the cast of the absorbing picture are Don Ameche, Frances Dee, Harry Carey and Ann Rutherford, with Cara Williams, Richard Crane, Harry Morgan, Minor Watson and Dickie Moore included in featured parts.

Irving Pichel directed the film, which was based on a story by Kenneth Musgrave from the screen play by Kathryn Scola and Julien Josephson.

The Canadian Universal News completes the big program.

GELSENKIRCHEN.

Somehow New Peak.

The campaign against German transport which began in March to peak yesterday, went on through the night virtually unabated as the hands of heavies, mediums and fighters hammered and crippled eastward into the lowlands.

Railroad centres at Arras, Amiens and Cambrai—key points on the route from Flanders to Normandy—and Poitiers, France, as well as bridges near Caen, were bombed. Medians augmented the assault with a blow at the great power marshalling area in the Forest of Orleans, southwest of Caen, dropping 180 tons of bombs. Concentrations in a few minutes with great devastation.

Also also in the railroad centre at Meddon, and ferry installations over the Seine at Duclair, in a continuation of the campaigns against ferries, which have been related to prevent the Nazis from staging a counter-attack from the Allied forces succeed in trapping them.

Twenty-three heavy bombers — including 15 Canadian craft—were lost in operations against the railroad centres in France and 17 more in the attacks on Cologne and Gelsenkirchen.

Also also in the medium bombers and fighter-bombers participating in the attacks on German communication centres. Thirty-six were shot down. Ten German ships fell to the Allies—six to Canadian squadrons. Four of these were shot down by Canadians and two by Spitfires. Eight more and another three were downed by R. C. A. F. Mosquito patrols.

One of the German Raiders over Britain was shot down.

Previous incomplete reports of yesterday's operations on the Pas de Calais mans had been shot down in the air and 17 on the ground. Allied losses were placed at seven heavy bombers, one medium bomber and 21 fighters.

Mosquito bombers that raced back and forth behind the German lines are intensifying the disruption of transport. Yesterday's attacks of last night had been crippled extensively. Today the Friday holiday began.

German Troops Shafed.

At one railroad station where German troops were dismounting from a train, one report was bombed, then went down to the ditch to "dig out" the troops with the our cannon."

Typical of chaos Allied support operations are visiting upon the German was the coup of rocket-carrying typhoons. They swooped down, fired up an ammunition truck which touched into a military building and blew it sky-high. A second truck, burning and exploding plunged into a quarry.

The Gelsenkirchen raid marked the first return of heavy bombers to strategic targets since the Invasion. The bombing was reported highly concentrated with several explosions exploded and great fires started and smoke towering more than three miles at the flame left.

One Plane Get Through.

The Luftwaffe, evidently trying to save their fighter for the week ahead in Normandy, sent a few planes over southern and eastern England, and got one lone plane through to London for the first time since April 27.

A few casualties were caused when some pieces were tossed into a building hit by a high-explosive bomb.

Raiders swept over parts of East Anglia and southern England. At least one was brought down.

The channel coast had one of the noisiest nights of the war. German guns lobbed shells from Cap Gris Nez which resulted in the issuing warnings in the Dover area between midnight and 6:30 a.m. Meantime the R.A.F. pounded the French coast and R.A.F. fighter-bombers swept over, appealing to attack German ships trying to escape up the coast of the continent.

CHURCHILL, SMUTS

Mr. Churchill spent an exciting day and it was obvious he enjoyed every minute of it. He and Smuts' man plane shot down while attempting to make a mock-raid on shipping in the bay of the decline. He saw battleships bombing the coast area with 15-inch rifles. His destroyer, H. M. S. Kelvin, joined in the bombardment of shore targets.

Typical of the soldiers' comment each time Mr. Churchill came into view was that of one private: "Winny!! It's Winston himself!"

Following a three-hour tour of the land fronts, the Prime Minister's party returned to H. M. S. Largs and toured some 30 miles of coastline, stating: "Gentlemen we be could pay tribute to the men of the small ships. At one point the battleships Nelson and Rambles and several cruisers were pounding the German lines with salvoes and the Prime Minister decided to visit the ships, passing closely so the men could see him clearly. He appeared greatly interested in the monitor Roberts, hammering the enemy with its 15-inch shells.

The Party.

The American party also travelled to France by destroyer. They drove quickly to within five miles of the fighting being waged in the Carentan sector and visited Isigny, captured two days before. In the Prime's party were Generals Eisenhood Gerhard—some of the bodies Smuts, Brigadier Cross the Canadian was stopped by a traffic jam. Eisenhower jumped from his car, gave a few quiet orders and things were straightened out quickly.

At one point of the tour the party made a 45-minute tour of the shore aboard a Canadian chaser, inspecting installations.

CHAPTER 13

The following day—Sunday—the whole household slept late and only assembled downstairs for brunch. Allan included, of course.

The sun was making up for lost time in a splurge of sunshine and heat, tempered by a soft ocean breeze, and so the meal was served on the terrace, and we all repaired into the garden after it, to loll under the trees, in the comfortably cushioned Adirondack chairs which had appeared miraculously, placed in just the right spots, surprise of the sudden prodigality of blossoms and scent, and scattering Sunday papers over the lawn.

It was very peaceful and homey —exactly what a summer week-end should be—and far, far removed from murder.

Aunt Millie remarked once that, thank heaven, only the local sheets mentioned the murder next door, and I stated, with great contentment, that Inspector Prinsepp had showed a proper respect for the Sabbath by staying home. And that was all that was said on the subject.

Only when I heard a distant clock strike four did the events of the last two days come back to me, and with them the threatened Forrestall invasion . . . I got up reluctantly to go into the house and discuss the problem of refreshments with Nellie and Mac.

The errand didn't take long, and proved superfluous besides. Preparations for an al fresco tea were in full swing when I entered the kitchen—but even so, the picture had altered when I went out again.

An unexpected visitor had arrived: Curtis Avery, Stella's pretty-boy husband, resplendent in the latest of country club togs, but red faced and tongue-tied with embarrassment.

Apparently his call was meant for Aunt Millie and me, and his awkward allusions to his wife's visit the afternoon before seemed to be for a private talk. But Aunt Millie was too lazy to put up. She only looked amused and just a trifle hysterical. And in the end I had to take pity on him by suggesting a stroll through the grounds, under pretext of wanting to find out the local name of some flowers I especially admired.

Once we were out of earshot we lost no time.

"I came to apologize for my wife," he told me, squirming and stretching his neck as if his collar were too tight. "I don't know precisely what happened, but Stella's flying by her terrible crying spell and complete collapse it must have been pretty awful and—er—she is sorry for it now and—it's hard to explain—but she really didn't mean to —er—"

"Excuse Miss Burton of murder?" I cut into his humming and hawing. "A supposedly Stella's insults of Amy out of consideration for the latter."

His jaw dropped. "She did—right out? I didn't realize it was that bad!"

"That bad and worse," I assured him.

"Really, Mr. Avery, you ought to do something to restrain your wife. After all, you're the head of the family—" I paused.

He grinned wryly. "Nominally—I guess so. But it's hard for a man to assert himself when one of his wife hold the purse strings and he—insanely jealous."

I felt like adding: "And knows you've married her for her money," but of course did nothing of the kind and asked instead: "You mean that Amy's made all these old charges against Gala because of the old story of—your elopement?"

"It wasn't an elopement," he said, firmly for him. "Please, Miss Wentworth, I want you to believe me. I was merely giving Miss Burton a lift. It—well—I hadn't told my wife about it for reasons of friendship. Not for Miss Burton. For someone else. That was my whole crime."

"And you haven't been able to convince her of your innocence for five years?" I was beginning to be sorry for him, his mercenary marriage notwithstanding.

"On the contrary. She's getting worse. Jealousy, I mean. I can't talk to an attractive woman without an aftermath of scenes. No matter how careful I am—"

He spread his hands in a gesture of such exaggerated despair, my budding sympathy turned into mirth.

"Careful not to give her cause for jealousy—or not to get caught?" I asked teasingly.

He evidently construed the remark into an invitation. "What gives you the idea of—your last conjecture?" he asked, with an unmistakable gleam in his eye.

It certainly was unexpected, and not at all what I wanted. "Oh—general broadness," I said lightly, and then changed the subject. "If your fears of yesterday were especially afraid you'll cancel your acceptance. It would be a blow to her—socially."

What a strange mind! Worrying about parties and social blows, and going around denouncing people for murder and illicit affairs, all at the same time!

"Oh, all right. Tell her I'll come, and so will my aunt." I told him, rather ill at ease and her Nellie should call it off in the last minute, it wouldn't be retaliation but very.

I could see the relief in his eyes. "Thank you. You are wonderful," he said feelingly. "I wish circumstances were different and I could show you better. But as it is —why—when I had the good fortune to be your chance last Thursday, I didn't dare open my mouth for fear of explanations for you—"

Without the would-be ardor of a few minutes before, I might have taken his words for an impersonal outburst of relief from against the restrictions imposed on him by his wife's jealousy. Now I was not so sure.

"I quite understand," I said briefly, and turned in the path to go back.

Curtis Avery plainly understood also. At any rate, he fell into step beside me without comment.

"Strange case this murder. And strange you finding the body," he remarked a moment later tentatively.

I had no more desire to discuss the murder with Curtis Avery's husband than to listen to the compliments. "Somebody had to find it", I said noncommittally.

"Yes, of course", he assented. "But it must have been a frightful shock. I can't understand Professor Stoddard, going there to rob the safe. Not for all the radium in the world."

I stopped short. "What do you know about radium?" I challenged suspiciously. "You told me!"

He looked like a small boy caught at stealing jam. "Why—Stella did", he stammered. "Shouldn't she have done it? Was it—a secret?"

My mind went back to last afternoon. Mrs. Libby had left before Stella's arrival. How had Stella found out about the radium?

"I didn't know she knew", I said as calmly as I could manage.

"Oh, but she did", he assured me in a confused way. "She talked about it at length. I thought, of course, she'd heard it from you".

"Did she stop my place before going home?" I asked, without taking the trouble to deny his assumption.

"She called on the aunt, Mrs. Libby to tell her what she'd found out, or thought she'd found out", he told me. "And she left into a terrible row with her."

Then that was where she had learned about the radium, I thought with an uncomfortable sense of relief. But I only said: "Oh? That's too bad", and hurried on to join the others.

Again the picture had changed during my absence.

The Forrestall incursion had materialized, and the house was filled with laughter and chatter—mostly feminine—and Forrestall.

The surprise at Curtis Avery's presence was palpable if short-lived and resulted in additional giggles by Alice and a slight grinning by Amy, who looked more smug than ever—and quickly forgotten over the misfortune of the bachelor moment; the fiance-who-was-there-no-more.

I have seldom seen anyone so utterly at his ease with the mental image I had hid of him in advance. Robert Jordan—dark, handsome, and distinguished, young man of indeterminate coloring and features, scarcely older than Alice and quite obviously overawed by the importance of his future relatives.

Everything about him proclaimed loudly his birth on the wrong side of the tracks, from the flamboyant ready-made suit that weighed his slim shoulders down with elephantine gaudeing, to the cringing elation with which he responded to the smallest friendly advance.

Have you energy for EXTRA things?

Margaret has . . .

"Operating a switchboard means I have to be alert, all day long," says Margaret. "When calls come thick and fast, it's a real strain . . . and then evenings, I'm busy teaching servicemen to dance. That takes more energy. So I keep fit . . . I watch my habits. But no unpleasant dosing! Instead, I ensure 'bulk' in my diet by eating Kellogg's Bran Flakes every morning. And are they delicious!"

Keep fit with Kelloggs every day in the year!

If you want to keep fit for 'active' things, take these two steps to health: 1. To get relief, consult your doctor. 2. To keep well, watch your diet for signs of constipation. Common constipation. Gently laxative, Kellogg's Bran Flakes with milk or cream provide "bulk" to help supply valuable mineral and vitamin needs. Add fruit for extra relief. Two tablespoonfuls of this ready-to-eat cereal daily. Made by Kellogg's in London, Canada.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, June 13 — (CP) — Index gains were posted for all four groups at noon today on the Toronto Stock Exchange, the industrials led with a gain of 1.62 and the golds and base metals added a scad, 42 respectively. WALL STREET

New York, June 13—(AP)— The stock market experienced another rush of buying today which pushed prices generally to the highest of recent years.

The first hour volume of 940,000 shares, the largest in a year, was attained on the strength of demand but as happened in yesterday's bit of activity buyers showed particular interest in shares of companies already counting on huge backlogs of civilian business with the ending of the war.

Late in the fourth hour there was some retreat from the highs in a few parts of the list.

Canadian issues were fractionally higher. Dome and Seagrams showed gains of 1.8 while Hiram Walker slipped by the same fraction.

At better levels were such stocks as Chrysler, Packard, U. S. Rubber, Goodyear, Montgomery Ward, Case, Studebaker, Deere Farm, Pepperell, Johns-Manville, Eastman Kodak, Canadian Pacific, Paramount and Twentieth Century Fox.

Allied Troops, Tanks, Equipment Move up in N.E.

By ROGER D. GREENE
(AP War Correspondent)

With the Allied Armies in France, June 13 — (AP) — Allied troops, tanks and heavy equipment moved up today through the mine-cluttered roads in the northeast sector of the Normandy battle, and the Germans also were reported bringing reinforcements, including tanks, to this area.

(This appointment referred to the Caen district where the Germans have been holding British and Canadian forces in heavy fighting over since the original landings a week ago. The arrival of armored reinforcements on both sides suggested that still heavier tank contests may be in prospect.)

In this region just under 100 tanks are believed to have been damaged, although some of these possibly are recoverable.

Christ Celebrated

Corpus Christi was celebrated at Sacred Heart Church on Sunday with High Mass celebrated by Rev. E. J. Farrell at 10 a.m. Rev. Father O. Gillen of Ottawa, preached in the sanctuary. Heavy Overhead Costs Eliminated By Administering Five Utilities Under One Staff Rotary Club Told

Administration of five different utilities by one staff thus eliminating heavy overhead costs, is one of the main reasons why residents of this city enjoy low utilities rates, Cecil Scott, Public Utilities Commissioner here, told the Belleville Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon on Monday.

"These utilities, which stand on their own feet, water, gas, electricity, merchandising and rural electrics, the latter embracing 21 millesies of line serving 1,200 customers, are carrying the direct cost of their own department as well as the general cost of the utilities. Its all against the careless component of local rates with these utilities carrying what they are entitled to detail."

In a report read to the Electrical Convention in Toronto this year, the speaker said, Hotel Belleville as a 440h in 365 cities, listed in order of cost of power. The average cost per kilowatt hour was $20.66. In the same group Fort William came in below it .67 cents and that of Ottawa .86 cents.

In retail power, based on an average monthly total of 150 kilowatt hours, the city's cost is $16.26. That of Orillia is $14.80; St. Thomas, $14.75; Niagara Falls, $17.70; and St. Catharines $28.

Mayor Ivor Dyemond, K.C., presided.

Announcement that the new million gallon reservoir is now in operation was made by Rotarian Harry Aylsworth, "the day the line last Thursday," he said and has been operating every day. It is 184 feet long, 87 feet wide and thirteen feet deep. It holds one million gallons of clear sterile water and is connected with filters raled with a capacity of four million gallons daily.

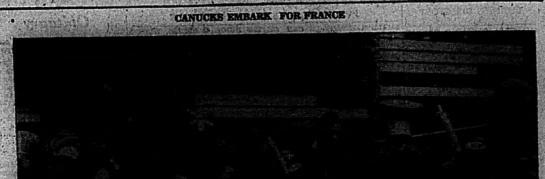
Describing in detail the new addition to the Filtration Plant, Rotarian Scott told his fellow citizens, that the plant has 30,000 gallon capacity for one solid one quarter million gallons of water by use if trouble occurs with electrical power. A standby engine operated by gasoline is ready to start at a moment's notice in case of emergency.

While the filter plant is rated as 4,000,00 gallons daily, at times a greater amount than this has had to be filtered, while sand has been generally used in the filters, a new filter, anthrafil, a form of coal dust, has been used to good advantage.

The Valley Excellent.

The water in the city was rated as excellent at all times, while the water in the Bay of Quinte has a rating of Class D. Analysis of the water is made at the Belleville General Hospital while samples are sent from time to time to the Department of Health.

The speaker watched carefully and conditions are closely checked," he said. We must be on the job at all times at the filtration plant and I am safe in saying that the water works department of your Public Utilities is in safe hands."



Mayor Harry Rollins and Public Utilities Commissioner Scott were also Along Chairman Mosley Duff were guests at the luncheon. The speaker was introduced by President Jack Deacon who established that Harry Aylsworth, Rotarian, originally scheduled to speak, was unable to attend due to an illness of a brother. Club appreciation was expressed by Rotarian Mosley.

ANOTHER SPAN FOR BRIDGE OF SHIPS

As the men and women who helped shape her hulking sides watched with a special air born of numerous launchings before, the S.S. Westend Park, 300th freighter built in Canada since the start of the war was launched in Vancouver, hub of Canada's Wartime Cargo Shipbuilding industry. Of the 300 ships launched to date, less than 26 were 4,700-freighters, the remainder being of the 10,000-ton variety. Of the eight yards turning out the large cargo vessels, six are located on the Pacific Coast, four of them in Vancouver alone. Mrs. T. R. McMillan, wife of the original head of Wartime Merchant Shipping, officiated at the Burrard Yards launching.

GREAT BATTLES RAGE AT OPPOSITE ENDS OF LINE ALLIES BY-PASS HEAVILY-DEFENDED ORBETELLO

Germans Hurl Four Armored Divisions Into Fierce Fighting

Montebourg and Troarn Change Hands in Last 24 Hrs.

(By WES GALLAGHER, AP WAR CORRESPONDENT)

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 14 — (AP) — The Germans have flung four armored divisions into fierce fighting to hold their eastern battleline bastion of Caen, the Allied Command announced tonight, and heavy fighting is raging at Montebourg and and Troarn at opposite ends of the 100-mile front with both towns changing hands in the last 24 hours.

The savage German counter-action on the eastern flank in Normandy followed a British armored drive 23 miles inland, outflanking Caen from the west, and the armored struggle is rising in intensity.

The four Nazi armored divisions were hurled into the area between Caen and Cabourg, 20 miles southwest, seized in the hard British punch.

BATTLESHIPS ASSIST TROOPS.

American troops fought the Germans fiercely for Montebourg, 14 miles southeast of the strategic port of Cherbourg, and the great guns of the British battleships Ramillies and Warspite thundered in support of the British-Canadian fight to hold Troarn, town eight miles east of Caen taken in an outflanking drive on that bastion to the east of the Orne river. The British 6th Airborne Division, which included Canadian paratroopers, landed in this vicinity on D-Day.

Both Germans and the Allies have fought into and beyond Troarn, of Montebourg and Troarn in the last 24 hours, headquarters said.

The greatest single striking force of planes in war's history—1,500 American heavy bombers—battered targets in France and Germany today in an air support of the invasion.

Largest Yet Thrown In.

The U.S. force in Normandy is the largest yet thrown into the fighting in any theatre in this war.

In the German area, south of Montebourg — other Americans chopped their way to the west in defence of Cherbourg Peninsula.

American armored forces there smashed at the heart of Nazi and a Berlin broadcast acknowledged a withdrawal of several miles west and north of Carentan, with the Allies thus apparently cutting half to two-thirds of the way across the narrowest neck of the peninsula.

Headquarters of Americans fighting for Montebourg area had to give some ground along the road to the sea.

"In some areas we continued our advance and in others the Germans counter-attacked with considerable success," Supreme Command said in describing the violent battlefront.

Four Divisions Named.

The four Nazi armored divisions plunged into battle around Caen, Fifty-first Scottish Infantry Division included the 21st and 12th S.S. Panzers, not known whether all the armor of these units was committed in battle, but all their battalions were. The Canadian 3rd division is operating in the sector around and between Bayeux and Caen.

The Germans said Caen itself was in flames and was being attacked on all sides. Berlin also reported Allied armored thrusts south of Carentan.

Gen. Montgomery launched a supreme on Caen with thrusts reaching up to within 10 miles of the city southwest of the big anchor city.

2,250 BOMBERS ATTACK FRANCE AND GERMANY

Oil Lifelines From Hitler's Thirsty War Machine Hit Hard By U.S. Planes

AIR BASES RAIDED

By GLADWIN HILL

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 14—(AP)—Fifteen hundred United States heavy bombers—the greatest single striking force in air history — attacked France and Germany today in concert with up to 750 American fighters which struck Hungary and Yugoslavia from Italy.

The oil lifelines from Hitler's thirsty war machine were hit hard, part of the big task force from Britain hitting the oil refinery at Emmerich, Germany, while the Mediterranean forces attacked half a dozen oil refineries in Hungary and Yugoslavia — including the Blue Danube, the area south of Budapest, the largest in Hungary.

Other British-based planes bombers aimed their bombs at six enemy air bases beyond the beachhead in the unrelenting campaign to wipe out nests of German air power opposing Allied landings in Northern France and Belgium.

Supreme Headquarters announced that in the first seven days of invasion, 16,000 individual flights were made by the Allied air forces with the loss of 864 planes, 289 of them on the days of the attacking forces.

On that time 42,000 tons of bombs were dropped.

The Mediterranean force aggregating upwards of 1,500 bombers and fighters attacked the Hungarian oil refineries at the Le Bourget and Creil air fields at Paris, Etampes-Mondeir and Chateaudun in France, Brussels-Melsbroeck and Eindhoven in Belgium.

Meanwhile, another American force, operating from the British radio said, surged up from Italy for its second day of heavy attacks on German heavy attacks from the south in the Munich area both yesterday and last night.

Take Advantage of Weather.

The Allies took full advantage of last night's weather in stepping up the campaign to destroy fighting forces and strategic targets far behind the battlefront. Just around Brevilles' Well, Jerry's found it at last and he's coming through. We have a report of at least 600 panzer grenadiers, advancing through the woods and believe they're going to try to drive through Ranville to break out from the gain on the east bank of the river. Well, what we are going to do to those Jerries should make a nice little story for you. Look." He pointed along the walls and through the orchards, and when you looked hard you could see British troops everywhere.

They were well dug in among bushes and grass, and only the green camouflaged tops of their helmets poked above the skyline. Here and there were clumps of dead Bren, heavy machine-guns and Sten.

It was just before noon that we saw our first Germans. Over on the other side of the dropping zone you could suddenly see figures moving among trees. We watched them forming up into batches of 10 to 15 men.

No one fired at them.

Attack In Batches.

Shortly after noon Saturday the German attack began. In batches, parties of 10 and 15 crept out over 200 or 300 yards, the German infantrymen came in on a run. They moved through the waving corn in the black plow-land until they reached a line of wrecked gliders. Then, they fell on their faces and lay there. After a few minutes they got up again, ran forward, then fell flat again. It went on like that for about 400 yards. Still, no one fired.

From somewhere in the wood behind us a machine-gun opened going into action and its shells fell all around us and in the scattered rows of gravestones in a church yard. Splinters fell around us. There were casualties. But there was no retaliation.

The butcher-bearers wriggled forward and dragged wounded men back, they showed themselves against the skyline.

Now the enemy was gaining confidence from the stillness. Smelling no danger, his loping advances were longer, his periods flat on the ground of only a few seconds' duration. He came on fast. He got on coming until he was about 100 yards away. Then at a pre-arranged signal every automatic weapon, every rifle in the whole front line opened up. It was a roar that set your teeth chattering with delight.

You suddenly saw the Germans disappear. Like ninepins, their bodies, throwing up their hands, were falling by the dozen into the corn. They all flung themselves down and the British paratroops continued their fire.

Rain of Bullets.

A rain of bullets surged across those 100 yards of French farm land and battered into the paddies on the grass. The earth was scuffed up in showers of corn and weed down as if under a flail.

But the Germans weren't beaten yet. One of their officers rose to his feet and called to his men, and they began to crawl forward once more. This time the paratroops held their fire even longer, and it was 25 to 30 yards when the small arms barrage hit the enemy.

In writhing heaps the Germans went down. And now the remnants turned and began to run. Once only a few made the shelter of nearby woods, for now our shells and mortars came into play and plastered a river of steel between the enemy and the sanctuary for which he was racing.

By 1 o'clock it was all over, and the dropping zone was littered now not only with gliders and container, but with hundreds of enemy dead and enemy wounded.

Back in the woods those Nazi troops who had made it were joined by reinforcements and there, moving green shadows, they reformed and planned how to get out.

But they were not given a chance. All through the woods, hidden in trees, ditches and slit trenches, the paratroopers' British parachutists were waiting for them. Around 4 o'clock a squadron of Sherman tanks rumbled up to where most of the Germans were concentrated and began to flush them out, firing from their big guns into the trees, machine-gunning as they went.

The Germans began to retreat. Their retreat was the wrong way for them, and once more it was massacre. Sten gun bullets hit them from such close range they were torn to pieces.

Mortified Nazis threw up their hands and tried to surrender. If they did, they were shot. They were allowed to come in only if they were carrying a large section of

British Paratroops Ambush Panzer Grenadier Regiment, Kill 400 and Capture 2,000

(Daily Sketch war correspondent; released through the British Broadcasting Service and distributed by The Canadian Press.)

With the British 6th Airborne Division, France, June 14 —(CP)— Paratroop Captain Charles Bliss had that grin on his face that always means something brewing.

"This, old Charles," is going to be good. Do you remember the gap we left in the front just around Breville? Well, Jerry's found it at last and he's coming through. We have a report of at least 600 panzer grenadiers, advancing through the woods and believe they're going to try to drive through Ranville to break out from the gain on the east bank of the river. RUSSIANS WITHIN THIRTY MILES OF PORT OF VIIPURI

Whole North Front From Arctic to The White Sea and Gulf Of Finland Ablaze

IN SECOND DEFENCES

London, June 14 —(CP)— Red Army troops have advanced to within 30 miles of the important port of Viipuri, crushing Finnish troops resisting from strongly-fortified position, Moscow announced today while enemy reports said Russia's whole northern front from the Arctic to the White Sea and Gulf of Finland was ablaze with action.

Finnish and German radio broadcasts declared the Russians were attacking in the Lisa sector between the Arctic ports of Murmansk and Petsamo, and Berlin asserted Soviet forces also were striking southwest of Novaya in Estonia.

In addition, the broadcasts said, there was pressure on the entire 175 the Kandalaksha sector on the shore of the White Sea, 90 miles northwest of Viipuri, and near Loukhi, on the railway from Archangel across Finland to the gulf of Bothnia.

The Moscow communique was restricted to the Karelian Isthmus sector, saying Soviet troops captured several Finnish strongpoints during yesterday's battling and that they are in the area of Kuparsaari, taken Monday. These were Stationhantajen, Kuparsaari, Kuparsaari and Tiiramajaki.

The Finnish line, within 30 miles of the Mannerheim line, main defence barrier across the Karelian Isthmus, after crossing the provincial Baron Mannerheim, Finnish commander-in-chief, then visited the battle area.

5th Army Captures Another Important Road Junction

In the East 8th Army Advances Sixty Miles North Of Italian Capital

CLOSE IN ON NARNI

By LYNN HEINZERLING
(AP War Correspondent)

Rome, June 14. (AP)—Fifth army elements have swung around the heavily-defended spring point or Orbetello, 11 miles northwest of Rome, and captured the important junction of highways No. 1 and 74, some 4 1-3 miles beyond the town, Allied headquarters announced today.

Reconnaissance elements pushed still further north.

"In the central sector our troops, having encountered increased resistance south of Orbetello, gained ground in the hills to the mountains and late June 13 cut the road junction of highway No. 1 and 74," said the headquarters communique. "Reconnaissance elements are moving further north".

(This movement presumably blocked life retreat route of the Germans defending Orbetello.)

In the east the 8th Army advanced sixty miles north of Rome.

Gains elsewhere made both east and west of Lake Bolsena and allied troops were closing in on Narni, 7 1-2 miles below Terni and 43 miles due north of Rome.

The town of Latera, four miles northeast of Orbetello, was gained by 5th army units and the advance moved on towards Canino, less than two miles further northeast.

Other 5th Army forces were closing in on Bolsena, on the eastern shore of the lake.

Meanwhile the 8th Army continued to march up the Tiber valley in a broad front and armored units penetrated several miles north of Magliano.

These troops were advancing under heavy artillery fire from enemy observation posts high in the hills. Two thousand Allied aircraft covered the forward troops two days ago, the Germans apparently having determined to withdraw overnight shell from their dumps as they fall back.

While the Germans were withdrawing in some places without resistance, elsewhere advanced allied patrols encountered concentrated fire from machine-guns and mortars.

The Germans were planting Teller mines wherever they had time, and continued demolitions on a wide scale.

Tattered remnants thrown in to stop the allied advance even included a number of cavalry units with much horse-drawn artillery.

Broaden Activities

The Mediterranean Air Force, besides providing support for the advance north of Rome, broadened its activities to the Po valley.

CHURCHILL GAINS POSTPONEMENT OF DE GAULLE DEBATE

Tells House It Would Do More Harm Than Good at Present

NO REFERENCE TO WAR

By ALEX SINGLETON
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

London, June 14 (AP)—Prime Minister Winston Churchill today obtained a postponement of full-dress debate in the House of Commons on the controversial issue of British-American relations with the French committee of National Liberation, pouncing on a demand for a showdown with the assertion "it would do more harm than good at present."

In his first appearance before the House since his trip to the battle-head in Normandy Monday, Mr. Churchill made only scant reference to the progress of the war, declaring that any anxiety over the Gaullo committee question "should properly be directed to our gallant soldiers and to the great operations, which are in progress, which give hope as well as anxiety."

The Prime Minister contended full discussion of the subject should be held off until negotiations among the French committee, Britain and the United States can be completed.

The House of Commons turned to other subjects after Mr. Churchill said he would not be seeking to delay the debate "if I had no hopes of a better solution than I can announce at the present time."

Hard Days Ahead.

He warned the House that a debate on relations with Gen. De Gaulle's committee "would not help at the present time and asked that it be delayed. He explained after negotiations between one committee of National Liberation and British and the United States are completed.

"The government has taken great trouble over the conduct of this business and I am sure that it may be said that it has been conducted with utmost care," the Premier declared, amid cheers.

"When you look at the advance in Italy and the extraordinary advance across the channel a fortnight ago you should consider that the administration has a right to ask confidence of the House when they state that they do not want to have the matter forced to be discussed."

Responds to Questions.

9 Canadians Stage Modern Version Of 'Charge of the Light Brigade'

By CHARLES LYNCH
Reuters War Correspondent
With Canadian Forces in France, June 14 — (CP-Reuters)—A modern version of the "Light Brigade" charge was staged by a Canadian infantry company supported by tanks in an attack which was also a success, but savagely through to the objective.

The attack was staged at a village thought to be a German strongpoint.

When the tanks and infantry were in the middle of a wheatfield near the objective, German guns and machine-gun emplacements hidden in the wheat opened up on them. Fire poured in from right, left and centre.

The nine men led by a Canadian lieutenant fought their way through the hail of fire and finally found themselves on the outskirts of the village. The lieutenant, who had a bullet wound in his leg, turned to his men and said "Are you game to go in and clean it up?"

Then here on Sergeant Sam Scrutton of Toronto tells the story:

We were game because he was leading us. He headed along a line picking Jerries out of hill trenches and dugouts. He was very cool. He must have killed about 50 of them. Then he turned to me and told me to town shooting Jerries wherever we found them. I don't know why they didn't shoot us. I guess they were scared.

When we reached the other end of the town one of our own tanks knocked it out. I guess we didn't think any of our infantry had got that far after the business in the wheat field.

"Then the Jerries started mortaring us so we jumped into a big bomb crater beside the road. The lieutenant was hit in the leg which had fired at us and shouted to give him a hand. He and the tank commander, whose head was bandaged, got him in. Another was dead.

"The shells were yelling up at the tank the lieutenant got his second wound—another bullet in the leg. He managed to crawl back into the crater.

"We decided to make a run for it and jumper up out of the crater. The lieutenant had just reached the road when he got his third wound, a bullet in the leg and in the back. He fell but was still conscious.

"As we walked along we killed five more Jerries in slit trenches. Then machine-gun fire and shells straggled along and we all piled forward—two of us lying across the lieutenant to keep him from getting wounded again.

"We were fired at when we crossed the wheat field again, and going down to give a hand the Jerries were throwing grenades which kept bursting right behind us, finally we got to a place where there were Canadian tanks. The tank captain said he couldn't take us any further.

"The five of us who were not wounded jumped down. The lieutenant stayed on and the tank took him to a field dressing station. We walked back to our own lines.

The five who walked back were Sergeant Scrutton, Corporal Jack Jackson, Brantford, Ont., Rifleman Bill Sandwell, Rifleman Jack Bell of Toronto, and Rifmn. K. McGrimm, of Prince Rupert, B.C.

French Undermining Huns' Best-Laid Plans to Combat Allied Invasion

By CHARLES S. POLTZ
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Madrid, June 14. (AP)—Reports from underground movements in France that a methodic, persistent raising by the greater part of the French people is undermining the Germans best-laid plans to combat Allied invasion.

These advices, filtering through Spanish points on the France-Spanish frontier and through diplomatic channels, indicate that almost the organized underground were actively leading Frenchmen in sabotage with arms and munitions supplied by planes.

The Nazis recognized the danger was demonstrated by an order requiring 11 departments in Central France and parts of four others under the same military rules as those prevailing in the Atlantic coast zones.

From Irun came a report that Maquis and guerilla fighters are fiercely hold the city of Tarbes, in the foothills of the Pyrenees, thereby cutting off a large section of Southern France from the Mediterranean road and rail route so important to German supply of Spain and Perigueux were out of communication, with the rest of France. In the Limousin mountains and the Massif Central, Maquis in Vienne and Correze departments a powerful force of 15,000 men, well armed, is living with arms and munitions supplied by planes.

The Nazis Mediterranean frontier at Portbou it was reported guerillas and Maquis of Evop were moving westward across the Rhone toward the great central Alps area, and several volunteers from Vichy gendarmerie have joined them.

Will Celebrate Holiday July 1st

By The Canadian Press

Regardless of what the calendar may say, July 1 is celebrated as Dominion Day this year as usual—on Saturday, July 1.

The official date remains July 1, and a survey by the Canadian Press today showed that celebrations across the country are celebrating that day, although here and there a few industries are taking the day off on July 3, the first Monday of the month.

Dominion Day is one of the six wartime statutory holidays. Early last year it was decided to celebrate the holiday on the first Monday in July, but before the day arrived the order-in-council was passed reinstating July 1 as the observance date. A number were calendars were however were printed with the holiday date shown as July 3, which led to some confusion this year. The state secretary's department has since recently made it clear that the date is the first of the month.

FO. N. BRADFORD IN CRASH LANDING ON NORMAN BEACH

He and Pilot of Mosquito Are Returned to England on Transport

By MARGARET ECKER

A Forward British Airfield, June 13 —(CP)— Six Canadian soldiers were among the first battle casualties evacuated by air today from the front line in Normandy to emergency hospitals in England by the R. A. F. Transport Command.

Less than two hours after a big transport plane lifted them from a casualty clearing station on an airfield within range of snipers' guns, the men were in bed in a tented air evacuation centre nestling in the English countryside.

Three planes were the pathfinders for the flying service which will bring Allied wounded quickly to the most expert medical care. As a pioneer effort it put the spotlight on obstacles of the expedition. The first plane was grounded in Normandy, where a gale whipped sand over the plane and patients for more than six hours.

Pte. Philip Edgar Karn of Kitchener, Ont., was still in battledress when the first plane brought him to England. His leg was torn by a shell burst and he was rushed to an ambulance.

Also aboard the plane was a weary little W.A.A.F., Orderly Cpl. Lydia Alford, first British servicewoman to land on French soil since Dunkerque.

Belleville Boy Aboard.

A couple more Canadians aboard the transport were PO. Len Kearney, Toronto, a Mosquito pilot, and Navigator PO. Norman Bradford, Belleville, Ont., who had to crash-land on the beachhead when flak damaged their plane.

They boasted: "Before the beachhead opened the boys who crashed sure didn't get out this easy."

Kearney added: "If that story is going to Canada, tell my mom not to worry. I'm all right."

There were Canadian, British, American and French soldiers aboard the second and third planes to return.

Pte. James Curran of Finch, Ont., whose foot was injured, could hardly realize that a few hours before he had been in the front line with his unit.

"We'd done three solid days and nights and I guess we used every type of warfare there is in that front line," he said. "I won't say the going wasn't tough, but the Jerries are still going in the right direction."

Napanee Man Injured.

Sgt. George Macdonald of Napanee, Ont., another casualty, was injured while with his unit, which had just taken a village.

"We had to fight hard to get that town," he said, "and we'd just dug in when the Jerries counter-attacked with mortars. They got a lot of men, but when I left the Canadians were still holding."

That was less than eight hours before the sergeant was in hospital in Britain.

Sgt. Bert McDermotte of Toronto was brought back with wounds in the arms and legs. He had been wounded by mortar fire. Pte. Georges Derie of a French-Canadian regiment, who spoke no English, also was brought by air to Britain.

Another Canadian, bullet wounds in his chest, may owe his life to the flying rescue ship. He had contracted pneumonia in France, and oxygen had to be administered to him by the W.A.A.F. nursing orderly as the plane rushed him to England.

There was a Canadian hitchhiker on the third plane. He was Flt. Sgt. Bill Saunders of Montreal, whose plane had been shot down a few hours before.

Navigator FO. Norman Bradford is the youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. David Bradford of Corbyville, Sr., formerly of Belleville. He enlisted in the R. C. A. F. on leaving Belleville Collegiate, received some of his training hereabouts and left for overseas in December 1942.

His brother, Pte. Robert Bradford, was wounded last summer in Sicily and is back with the Central Mediterranean Force. Another brother, Sub Lieutenant Jack Bradford has been in the R. C. N. V. R., since early in the war and recently received his commission.

Airman Killed When Bomb Falls At Mountain View

While loading practice bombs to the carrier of a plane at the Mountain View R. C. A. F. base, AC1 William H. Beasley, 47 Cameron Ave., Ottawa, was accidentally killed Monday afternoon when the bomb fell and exploded at his feet. He died before he could be admitted to hospital.

AC1 Beasley was engaged in loading practice bombs in the plane bomb bay when in some unexplainable manner one of the bombs slipped and fell to the ground where it exploded beneath the airman. Although Beasley was badly injured strangely enough no serious damage resulted to the bombing plane that was being serviced. Mountain View R. C. A. F. officials today announced that the next of kin in Ottawa had been notified.

Not Many Takers

An invitation for members of the local Kiwanis club to become farmers in their own right by planting and harvesting their winter needs in potatoes was expressed by Kiwanian Jack White at luncheon meeting on Tuesday, when he indicated he would supply the land and the implements. Some seven miles out from the city Mr. White stated he had a suitable acreage of land and intimated he would supply the necessary implements to work with—all that was needed was some action on the part of club members.

For some reason, however, the would-be benefactor was not overly flooded with applications from enthused Kiwanians anxious to get into the potato business. Mr. White still has hopes however, mindful of the fact that Kiwanians will need a bit of time to consider the matter.

Kiwanians Hear Prof. Reynolds

Although admitting the international policy of Great Britain toward other countries in certain instances might have been improved upon in the past, her treatment of conquered countries had left but little to be desired, members of the local Kiwanis club were told at their regular weekly meeting Tuesday noon. Guest speaker for the occasion was Professor J. B. Reynolds, M.A., LL.D., former principal of Ontario Agricultural College, who addressed the club on British solidarity.

The speaker reviewed the war situation pointing out the change of conditions from the time of the blitz of London until now, when the Allied nations have become masters of the situation. He doubted if the people of Allied nations deserved the providential intervention, which had changed the tide of battle and cited thorough training, thorough discipline, together with orginality and initiative as being in no small measure responsible.

Upholds Willkie's Idea.

For the post-war world the speaker upheld Wendell Willkie's idea of unity among the nations and held the present war in a certain measure the result of the policy followed after the last Great War when Europe had been divided into many small nations incapable of their own defence. Hitler had taken advantage of this fact to begin his program of world domination.

The policy of Germany toward conquered nations was one of complete domination, while in contrast that of Britain had been to give freedom wherever feasible. As a closing note the speaker invited comparison of the British and German policy toward conquered nations.

Sympathy Expressed.

The sympathy of the club was extended by President Jack McVeigh to Mr. J. Owen Herity in the loss of his wife. The business session of the meeting was brief with Ray Grant asking members of the chicken project committee to contact schools prior to their closing to check on progress, while registration for attendance at the Kingston inter-club meeting and a boat excursion trip to Port Dalhousie being taken by Eddie Logan. Quite a number of the local club expressed their intention of taking in both. Alec Gordon acted as pianist with Ray Grant introducing the guest speaker and club appreciation being expressed by Len Foxard.

POLICE BLOTTER

Police were called to two local residences to investigate family disturbances reported by neighbors last night. One was at 78 Victoria Ave., and the other at 97 Station Street.

Children playing at ball are being blamed for the breaking of windows and a neon sign at Lloyd's service station at the intersection of Coleman and Bridge streets recently. Police were asked to discourage the practice in order to save further property damage.

City police located a seven-year-old Picton boy who had wandered away from his home yesterday and after hitch-hiking to Belleville was found visiting friends on Station St. He was returned none the worse for his outing although relatives spent a rather anxious afternoon after the boy was found to. Some were too late and got a burst that flung them to the ground. Only a few snipers were left by Saturday evening, and their fire was sporadic.

On Sunday morning the Germans tried again to blast through to Ranville.

Once more they came in batches, and once more the British soldiers mowed them down. That same morning they had had enough and went limping away to the safety of the marshes beyond the river Orne.

With the men who had killed them—boys from Lancashire, Yorkshire, Somerset—I went into the woods to see the flotsam and jetsam this short but bloody war had left. At least 400 had been killed and nearly 2,000 made prisoners. And in breaking the whole of a German regiment and capturing its commander, British losses did not number over 50 all told, including wounded.

Our troops are hoping the enemy will try to break through the Breville gap again—and soon.

PETER H. FOX, 78, WAS PIONEER OF 'PHONE SYSTEM

Hobby Grew, Eventually Into Independent Telephone Company in P. E. County

Toronto, June 16.—(CP)—One of the Canadian pioneers of the telephone system, Peter H. Fox, of Northumberland, Prince Edward county, died yesterday from his residence here. He was in his 79th year and had lived in Toronto for the past 30 years.

In 1896, when Mr. Fox was 32 years of age, he started out on a hobby that grew into a large independent telephone company service some 700 subscribers in Prince Edward County.

From crude hand tools he made the equipment that was responsible for the first telephone system in the county, a service between his own and his fathers' home.

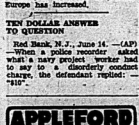
Mechanical-minded he had served since he was 18 years of age as the "Great North Western telegraph operator in the community.

Mr. Fox later built the first telephone service for the use of fire rangers in Algonquin Park.

After devoting much of his time to organizing independent telephone systems throughout Canada, Mr. Fox engaged in the electrical business in Toronto, retiring in 1938. He was a member of the United Church, Quinte Lodge, A. F. & A. M., Rameses Shrine and the Governor Simcoe Branch, U.E.L.

He is survived by one son, two sisters and a brother. Interment was at Albury Cemetery, near Belleville.

400,000 Tons Bombs Dropped Since War Began



London, June 16—(AP)—The R. A. F. has dropped 400,000 tons of high explosive and incendiary bombs since the war began with more than 275,000 tons smashing targets in Germany, headquarters announced today.

The first 100,000 tons were dropped between 1940 and the spring of 1943 and the second "in a bare seven months."

To the end of 1943 the tonnage dropped on targets in occupied countries was "comparatively small" but since the switch to pre-invasion bombing in March of this year the weight of bombs dropped on targets in occupied countries of Western Europe has increased.

Premier Stalin Praises Allies For Invasion

By EDDY GILMORE
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

Moscow, June 14. (AP)—Premier Stalin paid tribute to Allied fighting last night for their invasion of France, declaring that "the history of war does not know any such undertaking as broad in conception, so grandiose in scale, and so masterly in execution."

Stalin was in high spirits and rare form, describing Hitler as "an hysterical man" who had waited for years that he would cross the Channel but never risked the attempt. He also pointed out that Napoleon failed in his plan to cross the Channel and conquer Britain.

"Only the British and American troops succeeded in honorably fulfilling the grand task of crossing the Channel and making a mass landing of troops," Stalin said. "History will record this as all achievement of the highest order."

Stalin's estimate of the western invasion was made in a statement given to foreign correspondents and later put on the Moscow radio to be repeated several times and broadcast through the land.

British and American diplomats and militarists in Moscow called the statement a masterly utterance characteristic of the Soviet leader in his directness and sharpness.

Stalin said: "On summarizing the seven days' battles for liberation by the Allied troops invading Northern France, one can without hesitation say that the wide crossing of the Channel and the mass landing operations of the Allies in Northern France have succeeded fully. This is doubtless a brilliant success of our Allies".

The War Today—
Montgomery Outwits Rommel, Extends Front to About 100 Miles

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Allied Press War Analyst

The Allied action in the furious and field battle of the Chertsoury peninsula has reached a climax. We witness the extension of their front from 60 miles to about 100 during the past three days despite determined resistance.

General Montgomery is exhibiting all the skill and initiative which have made him famous. Right from the start he has used every ounce of the great advantage at his disposal not only to lengthen the front but, more important, to extend its depth and increase dangerous beaches and gain strategic points so as to prepare for the counter-attack which still is to come. As a result we appear to be in good shape to meet this crucial test.

In connection with this anxiously awaited "Nazi counter-assault, we get the highly interesting report that Generalfeldmarschall Von Kesselring, who is commanding the Nazi field forces for the defense of Hitler's Atlantic wall, has had a clash with his boss, Marshal Von Rundstedt, an old-guard Prussian of the square-head school. We are told that Rommel, a tactical genius and a man of quick action — wanted to fling reserves into the peninsula as fast as possible so as to catch the Allies off balance on the beaches. Von Rundstedt, a conservative strategist, preferred to sit back until he saw whether Montgomery represented the main Allied thrust.

Well, the great dilemmas of the German command certainly has been rather to one's sympathies which actually was happening or whether to wait for dangerous pinpointing of the Allies' intentions. I think such a condensed summary of the problem is the over-simplification.

In the first place the Nazis were not able to move their strategical reserves from Ireland readily because the Allied air forces had destroyed every bridge between Paris and the peninsula, and otherwise disrupted communications. Also, Von Rundstedt probably had in mind that in flinging reserves against the invasion without strong air protection he was inviting terrific annihilation from the mighty Allied air fleet although it was worthy of note that the weather was bad for flying.

Why Could Not Succeed

Of course, such an early attack as Rommel urged could not be expected from his old opponent of the desert fighting. Monty knows his Rommel as few others do. That's why the Allied skipper has pushed so hard right from the start to increase the depth of his beachheads.

One is inclined to think that Rommel was right, if indeed he was urging quick action, and that the German was the master at this game. Anyway it can be said with certainty that the Allies are most grateful that they didn't have to deal with the Rommel we knew best in those critical early hours. As things now are, the wily Montgomery again has out-Rommeled Rommel.

Stage All Set For Election In Saskatchewan

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

Regina, June 14 — (CP)—Appeals to the electorate practically completed, 150 Saskatchewan provincial election candidates today awaited the decision of the electorate to be given tomorrow when voting for 51 of the 52 provincial seats will be held. In the northern riding of Cumberland, voting will be on June 24. The Liberals, with 25 candidates now, had 23 members in the Legislature at dissolution, against 15 for the C.C.F., the chief opposition party.

The C.C.F. has 57 candidates, but the liberals did not nominate in the Wadena riding where Maj. G. S. Williams former provincial C.C.F. leader is seeking reelection after returning from service overseas. The Progressive Conservative party has 39 candidates. Independent Labor Progressive, and Social Credit candidates raise the total to 150. In addition, the Liberal, C.C.F. and Progressive Conservative parties each have a candidate in the Cumberland constituency.

Candidates said they knew their place in public interests was second only to the election of Europe, but they had obtained good audiences. They believed interest was keener than in the last election in 1938, but they said they hoped the vote cast would be fewer than the 440,373 in 1938 because of the number of Saskatchewan men and women who have left the provinces with the services or war industry jobs. Those in the services within provincial boundaries will vote for candidates running in their home constituencies but their ballots will be counted on June 19, and is likely to cause changes in ridings where contests are close.

Both Liberal and Progressive Conservative candidates have in their campaign addresses that a C. C. F. victory would mean the loss of freedom as a "socialist" program would be implemented. Liberal speakers have said that C.C.F. policies would result in farmers being directed by "dictators."

C.C.F. spokesmen have replied that under socialism farmers would be given the farmer would have more security against eviction with no interference with his freedom.

Progressive Conservatives have promised increased returns if elected.

Electors will have eight hours in which to cast their ballots.

Mokmer Airdrome Put in Operation

Advanced Allied Headquarters, New Guinea, June 14. (AP)—Mokmer airdrome on Biak Island in the Schouten group has been put into operation, Allied headquarters announced today.

Infantry troops on Biak pushed westward toward Borokoe airstrip as airplanes started using Mokmer airdrome.

Mokmer strip is approximately 50 miles from Sansapor, nearest Allied-held point to the enemy airdrome.

American forces landed on Biak Island off Netherlands New Guinea May 27 and took the important airdrome June 5 after hard fighting.

Mountain bombers sank four small Jap merchantmen off Manokwari, Netherlands New Guinea, Monday. Heavy bombers, attacked Palau Island Sunday and Monday starting fires. They also hit Truk in daylight Monday.

UNITED NATIONS TO CONCENTRATE ON SPAIN EXPORTS

Sweden Agrees to Reduce Ball-Bearing Sales to Germany

DIPLOMATIC VICTORY

Washington, June 16 (AP)—With the signing in Stockholm on January 7 of Sweden's agreement to limit substantially her ball-bearing sales to Germany—United Nations now will concentrate on Spain.

United States Ambassador Carlton Hayes, it was learned today, has been instructed to ask the Spanish government to ban all war-vital exports to Germany—not only of Spanish tungsten, but of every other commodity important to the Nazis.

The Swedish agreement is regarded here as a tremendous psychological blow at the enemy and a prime diplomatic accomplishment. Stanton Griffis, American special representative to the representative of the foreign economic administration, took a virtual ultimatum to Stockholm and the Swedes agreed to drastic curtailment through preclusive buying for the United States and cessation of all ball-bearing shipments to Germany. Sweden promised that it would not afford to make any reductions in its exports.

The new requests of Ambassador Hayes—the United States has made previous demands upon Spain—are to be based on the changes in the situation since the Casablanca conference and upon Portugal's total embargo on tungsten exports.

In a report released yesterday by President Roosevelt, who had big hints of new military as well as diplomatic action in this theatre, the report by Foreign Economic Administrator Leo T. Crowley said that depriving the Axis of certain tungsten exports, Balkan chrome and manganese and Norwegian molybdenum would materially affect the German war machine within six months.

President Roosevelt observed at his news conference that the only way he knew of keeping the tungsten from the Axis was "to buy it the way and Finland from Germany and preventing the Germans out of those areas.

2,250 BOMBERS

In direct support of troops battling in Normandy, large forces of fighter-bombers and fighters swarmed across the Channel all day long. The fighters extended attacks to German shipping while a separate force of American bombers patrolled defensively over the Allied sea lifeline.

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force

Supreme headquarters said Allied air power is bound to press the two-ply air campaign across the Channel against tactical and long-range strategic bombing to split the Germans' defensive and air force into even greater feebleness than it was showed when they launched so far.

Aircraft Planes Hit.

R. A. F. bombers based in Italy struck at Munich and again during the night, a few hours after between 200 and 700 American heavy bombers from Italy hammered two aircraft plants in the Bavarian city.

Night operations by R. A. F. planes based in Great Britain included the bombing of the Messidon railway yards 20 miles south of Caen by Mosquitos in an effort to hamper movement of German reinforcements to the Normandy battle front, and attacks on German airbases by R.A.F. bombers. No Mosquito or heavy bombers were out last night, however.

Rail stations were the principal target of R. A. F. heavy and medium bombers last night in their first night raid from Italy against Munich.

The U. S. A. A. F. said at least 33 enemy planes were downed when U.S. combat fighters attacked the big American formations over northern Germany yesterday. The Allies lost 20 heavy bombers and eight other planes in all Mediterranean operations.

American heavies, attacking from British bases before dark yesterday, smashed at German communications behind the Brest peninsula leading to the Chertsoury battle area. They bombed six bridges on the north-south railroad system between Vannes and St. Malo, a likely artery for German reinforcements from the south.

Other targets in the Paris area were hit by the heavy bombers, in addition to three bombed in an earlier mission.

'Fags' Received During Height Of the Battle

Writing from beneath an armored truck somewhere in Italy, Jim Beckwith was so pleased to receive a shipment of 300 cigarettes from the Belleville Rimmer Club he couldn't wait for better writing facilities to express his feelings. This was revealed in a letter received by Chairman Fred LaBarr today in which Jim assured the Rimmer Club that hundreds of Canadian fags had been received during the height of battle and when a good smoke was most needed.

This is only one example of shipments of Canadian cigarettes being received in the various theatres of war by Belleville boys when needed most. On Saturday next the Rimmer Club will hold their annual Peg Fund tag day when all receipts donated will be given towards the provision of Canadian cigarettes for Belleville boys overseas, purchased in retail individual shipments or cigarettes this week included:

Unpleasant Odor At River Mouth

A southwest breeze blowing from off the Bay of Quinte may have a delightfully cooling effect for residents of Belleville's Victoria Park, but the ordeal of having to submit to the nauseating odor arising from the river at a point near the C. P. R. bridge materially detracts from any enjoyment of the beauty spot.

Action from sewage being blown back up into the river mouth by the south wind, the odor at the narrows of the park on Sunday was particularly noticeable and was responsible for a number of persons away from the park. Carried along by a current from the more severe Firemen's Park and was even noticed for a considerable distance up Front Street.

GERMANS SAY U.S. ARMY HAS FORDED RIVER

London, June 16 (CP-Reuters)—The German DNB Agency said tonight that the 1st United States army, by a surprise blow on the Carentan front, has forded a river and gained ground in the direction of Periers. The enemy account added: "All key positions on this front are firmly in German hands, but the Americans are regrouping and reserving reinforcements for a new leap forward."

Transport Tractor Crashes Into Ditch

When the steering apparatus of a large transport tractor failed, a trailer transport carrying two Army vehicles crashed into the ditch opposite Albert College and West Dundas Street early today. Damages estimated at over $700 resulted and a hydro pole was snapped off at its base, while large vehicle went out of control.

Francis Begley of 34 Prince Edward, was the driver of the heavy transport carrying Army vehicles and informed P.C. Caldwell, that in some unknown manner the steering tractor went out of command. Subsequent examinations revealed the steering arm became dislodged making it impossible to guide the vehicle.

After leaving the highway and crashing into the hydro pole the vehicle-carrying transport careened over the West Dundas St., sideswiping the corner of the Albert College fringe of th e tractor. The Army trucks being transported were slightly damaged as the result of the heavy impact. Later the damaged tractor was repaired by a local garage firm and continued its journey eastward.

Unconfirmed Reports Say Allies Landing' Commandos, Rangers

Port Bou, Spain, June 16—(AP) —Border reports today which local-ed but not confirmed, said the Allies were landing Commandos and Rangers, equipped with jeeps, light tanks and anti-land mine units on Sicilian beaches, prepared by French Partisans deep within France.

The reports mentioned Plateau Millierches, about 46 miles southeast of Limoges and about 80 southwest of Vichy, as one place where jeeps and light tanks had been put down.

They See Invasion Front

Britain's Prime Minister, General Eisenhower and Field Marshal Smuts have visited the beachheads of the Allies in Northern France. They have seen the invasion conditions as they exist.

Prime Minister Churchill who it was reported wanted to go with the British fleet at the time of the invasion and was persuaded not to go now has had the opportunity to see the developing strategy of the United Nations on the shores of France, the country to which he paid a noble tribute four years ago in which he prophesied her revival and liberation.

It is not difficult to understand how much interest the British leader has taken in this step of the Allies, the western offensive against Germany, which has been on the minds and the lips of the peoples for some years. It was the event to which the world kept looking in the future and now it has come and the outlook is good. It was not to be wondered at that the British leader, who is a former soldier, would feel himself satisfied with a survey of the beachhead front as it exists and as it continues to expand.

Canadians on Beachhead

Canadians are playing no small part in the operations in the invasion beachhead in Normandy. Every day adds to the story of Canadian successes and Canadian valor as it does to the prestige and success of the British and American forces. General Montgomery who has made a world name for himself as a military leader has praised the work of a Western Canadian infantry brigade. The General knows Canadians through his experience with them and has well described the Canadian soldiery when he said that this brigade "landed and went right away to its objective and still stands there. It was very good. It is excellent."

His praise went far. The achievement of the Western Canadian brigade had not been equalled on the "British front" meaning the British and Empire invasion troops. That is high honor and General Montgomery does not distribute praise unless it is earned.

It is the same story in the army, in the navy and in the air force—the story of Canadian resolution and dash.

The Dominion is proud of her troops defending her and the Empire and demeaning herself nobly in France, in the air and on the seas.

Nazi Propaganda

Germany likes to talk in impressive figures, words and illustrations. So did Hitler when he set out to make his thunderous speeches to the deafening cheers of the servile Nazi members of the Reichstag. The Germans built their "Siegfried Line" harping back to the old legendary period of Germany in which Siegfried was one of the Germanic heroes. How strong that line was is not known for it lies within Germany and has not been tested until the German created other high-sounding phrases, "West Wall," and "Atlantic Wall" for the Nazi defence system in France. One would guess that the German idea was to use an alliteration word to represent the defence and so they named it for the West and for the vast Atlantic Ocean.

Well the United Nations have got within the West Wall or the Atlantic Wall of Hitlerdom and now it is reported from Germany that the authorities have ordered the removal from bookshop windows and shelves of all books, maps and pamphlets mentioning or showing the so-called "West Wall" or the "Atlantic Wall." That is what the propagandist Germans do when the enemy of the high-sounding name has vanished in the successes of the Allied cause. German propaganda is so far from the truth that it fails to register and it is grotesque as in the case in making such an extravagant claim as may be implied in the use of "West" and "Atlantic" and it has to be dropped for it is so easy to start rolling. It is just like Hitler's speeches—they are no longer heard either by Germans or others because they would be grotesque in the face of the hard facts of Allied victory and successes.

German propaganda is crude and of the kind that might satisfy a German but could not fool an outsider. It proceeds on the belief that the opponent is not wise. It being easy for Nazis to hoodwink Germans the German Nazis naturally think it would be as easy to deceive and fool the United Nations. But their wiles and traps have been seen through and have failed.

Bayeux's Tapestry

(montreal Herald)

Now that Bayeux has been taken by the Allies, some snooping reporter ought to try to find out what has become of the Bayeux tapestry. Is it still in the Bayeux Museum? Was it hidden by its guardians when the Germans invaded France? Or did they carelessly leave it around for Hitler to confiscate as a trophy?

The Bayeux tapestry is described as a band of linen, 231 feet long and 20 inches wide, on which were worked in worsteds of eight colors, scenes representing the conquest of England by the Normans. It is in a way, one of the first "moving pictures." The pictures are vivid and extraordinarily interesting. Latin inscriptions identify the various incidents.

Several attempts have been made to question the authenticity of the tapestry, but most scholars are agreed it is genuine. A tradition that it was done by Matilda, William's wife, has been displaced by the theory attributing it to the direction of Odo, bishop of Bayeux, William's half-brother.

D-Day and H-Hour

(The United States Army and Navy Journal offers the following explanation of the meaning and origin of "D-Day" and "H-Hour":)

These terms are used to designate the time and the hour of the start of an operation where the day and the hour have not yet been determined, or where secrecy is essential.

Long before definite dates have been set, the timetable for an operation may be scheduled in detail by issuing orders for various steps in th operation to be carried out on D-Day (or H-Hour) minus (or plus) a certain number of days (hours, or minutes.) At an appropriate time, a subsequent order is issued to subordinate commanders informing them of the date and time of D-Day and H-Hour.

The letter are derived from the words for which they stand—D for day, and H for hour.

The first use of the terms in the American army, so far as can be determined, was on September 7, 1918, when Field Order No. 8 of the First Army, American Expeditionary Forces, declared: "The First Army will attack at H-Hour on D-Day with the object of forcing the evacuation of the St. Mihiel Salient."

Song Has Changed

(New York Times)

Four Junes ago, at the height of the triumphal march across Europe German soldiers were singing:

Give me your hand, your dear white hand,
Farewell, my sweetest love.
Farewell, my sweet, farewell,
Farewell, for we sail; farewell, for we sail,
For we sail against England.

Last week "We Sail Against England" was an almost forgotten song. Instead the German radios were broadcasting to the troops a new song:

We stand in the west; we are fully prepared
Let the enemy come today.
We are on guard, our fists are hard,
We stand in the west as a wall.
For we know we defend here with strongest hand
The frontier of our Fatherland.

The day of triumph for the Wehrmacht had passed. The Germans knew H-Hour was at hand.

FLAG DAY

I fancy that the Lord looked down
And whispered into Betsy's ear:
"Tis something more than cape or gown
That you are sitting here now, my dear.
Remember: strips of white and red!
The white for truth and liberty;
The red for blood of heroes shed
That men, world over, might be free;
And then—as first I thought to do—
Bright stars against a field of blue.

"Remember: Betsy Ross, you make
The flag of hope for all mankind.
Remember: every stitch you take
The stars in heathood will bind.
Soon, every hem and every fold
Will be a symbol in the sky
By which all tyrants will be told
That liberty is not to die.
This banner down the years, will be
The hope of all who would be free.

"There will be times of doubt and dread,
When evil force the field will take
And blood, in freedom's cause, be shed,
And brave men die for freedom's sake;
But then, beneath this flag you sew,
Against the horror and the fear,
For God above, and men below,
A mighty nation will appear,
Devoted, land and sky and sea,
To justice, truth and liberty."

The members voted against second reading to a bill authorizing expenditure of $800,000,000 this year for mutual aid to the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

The bill was given second reading by a vote of 138-8, and later was adopted on division.

Voting against the second reading were C. F. Beetle, (C-Terrebonne), Hon. P. J. A. Ouellet, (Ind.-Chapeau), Maxime Raymond (NP-Beauharnois-LaPrairie) and Armand Chevrier (L-Argenteuil).

Following passage of the Bill, the House went into Committee to the Quebec Savings Banks Bill, and remained there by clause study of the bill incorporating the war assets corporation, set up to dispose of surplus and obsolete war materials.

Earlier, the House gave third reading to the bill providing for the taking of the armed forces vote in the next Federal election, and heard Mary Minister of Munitions Gordon Graham of the Canadian Navy personnel house have been "negligible" since the beginning of the invasion. Leaves in ships have been confined to a "few hours' visit".

Mr. Macdonald said Canada was not participating in invasion operations by more than 100 ships and almost 10,000 officers and men.

In the brisk debate which preceded the voting on the Mutual Aid Bill, most of those opposing the measure said they could not understand why Canada should be assigned in 1943 on the conscription issue.

Mr. Cardin said he had no objection to Canada contributing war supplies to the United Nations for the common cause, but an accounting should be kept and the money not be furnished as a gift. He said there was no justification for Canada giving gifts to Britain which was richer than Canada "is now and will be for many years after the war".

Answer to Mr. Cardin.

Mr. St. Laurent answered him by quoting Mr. Cardin's own speeches as a cabinet minister. Mr. St. Laurent said Hansard of June 18, 1940, quoted Mr. Cardin as saying this: "money is of no importance when the freedom of a nation is at stake".

"What will be the value of our petty chattels and even our great assets, what will become of our accumulated wealth if Germany succeeds in crushing under her blood-stained boots the combined strength of France and England?" Mr. St. Laurent quoted Mr. Cardin as saying in former speeches.

The Justice Minister said that "doubtless we can help the cause of liberty and democracy by supplying arms to England and her allies; doubtless we can help them by sending them as much as possible in the way of munitions and foodstuffs.

"But I ask those who bring forward this argument: do you not in your heart feel a bit ashamed of thinking only in terms of money while abandoning to your neighbors the protection of your life, of your possessions and your rights?"

Mental and Not Gifts to Enrich Any Nation

Mr. Macdonald further tidily said the mutual Aid contributions were not gifts to enrich any one of the United Nations.

"If it could be regarded in any sense as a gift, it is a gift to be able them to fight a war which is our war just the same as it is theirs, and war, I prefer not to call it a gift at all," he said.

"I agreed to the entry into war—and I am not ashamed of my action but I say we entered the war because Britain did". Mr. Cardin said. We went in because we are a member of the British Empire. The Empire is a society of free and equal sovereign nations and each country must be up to the defence of the other. We have never acted as an independent country."

He said he believed that Canada would only be informed of the peace terms after they had been drawn up by the "great powers."

Canada will have to accept the decisions of the great powers—and with that I find no fault", he said. We are still a small nation with great aspirations, but we haven't yet reached the development of a great power."

Mr. Cardin said he believed his views on mutual aid were those of most of the citizens in Quebec and of those of many people in the other provinces.

Criticism of Grasp of "Realities"

Fred Rose (Lab. Prog.-Montreal Cartier) said he could not condemn a group of "socialistic ideas" in Canada, but objected to opposing "any contribution to help the Allies in fighting the common enemy." The same isolationists were those who shouted the loudest when war started, he said. Many were taken from Quebec plants.

Mr. Rinfret said Mr. Rose should be the last to criticize French-Canadian members from Quebec since the country had been quick to go to Japan refugees.

Mr. Pouliot said no one would object to permitting Canadians to go United States for long as there was some kind of acknowledgment for the assistance.

Stanley Knowles (C.C.F.-Winnipeg North Centre) said that in the opinion of his party all mutual aid legislation was based on the "principle of the absolute individuality of the struggle in which we are engaged."

Rev. E. G. Hansell (SC-Macleod) said all the bill amounted to was a grant of credit to Britain.

His questioned whether it made much difference whether the cost of the goods went into the debt of Canada or the debt of Britain.

Raymond Opposes Soldier Vote Bill.

Mr. Raymond, Hon. Frederick Lapointe opposed the bill to provide for service votes at general elections on the ground that his party which he said represented a considerable body of public opinion but had few members in the House would have no representation in the collection and recording of service votes.

"If the principle of this bill is right—and evidently it is for it is worthy—there is no reason why the principle or the bill cannot be applied in the post-war period," Mr. Hansell said. "There is no reason why we cannot produce and buy the goods, do the same thing as we are doing under this bill, but give them to the people who need it instead of to the people of other nations."

Earl Nicholls (PC-Waterloo South) said he wondered why Russia should receive mutual aid when the was placing orders for peacetime machinery to the extent of millions of dollars.

Mr. Raymond said no peacetime machinery was being purchased in Russia said.

Harry Jackman (PC-Toronto Broadview) said Canada's actual aid contributions substituted for fighting men. If Canada was not making the contributions more men would have to be sent to the armed forces. Men not engaged in essential industries would be in the armed forces.

Mr. Raymond said Canada's war effort was greater than that of any other country and her mutual aid contributions, also very great, yet Canada had received nothing in return.

The United States had obtained sea and air bases in various parts of the British Empire in return for lend lease.

Senator Claxton, parliamentary assistant to Prime Minister Mackenzie King, said Canada had been spared from the war, not only because of Britain's stand, but also because of the Dominion's contributions.

Scenes on Sands Where U.S. Force Made Landing

By DON WHITEHEAD
(AP War Correspondent)

With the American Troops in France, June 13.—(Delayed)—While the invasion assault along the entire Allied front was made with calculated and unstinted loss of equipment and material that anticipated, the cost still was high.

The ground troops on the beaches on a march where an American formation made a labiling and ran head-on into a reinforced enemy division which had been practising manoeuvres on the land.

This strip of the beach is a graveyard of small boats; tanks, half-tracks, trucks and jeeps. The sands are littered with a vast amount of equipment. Much can be salvaged, but millions of dollars in ruined war material lies in the sands.

Behind the beach the ground troops were a graveyard for many of the men.

Many heavily-laden ducks, carrying ammunition and supplies, were never able to make the run to the waters. Some of them dropped into the deep and sank. Others, hitting sandbars, were then 10 miles from shore. When the LCI'S and LCT'S, over-crowded with troops, approached shore, some of them ran on sandbars. At times when the ramp kicks started they sank out of sight. Some of the soldiers drowned, and troops aboard them were able to swim to shore. Others made only a few paces from shallow water. Many of these vehicles are being salvaged at present.

Seek 2 Escaped Prisoners of War

Toronto, June 12 — (CP) — Police are searching in widely-separated parts of Ontario for German prisoners of war who escaped yesterday from work projects — one from a farm near Bloomsburg in Kent county and the other from a farm near the Peninsula in northern Ontario.

Border guards, Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Provincial Police and members of the Veterans Guard of Canada are searching for the 21-year-old Fritz Fuchs, a merchant seaman who escaped from the Waleboring area farm. He is one of 340 prisoners who volunteered for farm work this summer.

With high taxes, increased living costs, and a ceiling on wages and salaries, enough money can still be saved to pay for life insurance. For example, compare the cost of an Ordinary Life Policy with the cost of a few everyday items.

$2500

The price of one pound of candy per week boys a Great-West Life policy for $2500. That means $2500 of protection till your family is self-supporting, then cash or an income in your later years.

$6000

The price of four movie shows per week would buy a Great-West Life policy for $6000. For your peace of mind, you must have insurance. It's no other way can you provide, at such low cost, for whatever may happen.

$7500

The price of one package of cigarettes per day would buy a $7500 policy with the Great-West Life. That means a guarantee of $7500 in cash for your family if you should die, a nest egg for you in the future if you live.

The price of one game of golf each week would buy a Great-West Life policy for $10,000. If you paid the first premium today, your family would get $10,000 cash if you died tomorrow. What would they do without life insurance?

Life insurance is not a luxury. It is an essential you must place first on your list along with food, clothing and shelter. Life insurance alone can guarantee food, clothing and shelter for your loved ones if you should die, and for you in your later years if you live. A Great-West Life man will be glad to help you with your insurance problems.

The above examples are based on an Ordinary Life Policy taken at age 25. Life insurance premiums, of course, vary with the age and plan selected.

Mark Founding Of Women's Guild

Memorial Service For Late Howard Green is Held at Christ Church

Mohawk Reserve,—Tuesday, June 6, was the 48th Anniversary of the founding of the Women's Guild in the parish of Tyendinaga; and to mark the event, a birthday luncheon and supper were held at the rectory. Rev. C. P. Heaven and members of the Shannonville Guild were guests. The day was also the 27th wedding anniversary of Rev. Rural Dean and Mrs. Pringle. In the afternoon a short program, consisting of community singing, recitations by Miss Norma Maracle and Mrs. Pringle, a piano solo by Miss Myrtle Maracle, and brief addresses by Rev. C. P. Heaven and the rector were given. A surprise feature of the program to the recipients was the reading of a congratulatory address by Mrs. Benson Brant, and a gift from the Guild of a walnut coffee table, with tray. The presentation to Mr. and Mrs. Pringle was made by Misses Myrtle Maracle and Betty Brant. After the King's speech, a Service appropriate to Invasion Day was held in Christ Church, Rev. C. P. Heaven preaching the sermon.

Sunday morning, at Christ Church, a Memorial Service was held for the late Pte. Howard Green, who died in hospital in Italy from wounds received in battle. The service was attended by the Deseronto Branch of the Canadian Legion, the Ladies' Auxiliary to the Legion, and the Kan-yen-geh League. A wreath of crimson roses, a tribute to the memory of Pte. Green, was given by the Legion. The rector preached from the text, "I have fought a good fight". The hymns were, "O God, our Help in Ages Past", "On the Resurrection Morning", "O Valiant Hearts", and "God Save The King". There was a large congregation to honor the memory of the young hero, and to show sympathy for the bereaved family. Pte. Green is the tenth soldier from the Reserve to make the supreme sacrifice.

Burrs

Burr's — A perfect June day favored and added much to the beauty of the setting for the Memorial and Decoration Day service at Burr's church and cemetery on Sunday afternoon. Flowers that are so lovely at this time of year were much in evidence marking the resting places of loved ones gone before and adding attractiveness to the interior of the church. The church was filled with a congregation of interested friends. The pastor, Rev. F. Tiller led in prayer and chose for the scripture reading Joshua 4-1-7 where it tells of the two memorials of twelve stones being set up by men chosen from the twelve tribes of Israel to mark their safe passage through the Jordan. They were to be a memorial unto their children forever. Mr. Don Baxter of Bloomfield delivered a fitting address, getting inspiration for his topic from the prayer made by Sir Francis Drake just before he sailed to meet the Spanish armada. He divided his remarks under three headings, Courage, Vision, Faith. Three words which he felt must have loomed up largely in the lives of our pioneer forefathers. Courage, first, to urge them to come into the wilderness of a new and strange land and hew out homes and endure hardships that we with all our modern conveniences can scarcely visualize. Vision that caused them to lay the foundations of the churches they have left behind that we might enjoy the privilege of worship and of the schools that have enabled us to have the benefits of education. Faith, strong and true to believe that the generations to follow on would have the courage vision and faith to rise above whatever difficulties the age might develop. Even as grave ones as we find ourselves facing today in trying to build a better world when the choicest of our young manhood and young womanhood are willing to sacrifice their lives that those succeeding them may have a better place in which to live.

Music for the service was under the capable direction of Miss Velma Vandewater with two beautiful solos by Mrs. Jack McNeil and a pleasing duet by two junior Misses Donna Calnan and Leila Fox.

Questions and Answers

This column is sponsored by the Regional Office, Wartime Prices and Trade Board. Questions on price control, ration regulations and other Wartime Prices and Trade Board rulings should be mailed to the Information Branch, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Victoria Building, Brockville, Ont.

Q. Are butter coupons 64 and 65 good now?

A. Yes, butter coupons 64 and 65 became valid June 8. Coupons 66 and 67 will become valid June 22.

Q. Just how much canning sugar are we to get? There seems to be a great deal of controversy over the exact amount.

A. Everyone in Canada is to have ten lbs. of canning sugar. D coupons may be turned in at the rate of ½ lb. of sugar per coupon if more is required.

Q. What amount of honey can be purchased with one D coupon?

A. One D coupon is worth 24 fluid ounces (2 lbs.) of honey.

Q. Has there been a reduction in the price of some cuts of beef?

A. Yes. The WPTB announced that chuck roasts and other front-quarter cuts of beef will be about four cents a lb. cheaper under the new ceiling price. At the same time the cost of hind quarters will be increased about four cents.

Q. The other day the ice man delivered my ice and left it on my doorstep. Is there not a law against this kind of thing?

A. Due to the shortage of help in some towns, ice companies are forced to confine their deliveries to the door-step instead of the ice box. It is a problem now prevalent in Canada and your help and co-operation at this time will enable the ice companies to continue their house-to-house deliveries.

Q. Are there restrictions regarding the renting of used goods?

A. Yes, the WPTB announces in a new order that people who have since 1941 begun to rent used articles such as household furniture, cameras, or bicycles, must have their rent charges approved by the Board.

Stirling and District

Sunday School Marks Passing Of Another Year

Stirling, June 14 — St. Paul's Sunday School marked the passing of another successful year when on Sunday, June 11th, they, in a body, attended Special Service in the main auditorium of the Church. Children of all ages, with their parents and friends, as well as many visitors for the occasion, filled the Church to capacity. All were amply repaid for their effort by the fine inspiring thoughts they were able to take away with them.

Mr. J. L. Good, Superintendent, conducted the Service with Mr. G. L. Clute, in his usual capable manner, presiding at the organ. Ronald Elmy, eleven year old soprano, of Belleville, was guest soloist for the occasion and very beautifully rendered two numbers "The Lord's Prayer" and "Beautiful Garden of Prayer." The hymns were carefully chosen for the day and all were general favorites of the children as well as older members of the Congregation.

Rev. J. A. Dilts of Holloway St. Church, Belleville, guest speaker for the Anniversary, brought to the children especially, a story which they will remember, not only this week, but in years to come. He compared the children to roses and the little mars which creep into their characters to the pests which infest beautiful roses. All in their own way eat into the heart of their victim and must be resisted constantly. In his address to the older folk, Rev. Dilts spoke of "The Home" with special mention of the fundamental teachings of religious principles as well as the moldings of individual characters as taking place in the home at a very tender age. He asked that Christ be made a reality in each home and that He no longer be an Unseen Guest or a Silent Listener. Rev. Dilts pointed out that in many homes religion is a subject to be evaded and suggested that we try not only to make it habitual but to make the every day instances more outstanding so that even if children are left poor materially they might always have the happy memory of a Good Home. Christian Parents and Thoughtful Teaching. The gratitude of the entire congregation for the guests who had given of their ability in word and song was voiced by Mr. J. L. Good.

It was with deep regret that the citizens of Stirling learned of the loss of another of our boys serving overseas when word was received by telegram, on Thursday, June 8th that Pte. Fashion Flashes

It's a big season for the fabric hat. A pretty, wide brimmed sailor is of navy blue crepe with all-over stitching with a trimming and piping of rose pink grosgrain ribbon.

Smart is the hat and bag ensemble. Black satin is used for a pill-box hat with trimming of square mirror glass ornaments and jewel colored stones. Matching satin envelope has a scattering of the stones and the large clasp is of the mirror glass ornaments.

And now it's fruit trimming for smart summer hats. A pretty postillion - padre of white toyo straw is trimmed with bright green belting ribbon and clusters of little lemons in yellow velvet.

All dressed up is the thing for cottons, for some of the really smart town frocks are of cotton, and right smart they are. For instance, how about a frock with short sleeved, deep V collarless neckline bodice of black cotton sheer with set-in black satin sash of lush pink roses. Bodice is joined to a skirt of checked cotton in black and shocking pink.

Young and lovely long-skirted evening frocks are walking out of shops all over the country. Window-pane plaid taffeta in white and red is used for a pretty frock with drop shoulder neckline and double shoestring straps of black velvt. Flared bertha ruffle is edged with black lace and tied in center of fitted bodice.

DOLAN THE DRUGGIST

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

This Wife Is No Door-Mat

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Every other weekend, my husband goes out with his man friends. I don't mind it, but he comes in at 3: a.m. and even as late as six o'clock in the morning. I don't say much about it, because he has a bad temper and thinks no one can tell him what to do.

A few weeks ago I threw his clothes out into the hall and decided I wouldn't put up with it any longer. He wouldn't take his clothes and go away, and slept in the hall. When I went to church in the morning he got in and slept all day Sunday. And now I can't put him out. He says he has no reason for leaving me. We've been married ten years and have a daughter of 8.

Do you think it would be wise to give him a dose of his own medicine? Would it be wrong if I went to a dance with some girl friends and stayed out until all hours? My sister said she would keep our little girl over the weekend. I don't like to go out without my husband, but I want to show him that two can play the same game.

U.B.K.

Evidently you're considering that age-old maxim "what's sauce for the gander is sauce for the goose. And there is no denying that this particular kind of marital condiment has often worked.

To be considered is the nature of the gander. If he's one of the raging, jealous sort, or if he'd welcome complete freedom, he may bring charges against you which you might find difficult to disprove. I see you have plenty of independence and high spirits and refuse to enlist in the doormat school of wives, which is sensible. No man, or woman either, respects the type of human being who is willing to serve as a foot-wiper.

Here's Another Husband Who Never Takes His Wife Anywhere

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I was born and raised in the city but we moved out to the country, which is 12 miles from town, as we had financial reverses. I thought we'd go back soon, and just can't learn to like it here. My husband has built up a business and says he'll never go back to town, but I get so lonesome at times I nearly go insane.

I can't take a job because I'm ill, and anyway we have a three-year-old son and no one to leave him with if I did go to work. If it weren't for this little boy I'd end it all. My husband is so wrapped up in his work he doesn't even know I'm alive. He takes care of us, but I'm not happy. I left once, but had to come back for the sake of our little son. Please help me with my problem.

D.S.

Have you ever heard that "thoughts are things?" And if you harbor morbid thoughts to the effect: "I'd end it all if it weren't for this child" you are unconsciously influencing his whole life.

A child should have a happy healthful surrounding to develop properly. Play games with him. Why not start a flower garden. Gardening is the greatest cure imaginable for morbidity.

You tell me you're ill. You should have the best medical advice available. Try and make friends or keep up with your old ones. There must be buses to the nearest town, where you could go occasionally for a little relaxation, and take the little boy along with you.

Soldier-Husband is Considering Asking for His Freedom

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been married for six years, and my little son is five years old. Before entering the army, my husband provided a home for us and was a good worker, did not run around and was always very good to us. He's been in camp four months.

When he first went in the army he wanted me to come down to see him, but as I am in partnership with my Dad operating a tavern, it was impossible for me to go. Since then he has been dissatisfied and several weeks ago wrote that after the war he wants his freedom.

Now, Miss Fairfax, I don't know what to do. I have been writing him every day and even sent him a box for Easter. He was so good to me before entering the service that I can't understand what has come over him. I love him and I don't want our marriage to break up. Shall I keep writing to him?

(Mrs.) M. S

My dear girl, don't you realize an Easter box, and even daily letters, is a poor substitute for a wife's love and companionship? And don't you remember those terribly binding words in the marriage ceremony about "forsaking all others?"

Your father's tavern seems to come under this head. My advice take your little son and visit your husband. It's more important to keep your marriage from going on the rocks than it is to help run the tavern.

Husbands of Little Faith

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm at a camp 300 miles from home. Mother writes me that my wife is having a good time in my absence. If this is true, my wife is free to do as she pleases but I'm worried about the kids. Mother is old and has never cared much for my wife. She is dissatisfied she doesn't get more of an allowance from me.

I've written to my sister who lives in the same town as my wife and she answers that she has neither heard about nor seen anything of my wife's bad conduct. What would you suggest in my case?

E.W.D.

I'd suggest you have a little more faith in your wife. Your mother is old and probably crochety, and is disappointed in the amount of her allowance. Probably, as is often the case with aged persons, these things have become muddled in her mind, and her daughter-in-law looms as the cause of it all.

If your wife were acting indiscreetly, your sister would be almost sure to hear of it. Don't be a doubting Thomas on the hearsay of a jealous old lady.

The Marry-Go-Round

HUSBAND De LUXE

The other night, I saw a picture in which Roland Young plays the role of "house husband", to a militant wife in the Woman's Army Corps. As usual, Mr. Young's acting was delightful. But his housekeeping was sketchy. Any serviceman who has basic training could have given him cards and spades.

But that's just where we gals are going to be fooled. One of the sweet dreams every soldier has is that of never having to make a bed, peel a potato or clean up a company street after he gets out of Army. He can leave it all to the Little Woman! Sweet Woman! Sweet escape!

Meanwhile, the little woman is holding down a war-job, and vaguely dreaming of the day when John will come home, quite competent to give her a hand with the housework if she wants to continue drawing a pay-check. Fifty-fifty! Reciprocity--that's what!

But according to the working-wife of a man in an essential industry, that's largely a beautiful mirage. She complains that, since she took job, her loving husband just clutters up the kitchen and wears himself all out telling her easier ways to do things.

That's the old-fashioned man's idea of "helping"--standing around with a newspaper in one hand and cigarette in the other, telling a woman how to do things with more speed and less effort. Any man could tell you just how to clean the house by running a straw through it and blowing out the dirt. Or how to "cleanse" the dishes without washing or wiping them.

But the returned soldier will know better than than. The world has become Co-ed. since then; everything in it has become Co-ed. And once he has gotten over his allergy to K.P., the ex-serviceman will fall into line. Housework can be divided, in peacetime. There is plenty of "Man's work" around any house.

When a woman gets all through counting the laundry, darning socks, mending the linen and hanging over a gas-range, there are still floors to be polished, curtains to be hung, screens to be taken down or put up, lawns to be mowed, and rugs to be vacuumed. All fine, strenuous, respectable He-man exercise--and good for your figure! However if you think your wife has more muscle and mechanical ability--that's different.

The point is to divide the jobs according to talent, aptitude and skill, and not according to sex. Many men have a genius for cooking, and love to brag about it; and many women would rather paint the porch furniture or put up the swing than make an omelet.

"Women's place is in the home". and so is man's, in the servantless days to come. That's why the well-trained house husband is a gem of great price!

BEAUTY

By Helen Jameson

..Cave girls curled their hair ..

Evidently, straight hair has always been in disfavor, and it is only since the permanent waving machine was invented that we have mastered the problem. Before that, women wrestled with smoking curling irons, kid curlers, funny crimers, even rags.

Chaucer mentions hair curling in his Canterbury Tales. The Goths and the Normans had implements for creating undulations. Beautifully fashioned gadgets of bronze--very similar to the modern curling iron--have been found in tombs in Egypt. From the beautifully curled wigs preserved in museums, it is known that the Egyptian hairdressers were experts.

It has been conjectured tht fragments of flint heated in the sun, were the curling irons used during the centuries before the birth of history. A sort of primitive comb was used to arrange the looks.

Many are the stories of Roman hairdressing. Ladies of fashion are definitely known to have curled their tresses and, in the year 208 A.D., Tertullian rebuked the women of Rome for spending so much time on hair care and arrangements.

Throughout all the ages, styles have changed repeatedly.

We fancy that the bob is a modern style, but in the fifteenth century both men and women wore short hair, frizzed at the sides. Later, when Louis X111 of France became bald, the use of enormous wigs came into fashion.

For these various modes, the methods used for curling were crude in the extreme. Clay rods, wooden sticks heated in boiling water, even the stems of pipes were used, and the elaborate results were the product of hours of painstaking labor.

Your grandmother will tell you that when she was a very little girl she plunged a slate pencil between the red coals of the stove, wound her locks around it, and thought the results very charming.

Along about that time her mother arranged her hair in small braids, pressed them with an iron on the ironing board, so her flowing locks would be crimpy.

If her mother wore bangs she smeared them with a sticky substance made of quince seeds, arranged them in what was inelegantly known as "spit curls". That was the forerunner of our setting lotion.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

What Parents Wear at a Military Wedding.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,—

My daughter is planning to be married sometime in July, if and when her fiance comes home on furlough. She and her maid of honor and four bridesmaids are to wear long dresses. Her fiance a his attendants will be in uniform.

1.—What should my husband wear? My daughter has set the hour for four o'clock, and she would like to have her father wear a tuxedo. . . But is this correct in the afternoon?

2.— Should the groom's mother and I wear long dresses, or may we wear street-length dresses? And should we wear hats?

L. E.

1.—It is absolutely incorrect for a man to wear a tuxedo at a daytime wedding. A tuxedo is informal evening attire, not properly worn before six o'clock in the evening, at the earliest. If your daughter is wearing a floor-length dress and is not wearing a veil, your husband may properly wear a business suit, preferably dark blue. If she is wearing a short veil, this makes her wedding a semi-formal one, and your husband may properly wear an Oxford jacket, striped trousers, white shirt, stiff collar, and a four-in-hand tie. At a July wedding perhaps the bridegroom and his attendants will wear white uniforms; if so, your husband could properly wear a white suit too.

2.—At either a semiformal or informal wedding, you and the groom's mother may properly wear street-length dresses. If the wedding is to be in church, you should both wear hats and gloves.

Telling Friends About Your New Home.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My husband and I have just moved to a new house, which we have bought. I have just had Informals made, and (following a suggestion you made in a recent col-..mn) had our new address engraved in the lower right corner. As with most people these days, our r-·atives and friends are "spread far and wide", in this country and overseas. I thought it might be a good idea to mail these Informals to our list of relatives and friends, are "spread are and wide", in this country and overseas. I thought it might be a good idea to mail these Informals to our list of relatives and friends, even to those overseas, informing them of our new address. D you approve of this? Also, in the case of those living here or nearby, would it be proper also to write our new telephone number on the cards?

J. W. L.

.An excellent idea. . . . .entirely proper, and practical too. On the inside pages you might write a bit of a note, saying that you are now "at home" in your new house, and that this reminder is for the nearbys (or even for farther-aways who conceivably might be telephoning you) by all means include your new telephone number.

What to To About an Artichoke.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

To me artichokes are certainly a problem. I've never eaten one, and I have a hunch that sometime I'll have one served to me, and I won't know what to do with it. So that I'll be prepared, will you tell me, please, just how to eat this "critter"?

Jean

These "critters" are too delicious, Jean, for you to pass up! Why don't you cook one for yourself and have a private dress-rehearsal eating it? You eat an artichoke with the fingers, a leaf at a time. Dip the soft edible end of the leaf in the sauce, eat it, and then put the remainder of the leaf at the side of the plate. When you come to the centre, scrape away the prickly part with a knife, and eat the "heart" with a fork. Simple, eh?

How to use serving fork

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

1.—When at table a serving-dish is passed to you, with a serving spoon and serving fork on it, just exactly how should you use these pieces of silver as you help yourself from the dish?

2.—And (so that I may read your answer to my two young sons, aged seven and nine) will you please tell me exactly how one should place the knife and fork when one has finished eating? Also when passing the plate for a second helping?

Emily.

1.—Take the serving spoon in your right hand; the serving fork in your left hand. Use the spoon to separate or cut your portion to your plate.

2.—I'm so glad you're "getting at" this knife and fork procedure with your children, for the way we place the silver pieces after we have finished eating is a "tattle-tale" of our table manners! After we have finished eating we should place the knife and fork close together, side by side, the knife on the right with its cutting edge toward the centre of the plate, the fork, prongs up, on the left of the knife. The knife and fork should be centered well on the plate (so that there will be no danger of their falling off when the plate is removed) and the handles should be turned slightly toward the right. When we pass our plate for a second helping, our knife and fork are placed in the same fashion but a little more to the right, to leave plate-space for the food.

Invitations to a buffet supper

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My husband and I are socially indebted to quite a few friends, and so we're planning to give a buffet supper on Sunday evening soon. For the invitations I'd like to use our informals (they have Mr. and Mrs. ---engraved on the first page, and our address in the lower right corner), and on the inside page write:

Sundy, June 25th
Buffet supper at 7 o'clock

1.—Do you approve of this form of invitation? And do you approve of the hour we have chosen?

2.—Since of course it is important for us to know how many guests to provide for, we would like to have the invitations answered. But also since we are reasonably sure that most of these friends will probably be able to come (if we send our invitations far enough in advance) is there any form you could suggest whereby we could ask for replies only from those who will not be able to come? (Or should I write R.S.V.P. on every invitation?)

Julia

1.—Yes. A good form for the invitation (a note written on the inside pages of your Informals would also be a good form), and a perfect hour to be in your party.

2.—A proper and practical form for you to use (and quite often used in these days under the circumstances similar to yours) is to write under the information you suggest above (or in the body of the notes, of you decide to write notes): Please answer if not coming.

Vitamins and the Menopause

Hot "flushes" are a very unpleasant disturbance associated with the menopause or change of life. In recent times, several drugs have been used with great benefit to help relieve this condition. The drugs include estrogens which are glandular extracts, and a preparation known as stilbestrol. Estrogens are given by injection.

Doctors A. M. Hain and Jessie C. B. Sym, of Scotland, believe that there are certain disadvantages to the use of the estrogens. First, after stopping the treatment, the regular periods seem to recur in four or five days as a general rule. The patient may feel bad. Second, it is thought that if the estrogens are taken over a long period of time, they may have a toxic or poisonous effect and may increase any irregular action of the heart which is present. These physicians also think that there is the possibility that the estrogens may stimulate a tendency toward cancer, if such a tendency already exists in the patient. Of course, there are many who do not believe this is true. It is a fact, however, that the period during which the change of life occurs is the time when disturbances of the heart action and development of cancer frequently occur. Hence, anything which may aggravate these conditions should be avoided, if possible.

Doctors Hain and Sym, therefore, have tried treating the hot flushes with large doses of vitamin E obtained from wheat-germ oil. The first patient treated found that after using the wheat-germ-oil capsules for a period of three weeks, the hot flushes had practically disappeared, although one or two flushes a day did occur from time to time. The second patient took the vitamin E for eighteen days. On the sixteenth day the number of hot flushes was reduced, but the condition did not clear up completely. This patient also noted that when she was active, the hot flushes seemed to be more frequent. The third patient obtained complete relief with the treatment. In the fourth patient, the number of attacks was reduced from ten to fifteen a day, to three or four a day.

It is not clear exactly how the vitamin E works. There is some evidence that this vitamin may interfere with the development of estrogens in the body. If so, this is contrary to the ordinarily expected effect in the treatment of hot flushes, since it is definitely known that the estrogens do relieve these attacks.

Nevertheless, while the number of patients treated is small, the good effects obtained would seem to indicate that the vitamin E may have some value from this standpoint. It would appear advisable that larger numbers of patients use this form of treatment in order that its exact benefits may be determined.

GOWN FOR OVERSEAS

This classic satin basque wedding gown, with a sweetheart neckline is one of those being sent to Britain by Canadian women to be loaned to members of the Women's Division R.C.A.F. contemplating marriage. Two others have also been sent from women of Montreal to Squadron Officer Lady Bowhill at the headquarters of the Royal Air Force Transport Command in England. It is expected more wedding gowns will follow from other points in Canada. Hitherto W.D.'s have had to spend so many ration coupons on a wedding dress that they had few left for the first year of marriage.

THAT BODY OF YOURS

JAMES W. BARTON, M.D.

The Effect Upon the Skin of Lack of Vitamins

Most of us today, if we were asked what each vitamin did for the body, would think of vitamin A for the eyes, vitamin B for the appetite and nerves, vitamin C to ward off scurvy, and vitamin D to supply sunshine in "bottled" form.

However, what most of us forget is that vitamins have more than one use in the body. Thus Drs. Joseph Jordan Eller, and Luis Alberto Diaz, New York, in the Urologic Cutaneous Review tell us about the effects of lack of the various vitamins on the skin.

Vitamin A. Vitamin A is needed to maintain the healthy condition of all epithelial or "surface" tissues—the skin, covering of the eyeball, lining of the mouth, stomach and other organs. If not enough vitamin A is present these soft surfaces become hard. The skin becomes dry and rough and various chronic skin ailments occur.

Vitamin B. If vitamin B2 (riboflavin) is lacking, there is pallor of the skin, crusts and fissures (small cuts) at corners of the mouth, lips become red at line where they close, and there are dry scales on sides of nose and openings into nose and ears.

Vitamin B Complex. What is sometimes called the seborrheic diathesis—dryness and dandruff— is believed due to continuous lack of vitamin B complex. This may possibly account for the results some physicians report they have obtained by use of vitamin B complex for falling and gray hair.

Nicotinic Acid—Part of Vitamin B. Nicotinic acid cures many of the symptoms of pellagra, the skin symptoms of which are redness, swelling, dryness, thickening and scaling of the skin on those parts exposed to the sun's rays—backs of hands, elbows, knees, feet and neck although the disturbances may occur on any part of the surface of the skin.

Vitamin C. The only sign of scurvy caused by lack of vitamin C is the appearance of the skin. Skin is dirty looking, sallow, pallid or earthy in appearance. This is followed by spots about the hair roots, then puffy swellings in various ports of the body, particularly at bands of elbows and knees. Then deposits of water occur in the skin in face and also in the legs.

Vitamin D. Apparently there is nothing that occurs to the skin that would point to any lack of vitamin D.

You can keep the youthful elasticity of your skin

Compare face with shoulder skin. You'll find shoulders look 5 or more years younger. That's because shoulder skin retains its elasticity—while facial skin pores are clogged with make-up, unable to breathe for hours at a time. And when pores can't breathe skin starts to age prematurely. But Palmolive can help retain youthful elasticity in your skin.

Look younger in 14 days! Each time you wash, (use a face cloth) massage warm, rich, vitalizing Palmolive lather thoroughly into your skin for one full minute. Now a quick rinse and pat dry. 2 WEIRD GAMES FEATURE PLAY IN INT. LEAGUE

Toronto Split With Syracuse, Latter Making 11 Errors in Second Game

GIANTS NOW FIRST

By The Associated Press

Two weird games featured the International Baseball League last night. In one of them the Syracuse Chiefs made 11 errors.

In the other Rochester scored six runs in the top of the ninth, then lost when Newark came back with eight tallies.

Newark was the more fortunate for the storybook finish gave the Bears a double win over Rochester Red Wings, 2-0 and 9-8. Floyd Bevens hurled a four-hit shutout in the opener. Bill Rabe's single climaxed the hectic ninth inning in the afterpiece by driving in the tying and winning runs.

Bob Katz, optioned by Cincinnati, pitched Syracuse to a 3-2 triumph over Toronto before the Chiefs got butterfingers in the nightcap to let the Maple Leafs chalk up a 16-3 victory for a split. It was the worst fielding record of a Syracuse team in 11 years.

Jersey City regained first place by coming from behind to beat Buffalo 4-3 on Steve Filipowicz' 9th-inning single. Montreal defeated Baltimore 10-5 as George Washburn and Tom Warren proved too tough in the pinches. A total of 14 Baltimore runners were stranded.

TACKLES DUNLOP

Maybe Al (Bunny) Dunlop, who meets Vern Baxter (above) in the semi-final of tonight's all-star wrestling bout at the Hume Arena, thinks he can gain top recognition in grappling circles if he can dispose of the "Oregon lumberjack" tonight. Of course it's all problematic, but most anythingg can happen in a modern wrestling ring. For instance in the main bout Promoter Tunney is personally bringing Ralph Garabaldi into town for the purpose of beating John "Fingers" Katan. Maybe Tunney knows his wrestling, but the question is does he know Katan?

Brockville OTC Team Wins Final Cross-Country Run

Kingston, June 14 (CP) — The team of cross country runners from the officers training centre, Brockville won the finals in a four-mile competition between army units in military district No. 3.

The event was run on Monday evening in the hilly and wooded Barriefield area, near Kingston, and the starting and finishing points were at the Canadian Ordnance Corps training centre. Second place was won by the Vimy Signals training centre team, and the third, fourth and fifth places by the teams from Barriefield camp, the Peterborough basic training centre, and the Cornwall basic training centre respectively.

While 15 men were entered by each training centre, the placing of the first 12 of each aggregation constituted the score for each team. Ten men from Brockville O.T.C. were among the first 17 to finish.

Cadet Ed Somers, of St. Quentin, N.B., training at the O.T.C. Brockville, was the first to complete the cross country run. Pte. A. J. Leonard of Toronto and Vimy Signals, was placed second, and Cadet Frank Loween, of Calgary and the O.T.C., third. These three individual winners were presented with inscribed miniature cups.

Toronto, June 14 —(CP)— Maritimers have always been looked at rather askance because they preferred English rugger to the Canadian brand, but at last they have been given a word of tribute, if somewhat left-handed at that.

Harry Eisen of the London Free Press says it is his considered opinion that rugger is the "roughest, toughest, most gruelling sport outside of a waterfront brawl." The fact that 15 players start, play and finish a game with none of the varied and frequent substitutions allowed in Canadian football amazed him the most, and he figures a man must be a tough egg to do it.

"We predict that when this war is over, those lads who trained in command units will turn to rugger, not to such sissified engagements as football or wrestling or lion taming," says Harry.

Street-Corner Bookies Unable to Pay Off Due to Drive Against Them

By The Canadian Press

Proclaiming himself the oldest member of the Edgewater Golf Club, Chicago, Chick Evans, 53, declared last night he had been practising for years for a big tournament on the Edgewater course which will come at last in the Chicago Victory National Championship June 28-July 2. Evans, who won both the Open and amateur titles in 1916, holds the course record of 64, six under par but added he was not kidding himself about winning the tourney.

New Jersey yesterday launched an anti-gambling drive with the result that street-corner bookies were unable to pay off to small-time bettors around New York. Previously the book-makers had relayed bets to big gambling operators in New Jersey but this system was reported out.

BOSTON RED SOX BLOSSOMING OUT AS CONTENDERS

Cincinnati Reds Have Hit the Skids in the National Loop

YANKS BEATEN AGAIN

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sport Writer

Boston Red Sox are blossoming out as pennant contenders in the American League while Cincinnati Reds have hit the skids in the National loop.

The second-place Sox chalked up their sixth victory win yesterday by beating Philadelphia Athletics 7-2, behind veteran Joe Bowman. Meantime, Cincinnati dropped its fourth in a row as Ray Starr, waived from the Reds two weeks ago, pitched Pittsburgh to a 3-2 triumph in a five-inning fray halted by rain.

Dutch Leonard, veteran knuckle-ball flinger for Washington Senators, extended the New York Yankees' losing streak to seven straight. Dutch rubbed it in by shutting out the New Yorkers 3-0 under the arcs.

Sparked by Danny Litwhiler, who bashed out three doubles and a single, the first-place St. Louis Cardinals walloped Chicago Cubs 8-3.

Trailing until the ninth the league-leading St. Louis Browns banged over three runs to beat Chicago White Sox 5-3 for Jack Kramer's eighth triumph.

The Phillies snapped a five-game losing streak by beating Boston Braves 8-7 in the second game of a double-header. Jim (no-hit) Tobin twirled the Braves to a 2-1 triumph in the opener.

Three home runs, one of them by Dix Walker with two on in the fifth, gave Brooklyn a 9-4 decision over the Giants.

CEMENTMEN GAIN GROUND IN LOOP BEATING SQUIRES

Alemites Also Stay in Win Column by Defeating the Argylls

BUNTON FIRES 4-HITTER

Point Anne "Cementmen" and Alemite gained ground in the Belleville Men's Softball League in a twin bill played at the Fair Grounds Tuesday night. Bubby Gaulin's Cementmen bounced back into the winning column to blank the Squires Juniors 7 to 0 behind the four-hit pitching of Bob Bunton, while Bob Best's Alemites handed the Garrison their fifth consecutive loss winning 11 to 4 over the "Soldiers".

Bobby Bunton not only fired a four-hitter for Point Anne, but hit a home run to help his own cause and assure victory. After scoring one in the first the Cementmen drove in four in the third and coasted in behind Bunton's strong mound effort. The Cementmen played strong defensive ball behind Bunton while the Squires' work in the field was wobbly behind Al Adams, who hurled for the kids. Adams tried to help his own cause with a seventh inning double, but some snappy fielding kept the Squires from scoring despite the fact Hunter and Culkin also hit safely, Moher getting the other junior safety. Whitehead with a third base clout and two singles paced the winning Cementmen, while Bunton had a single as well as his round-tripper. Murney Green handled Bunton's four-hit pitching effort in grand style.

In the curtain-raiser the Alemite nine kept pace by scoring runs in all of the first four frames and then coasting in behind Connie Harris' pitching. Sonny Green Jr., playing third for Argylls, touched Harris for the only extra base hit registered against the Alemite moundsman, a seventh inning triple, that was good for two runs. Gordie Booth hit a home run for Alemite with one aboard in the third, while Harris blasted one that got away from the Soldiers' outer gardeners and went for four bases. Dickie, Hammett and Martin all collected three hits for Bob Best's Alemites, who kept pace in the league race. Vam Vlack was the only Argyll hitter to register more than one hit off Harris, as the winners out-hit the "Soldiers" 11 to 8. Loose fielding cost the Argyll several runs. Jack Reid was on the hilltop for the Argylls and deserved a better fate than was foisted upon him.

Eddie Schrieder and Harold Bawden umpired the dual bill, that will be followed by another doubleheader tomorrow night.

A clergyman in a railway compartment had for company a group of workmen whose language was hardly of the kind that a reverend gentleman is supposed to hear. One of them must have realized this, for, turning to the clergyman, he said, "You must excuse us, guv'nor, but yer knows we're just plain speakin' blokes as always calls a spade a spade."

"Is that so?" said the clergyman. "I should have thought that would have been the last thing you would have called it."

Help Wanted

There is no truth in the rumor that Manager Joe McCarthy, of the New York Yankees, is seeking the services of "Peeney" Mills to bolster the slipping Highlanders. However, if the Yanks continue to slip into the second division Marse Joe may be glad to sign even Jim "Cap" Smith before the season gets much older.

However, there is little likelihood in McCarthy or the Yankees moving to the sticks for replacements of playing power. With this thought in mind there must be a large amount of used baseball equipment lying about the cellars and attics in more than one home in Belleville. Today we have two teams of teen aged lads who are endeavouring to play baseball in Belleville, but the kids are sadly in need of playing equipment, especially for the catchers and some bats. Surely there is sufficient ball paraphernalia lying around to equip these lads, but quick. How about getting behind the kids? In the event you're in a position to help get in touch with Mr. Fitzpatrick, phone 1268, or Bob Blaind at the Capitol Theatre.

College Baseball

A college baseball "world's series" will be held after the war, if a plan broached by Red Rolfe, former New York Yankee third baseman and coach of the Yale University team, is adopted. He believes the majors will co-operate in staging the games in June, shortly after the colleges close.

Plans should be put under way now, Rolfe says, so the series can be started as soon as the boys return to college from the war. He has in mind a short series of regional eliminations, with the two survivors meeting for the title in a major league park. Red tentatively proposes six such divisions, the winner of the Pacific Coast Conference playing the Missouri Valley champions, the Western Conference titlists opposing the Eastern Intercollegiate League victors and the Southwest battling the Southeast.

The playoffs and championship series could be completed within a ten-day period, Rolfe figures, and Red believes the boys who usually battle for nothing but glory on campus diamonds, would welcome the national spotlight and an opportunity to settle the college championship of the United States.

Softball Siftings

Smarting under that 7-3 shellacking the "Marines" handed them last week, Bubby Gaulin's Point Anne "Cementmen" bounced back to blank the Columbian Squires 7 to 0 last night with Bobby Bunton hurling a four-hitter against the Squires and making sure of victory by peling out a circuit blow for good measure. The Cementmen played heads-up ball behind Bunton, which is more than can be said about the youthful Squires behind Al Adams. In the other half of a twin bill Bob Best's Alemites downed the Garrison "Soldiers" 11 to 4, scoring runs in all of the first four frames. Gord Booth helped the "east-enders" with a two-run homer in the third. Incidentally tonight the Marines play the Mountain View "Bombers" an exhibition game at the park.

On Thursday night the C. N. R. "Railroaders" and the "Marines" tangle with first place at stake in the first game of a twin bill, the Squire kids and Alemite meeting in the nightcap affair. That curtain-raiser should be the tit-bit of the current softball season. Tonight it's girls' softball at the Armouries also.

Listen, Skeptics.

There are the usual doubting-Thomases, regardless. Those sport skeptics who know all sport is FIXED, especially wrestling. Well, for general consumption regarding the grunt and groan business "Whipper Billie" Watson, the pride of York Township, got the sweetest shellacking of his young life at the Ottawa Auditorium, last Saturday night and by no other person than Bob "Strangler" Wagner, the Oregon Octopus, who forced Watson to the limit both here and at Maple Leaf Gardens. Down in the Capital City Watson isn't the "white-haired boy" he is in Belleville, Toronto and St. Louis and Phil Lawson will think twice before signing his protege to appear near Premier King's balliwick again. Yes, Wagner out-slugged and out-swung Watson to win.

Maybe this has nothing to do with tonight's Katan-Garabaldi main bout at the Hume Arena, but it does prove that Watson, Katan and all the rest can be beaten if they go to the ring once too often. (Beware Mister Katan.)

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 404

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Bridge is not a quarrelsome game merely because you talk back to your partner. You talk back to him only because that is the only way you can tell him what you have.

If your partner starts with a bid of one, he says he has five tricks. He assumes you will have two tricks. With not more than two tricks, he expects you to say pass.

If you have more than two tricks with two high cards among them, you answer with a bid. If you see tricks enough to make a game and two sure tricks among them, your answering bid is still a jump.

To select your bid, you follow the order of choice in "T-A-K": takeout, no-trump. If you takeout, you show a biddable suit. If you assist, you show adequate support. No-trump says you have neither.

If you takeout to a new suit, it is forcing one round. And all takeouts to new suits continue to be forcing until the chain of new suit takeouts has been broken.

If you jump bid in anything, it is forcing until at least a game contract is reached. It is binding on the partnership to keep the bidding alive to game.

This game policy is pursued after the first round of bidding. The only difference is this: After the first round, a jump does not promise two sure tricks; only tricks enough to make a game.

Make a stab at this hand:

♠ A 7 2 ♡ 8
♡ Q 9 6 4 3
♢ K J 9 7 5
♣ K 9

You hand contains six tricks, two of which are sure tricks. You have a biddable spade suit. If your partner opens with one heart, what is your response?

With the five tricks promised by partner, you see enough tricks for a game. Marginal two sure tricks. You can jump at once. Takeout to two spades.

That's the way to talk back even to your wife.

"Birth of the Blues."

New Orleans' Basin Street, famed in music and story and wherever a blues note is sounded anywhere in the world, plays an important part in the story of Paramount's new picture "Birth of the Blues" which opened today at the Capitol theatre, Toronto, starring Bing Crosby, Mary Martin, Brian Donlevy, Carolyn Lee, Jack Teagarden and his orchestra, and Rochester.

A reproduction of part of the famed street, which is almost as well-known as Broadway to New York, was made at the Paramount studios for the picture which recounts the stirring story of how the first white bands caught the spirit of Negro jazz and brought it before a first reluctant and then delighted public. The tale as told in the picture begins just about the beginning of the century.

In the movie Bing Crosby is a New Orleans boy, who rides a hot speaking from his father to go down to Basin Street every chance he gets in sit on a bale of cotton and play his clarinet with pick-up Negro bands.

New Orleans of those days is now recognized as being the city where Negro music started its development, and Basin Street was the scene where the darkies used to gather in noisy saloons and cabarets to hear the new rhythms and melodies.

The Prime Minister assured the members that "on this last week of great success" as much time had been given to discussions about de Gaulle and his affairs as to any other subject.

In response to a request for assurance that nothing would be done to prevent de Gaulle landing in France if he wished, Mr. Churchill said:-

"The question is one which I hope may be found capable of solution." He declined to discuss in detail the issuance of Franc notes to invading troops on the grounds that he had not had a chance to read President Roosevelt's statement, but added:-

Lies With Government.

"It seems, however, quite clear that if notes are given out to the French population in return for livestock or other services, that the responsibility of meeting them in the first instance, at any rate, would lie with the government issuing them."

Cries of protest rose from the floor when Aneurin Bevan (Labor) pressing for further explanation of relationships in general with the French and the issue of notes in particular, asked if the government in does not have the full confidence of all its parties in the political handling of the war.

These protests turned to laughter when Mr. Churchill retorted he "never aimed at such a high sense as entire agreement throughout the country on methods of handling foreign policy and chuckles when he added, "and where I think of some of the persons who would have to be converted, equally I have never aimed at it."

He disagreed with one member's observation that the attitude was causing "great widespread anxiety," but added it is exhibit it should be properly dressed to our gallant soldiers and to the great operations which give hope as well as anxiety."

AT THE CAPITOL

"Beneath Western Skies"
(Smiley Burnette)

As comedian of western pictures, Smiley Burnette, round favorite of thousands of fans, who is currently appearing in Republic's "Beneath Western Skies" which opens at the Capitol Theatre next, is also one of the film capitol's most versatile personalities.

The roly-poly comic whose antics in westerns have delighted audiences from coast to coast, is a noted musician and a very talented composer.

He learned to play on various musical instruments before he was of school age in Tuscola, Illinois, where his father was minister of a Baptist church. By the time he was nine years old, "Smiley" could play a dozen instruments and he has increased that number to 32 now. But he hasn't read music, and he has never had a music lesson in his life.

Composing comes as naturally as his playing to the heavy-weight actor, and he has written 138 songs for western pictures since he came to Hollywood, including music for all the 44 westerns in which he has appeared with Gene Autry.

"Youngest Profession"
(All Star Cast)

The most valuable piece of property on the set of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "The Youngest Profession," coming next to the Capitol Theatre, was an autograph album carried by Virginia Weidler.

In her role of teen-age movie fan and autograph collector, Virginia hunts down celebrities to obtain their "precious" signatures.

When the young star learned that such stellar film personalities as Lana Turner, Walter Pidgeon, Greer Garson, Walter Pidgeon and Robert Taylor would grant—for the picture—her request and appear as themselves, she volunteered to use her own autograph album.

"I'm as avid an autograph hunter as the girl I portray in the picture," Virginia admitted. "Mr. Powell's signature is one I've been after for a long time, too."

"Masked Marvel"
(Final Chapter)

The concluding episode of Republic's "Masked Marvel" serial, will bring the chapter-thriller, which has been running locally for twelve weeks, to a smashing and dynamic conclusion.

The dread Sakima will be ultimately conquered, and meet the dread end he deserves.

The Marvel will at last divulge his identity, and local serial fans will be satisfied — until the next Republic serial comes to town. Then the excitement will begin all over again.

A funny cartoon completes the bill.

AT THE BELLE

"THE UNINVITED", Thrilling

The only way to describe Paramount's "The Uninvited," now in its 6th and final day at the Belle Theatre is to say "It's out of this world". It truly is, and in more ways than one.

With Ray Milland, Ruth Hussey and Donald Crisp in starring roles, and Lewis Allen producing, Gail Russell whose bid for screen stardom definitely does not suffer after her exceptionally fine performance in this picture, the picture deals in the unearthly, with a haunted house and the weirdest set of complications you've ever seen packed into one picture.

Anyway you look at it, "The Uninvited" is certainly one film that definitely should not be missed. Ray Milland and Gail Russell are the romantic interest in the story.

THREE FEATURETTES

The feature attraction is preceded by three entertaining featurettes including the Canadian Movietone News, a Paramount Technicolor musical Parade, "Lucky Cowboy" and a funny Popeye Cartoon.

Alfred Hitchcock's "LIFEBOAT"

It was inevitable that the magic of Alfred Hitchcock and the genius of John Steinbeck should one day be merged.

That 20th Century-Fox has finally brought about this eagerly awaited combination of two of the screen's greatest talents is certainly another feather in the cap of that studio.

And it was equally inevitable that the result — Alfred Hitchcock's production of "Lifeboat" by John Steinbeck—should prove to be the brilliant new milestone in motion picture entertainment that advance reports claim it to be.

The spectacular film triumph which stars Tallulah Bankhead and features William Bendix Walter Slezak, Mary Anderson, John Hodiak and Hanley Hull, Heather Angel, Hume Cronyn and Canada Lee is scheduled to open next at the Belle Theatre.

"FUN TIME", In Technicolor

One of the outstanding Technicolor Featurettes of 1944 has been presented by Fox Movietone on the same program, appropriately titled, "Fun Time", it has a vaudeville background and a variety of entertainment, and is told against the background of a theatrical boarding house, and features Eddie Fo, Jr., Rod Hall, Mabel Paige, Cesar O'Shea, Yvonne de Carlo and Ronina Rodell. Eight talented and varied vaudeville acts are introduced during the action of the breezy film. A Terrytoon cartoon, "Down With Cats" completes the program.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Ladies Courageous"

Plunged into all sorts of opportunity to "see" one of America's busiest military air bases in action, because most of the hundred pilots in "Ladies Courageous" produced by Walter Wanger for Universal Studio was filmed there.

"Ladies Courageous" opened today at the McCarthy theatre, tells a thrilling and daring story of the WAFS—Women's Auxiliary Ferrying Squadron—and of the twenty-five young American women flyers who originally formed this organization in 1942 as a unit which could be released for overseas combat duty.

Army fighter planes, transport freighters and bombers landed or took off from the field every minute and a half, the clock around, while the film troops was there. Despite the magnitude of the movie production and the technical difficulties which faced the army aviators, technicians under such circumstances, the schedules for both the army air base and the Universal company ran close conflicted. There was no interruption of the war effort.

Woven into an authentic story of the WAFS are appealing and emotional threads from the lives of the individual girls in the service. Practically the entire picture centres at the army air port, from which huge transport planes roar forth over the Pacific to the combat zones.

"Ladies Courageous" human and heart-warming is a film revealing the courageous and spectacular contributions of young women flying as ferrying pilots on the home front.

"CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT" by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER 16

Actually it was impossible to imagine him—so very young, a bit loutish and not too bright—as the man with whom the sophisticated Amy had indulged in a winter of clandestine meetings in an empty house. Although, on the other hand his abject devotion to her was distinct, and his one really redeeming trait.

I caught a glance from Aunt Millie, saying plainer than words, "It's a fake. This is never the man she's been meeting", nodded imperceptible agreement and then turned my attention to the various members of the Forrestall family.

Young Bobbie Jordan was painfully easy to read. A lad bewildered by his sudden good fortune, he sat beside his fiancee, half cocky and half flustered, eating her up with adoring glances that were completely ignored, although, I am sure, Amy was aware of them. She sat, too stiffly erect for comfort, staring straight ahead with a set expression on her pretty face. And in spite of it—perhaps because of her gardenish-partyish dress and large hat—she seemed younger and less sure of herself than usual.

Conley Forrestall looked just plain bored with his wife's exuberance, and preoccupied with more important—and not very enjoyable—matters. A few times I caught his eyes on me. And each time he glanced away with a quick frown. It gave me an uneasy feeling of impending trouble, brought Aunt Millie's account of Inspector Pettengill's exhortations back to me: "I'll run you both in, if you don't come clean". Was Conley Forrestall thinking—of that?

I was too engrossed with the Forrestall problem and my thoughts, to notice that Dad had quietly gotten up and gone into the house. I might not even have seen him come back, right away, if Alice hadn't greeted his reappearance in the most spectacular manner.

Her word-cascade stopped suddenly, in mid-splash. Her eyes goggled. Her mouth remained a large open O for an instant. Then she rushed across the lawn with a delighted: "Gala! Gala darling! So wonderful to see you up and abroad, after all these years!"

And there, on the terrace, was Dad, leading Gala, lovely and shining in a long, simple white dress, down the steps.

Aunt Millie, Allan and I exchanged glances that said gleefully: "Good for him and good for her". Then I avoided the repetition of the Bobbie Jordan introductions by running past my latest, and most welcome guest into the house, to inform Nettie and Mae of the number of people outside and ask them to begin serving tea.

And that is when I found out why Conley Forrestall had frowned.

He was in the library when I came back from the kitchen. Waiting for me. And he cut off m yway to the terrace with an urgent:

"I must talk with you, alone—Mrs. Jollimar".

So Bruce had told Conley Forrestall about me!

I stared at him for a moment and then blurted out: "You've known—all along?"

"I heard it early this morning", he answered briefly. "Can you give me a few minutes, now?"

I glanced around wildly. The maids would be coming through the room, presently, with the tea things—

"Not here. Let's go in the garden. Out the back way", I suggested.

The path from the rear door was sheltered. Only for a short stretch—five, six yards—could anyone using it be seen from the lawn where the others were.

We quickly crossed the open space and walked into the protection of an archway of lilacs. There Forrestall stopped.

"Your husband is anxious to see you, Mrs. Jollimar", he said stiffly, with obvious disapproval.

His manner made me angry. "Don't call me by that name and he isn't my husband", I told him sharply. "He hasn't been for five years. Sometimes I think he never was".

He shrugged. "All right. Miss Wentworth, then. It's none of my business, and I hate meddling in it, as it means deceiving your father. But—I have no choice. He won't do anything until he's seen you. His one decent instinct—repairing the worst wrong of his life, he calls it."

"I'd call murder a greater wrong", I said bluntly.

Forrestall's eyebrows climbed. "Oh? You think he killed Stoddard?"

"Didn't he?" I parried.

"He says no".

"Then why is he is hiding somewhere nearby? I thought he'd gone away. Far away, I mean", I asked and conjectured in one breath.

"That only he himself can explain". Forrestall told me with bitter sarcasm. "I would say: because he is Bruce Burton—Bruce Jollimar, as you know him. Self-centered, moody, contrary, and going his own way roughshod. But I don't suppose I'm telling you news?"

I shook my head. "No. I've had a sample of it, thank you. But that isn't important, this minute. Where is he and what does he want of me?"

"For one thing, he's curious how you discovered he was here. You did, didn't you? That's why you went into the Burton house when you found—Stoddard?"

"I saw him. Monday night, after the movies. Walking along our street in the rain", I told him. "And if that's all he wants to see me for —I'm not going".

"Of course it isn't all. He wants to discuss a divorce and a settlement, and how to keep your secret marriage—a secret, in all this mess. Also, he feels he owes you an explanation of nis 'unpardonable conduct'—in his own words".

"I'm not interested in his explanations and settlements. And he can tell me how to get rid of him quietly through you", I demurred.

"He can—but he won't. In fact, he refuses to give himself up before he's had his talk with you".

"Give himself up? But you said he hadn't killed Stoddard", I gasped.

"I'm putting it the wrong way. I should have said, he won't come out in the open—admit he was in his house when it happened and tell what he knows", Forrestall corrected himself. "To my mind it's the same thing though".

"Then you believe he's done it?" I insisted.

He passed his hand across his face wearily, and I noticed for the first time how drawn and tired he looked.

"I don't know. I wish I'd told the police of his presence the moment I heard of the murder", he said dejectedly. "But I didn't. And I'm paying for it now. Pettengill made me show him the hidden safe last night, and found the envelope with the directions for locating the radium—opened. So now he thinks I opened it—and maybe I'm the man he's looking for? I—or poor Roberts".

"I'm sure he doesn't think any such thing. He's only acting as if he did, to draw you out", I consoled him. "Roberts helped Bruce get away without asking you, didn't he?"

He hesitated a moment. "That's right".

"And he didn't throw the stone away—the uranium?"

"No. Bruce has it. He says he wrenched it out of the murderer's hand, and that he didn't see who the man was in the darkpess, but has a suspicion—or an idea of how to trap him". He stopped abruptly, with a tired motion. "We haven't the time to go over the whole story. You'll be missed by your guests. Bruce can tell it to you. He's at his camp —the Burton camp—on Eagle Lake. Some forty miles from here. If you weren't a stranger, you'd know how to get there. But, as it is—I've drawn you a map. You go out on the State Highway, and then follow this sketch". He took a folded slip of paper from his vest pocket and handed it to me. "Leave before sunrise. Half past three, four at the latest. That'll take you there in time to be back before your people are up and about".

I took the paper mechanically and tucked it into the front of my dress.

"But why the ungodly hour? Why can't I drive out during the day?" I objected.

"You might be followed. Anyway, that's how Bruce wants it. I'd have taken you, only—since I'm a suspect—"

He left the sentence in the air. "Come on, let's join the others."

When we emerged from the lilac tunnel—on the far side, away from the house, where a crossing path would let us reach the lawn—we ran smack into Inspector Pettengill, coming from the direction of the Burton house.

He looked altogether spick and span and happy in his Sunday best, with his hair shining from the recent ministrations of his barber; and his smile was more genial than ever.

"Why, look who's been hiding in the bushes!" he greeted us affably. "Hope you don't mind my butting in on your party, Miss Kay. But I was over to the Burton house, nosing around some more—never can tell what's been overlooked— and when I saw the crowd on your lawn from a window, I just couldn't resist coming".

"I'm glad you followed that impulse", I lied cheerfully. "That is, if you stop fibbing about what the impulse was. Any bet, it wasn't the crowd, but a glimpse of Mae's wonderful cakes".

"Well, I didn't see 'em, but I had an idea of how they'd be there", he acknowledged with a grin. "Your new son-in-law here too, Mr. Forrestall said ironically. "Do you wish to meet him in public, or privately?"

"In public'll do, for on Sunday", the Inspector chuckled'. 'Just want to say bless you and good luck, and don't go trespassing in strange houses no more. That's all. You had a nice drive last night with your young man, Miss Kay?"

If the Inspector didn't wish to pursue a topic, he just didn't, I thought admiringly, and obediently launched into an account of my evening with Allan—the beauties of the moonlit shore and all the rest of the expected panegyric.

But I didn't get far. Sounds of a commotion, coming from the lawn, stopped all three of us in our tracks.

At first it was only a confused jumble of voices—a lot of people trying to out-talk each other. Then one voice topped all the others, and it ceased to be speech, became a series of weird moans, sobs, wails—steadily rising in the scale and culminating in a wild, abandoned shriek.

We stood rooted. I don't know if the Inspector and Forrestall glanced at each other. I only know I stared into the air, wide-eyed—and I didn't see the sun-drenched, blossom-heavy garden at all, but darkness, the ray of a flashlight playing on a wall—

Then I found myself diving through the shrubbery and racing toward the lawn.

Everyone there was talking and gesturing, and they all were clustered around a shrieking figure in their middle: Stella Avery.

Aunt Millie was holding her by one arm and her husband—his face criss-crossed with welts and scratches—by the other. And she was fighting against them furiously, like a trapped animal, with kicks and snaps of her jaws.

At first glance all her rage and fury seemed directed against Dad, standing before her, legs apart, arms akimbo, transfixing her with an outraged glare.

But the nature of the thickly mouthed abuse with which she punctuated her hysterics showed the real object of Stella's attack to be Gala, who was leaning on the back of a chair a few steps behind Dad; deathly pale, but composed and proudly drawn up to her full height.

The scene really defied description, and the epithets used by Stella didn't bear repeating.

I could see Dad was talking. But I couldn't hear what he said, any more than I could make out the scandalized—or soothing — remarks of the others. Only when Stella Avery ran out of breath—and swear words—for a longish period at last, did his voice boom out in the comparative lull, and in a tone he usually reserves for colored trouble-makers among his shipyard crews.

"I won't have my guests insulted. Shut up and get out!"

It probably was the first time in Stella's wealth-buttressed life that she had been told to get out quite so bluntly. Most likely it also was the first time she had lost her self-control so unboundedly. At any rate, she couldn't take it, and started to shriek again.

And then she saw me.

The screams stopped and—I don't know how she managed it. Perhaps my sudden emergence from the shrubbery, followed by Forrestall and the Inspector had diverted the attention of her captors—suddenly she was free and came bounding toward me in long leaps, flinging herself upon me, clawing at me, fawning into my face.

"Now will you believe me, Kay Wentworth—now do you see she's evil—a witch who ought to be burned at the stake!" she jabbered in gasps, between moans and whimpers. "She's snared your father too! It isn't his fault. The men can't help themselves, even if she is a cripple! The nerve of her! Making my poor Curtis come here behind my back, when I'm sick in bed with the horror of that—that murder! She did it, she did it, she did it!" The last "She did it" was a thin screech breaking on itself. "She'll kill us all! All who stand in her way! Unless we do something! Listen to me—you must listen to me—"

I stood stockstill under her pawing, hating it and not knowing what to do, until Allan came to my rescue by getting hold of her arms and pulling them together behind her back.

"Get your car, ready, Avery. I'll hold her for you", he called over his shoulder.

Strange enough, his firm grasp seemed to quiet her a little. She only moaned softly, murmuring over and over: "She's ruined my life—I hate her—I hate her—"

"No one's ruined your life but yourself", I told her, as calmly as I could. "Least of all Gala. She had nothing to do with your husband's visit here. He came for your sake. To beg me to come to your party in spite of your terrible behavior yesterday. And look how you've thanked him for it".

She stared at me vacantly and then opened her mouth for a bigger and better shriek.

"Don't!" I cautioned her icily, in a very low tone. "Don't do it again. It isn't necessary. I know where I've heard you shriek before!"

She swallowed her scream, literally, starting to choke and fighting for breath. And then, unexpectedly, she jerked free of Allan and streaked across the lawn and around the house, in pursuit of her husband.

A few minutes later the purr of a motor came from the driveway—

"What you tell her, to make her scoot thataway?" the Inspector asked into the dazed numbness that held not only me, but all of us.

"That I'd recognized her voice", I said dully. "It was she, Inspector, in the Burton housce Friday night. She found Professor Stoddard's body before I did, and ran down the stairs, screaming".

PICTON

Pte. F. Richardson Dies of Wounds; Overseas Since '39

Picton, June 14—(Official)—Mrs. Richardson, Picton, has received word of the death of her husband, Pte. F. J. Richardson, 2nd Canadian Infantry Division, reported in the casualty list published in the afternoon. Mrs. Richardson resides on Bloomfield Road.

Overseas with Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, Pte. Richardson left Canada the first contingent in 1939. He was wounded in Sicily and likely from these wounds died in a hospital in Italy, while undergoing treatment for blood-poisoning.

Pte. Richardson came to Canada with his parents when five years of age and had resided in Picton since his arrival.

His father, Pte. F. J. Richardson, Sr., was wounded in the war with the Veterans' Guard at Windsor, Ont., and is retired in service with the Canadian Engineers in Italy. Another brother, Pte. George is at present in hospital in Italy, with diphtheria.

A sister-in-law is being held during night at the undertaking parlors of Mrs. Cowdell by Capt. D. R. Strachan.

A former member of the Royal Air Force here, and who married a local girl, Sergt. Pilot Jack James Sawyer, has been killed Overseas, according to word received by Mr. and Mrs. Allan Harrison, parents of Mrs. Sawyer, who was formerly Miss Jean Harrison. No details have been received except that he was killed June 5.

A native of Newfoundland, Sgt. Sawyer was the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Sawyer, Bonavista, Newfoundland. He was stationed with the R.A.F. at Picton, and during the last was married to Miss Harrison who joined him overseas for the ceremony.

Sixteen striking overseas he had been promoted from the rank of Flight Lieutenant to that of Squadron Leader, in the month of completed courses in night flying bombing and commanding work-leading both classes. He was one of the most popular members of the R.A.F. here and very active in promoting station activities.

Mr. and Mrs. Ezra Mayhe of Wellington have received word of a letter from their son, Flying Officer Basil Mayhe, stating that he has been officially reported a prisoner-of-war in Germany.

Hit by Sniper's Bullet

Serving with the 1st Special Service Force, he received a lieutenant-ory, is raised in United States, Sgt. Corpus Wright has been wounded, according to a letter received from him by his mother, Mrs. Charles Wright. He stated he was wounded by a sniper's bullet, by a machine bullet. He spoke highly of treatment in the U. S. Red Cross hospital in Italy. George went overseas in 1939 with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, returning two years later as a volunteer for the paratroop branch. He trained at various places in the United States and saw service at Sicily. He has been in Italy some months.

Many Offenders.

Enforcement of Picton's traffic bylaws was started by the town fathers at their last meeting, but apparently the police department got around 200 summons in a week. There are few regulations governing parking near fire hydrants, failure to observe stop streets and leaving cars on the street during parked cars thus obstructing traffic.

The police show no discrimination, for the long list included the mayor, a former member of Parliament and many other prominent citizens.

Up to last night, 26 persons had visited the Justice of Peace and paid the $1.00 fine and $1.00 costs. There were 50 summons out for court today and they are very likely to be there.

Little warning was given that a severe clamp-down was to be made and the two constables were quickly forced to purchase new books for listing names and charges.

Period of Complaints.

While the bylaws are being enforced and the town's coffers enriched, there has been a flood of complaints. These concern the parking on King Street by rural shoppers who stop to pick up grocery orders. Parking space is already at a premium and shoppers object to being forced to carry their purchases to their cars. One shopper, after placing her order, had a heavy sack returned to find his trust ticked-ed. He promptly returned to the store, where cries of consternation is the chief employee, cancelled his order and vowed he would shop elsewhere in future.

It is expected that complaints or rural residents will be voiced at County Council next week, and that some steps will be taken to provide parking spots where parcels can be left. Meanwhile, the whole town watches the parade of offenders and wonders, who next?

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, June 14 — (CP) — Quite apart from the 4 a.m. bell which sent the U. S. Red Cross hospital in Italy, George went overseas in 1939 with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment, returning two years later as a volunteer for the paratroop branch. He trained at various places in the United States and saw service at Sicily. He has been in Italy some months.

Many Offenders.

Enforcement of Picton's traffic bylaws was started by the town fathers at their last meeting, but apparently the police department got around 200 summons in a week. There are few regulations governing near fire hydrants, failure to observe stop streets and leaving cars on the street during parked cars thus obstructing traffic.

The police show no discrimination, for the long list included the mayor, a former member of Parliament and many other prominent citizens.

Up to last night, 26 persons had visited the Justice of Peace and paid the $1.00 fine and $1.00 costs. There were 50 summons out for court today and they are very likely to be there.

Little warning was given that a severe clamp-down was to be made and the two constables were quickly forced to purchase new books for listing names and charges.

Period of Complaints.

While the bylaws are being enforced and the town's coffers enriched, there has been a flood of complaints. These concern the parking on King Street by rural shoppers who stop to pick up grocery orders. Parking space is already at a premium and shoppers object to being forced to carry their purchases to their cars. One shopper, after placing her order, had a heavy sack returned to find his trust ticked-ed. He promptly returned to the store, where cries of consternation is the chief employee, cancelled his order and vowed he would shop elsewhere in future.

It is expected that complaints or rural residents will be voiced at County Council next week, and that some steps will be taken to provide parking spots where parcels can be left. Meanwhile, the whole town watches the parade of offenders and wonders, who next?

Super-Fortresses Raid Japan

17 Large Tanks Are Destroyed In Heavy Fighting

Raids on Gasoline Storage Tanks Are Slowing Rommel's Panzer Formations

GAIN AT CARENTAN

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 15 — (CP)—The Germans launched very heavy counter-attacks in the Villers-Bocage area yesterday and the fighting has been reported with heavy loss. Gen. Eisenhower's headquarters announced today.

Nine German Tiger tanks and eight Panther tanks were destroyed by American troops, have advanced on the east coast of Carentan in the peninsula.

Advances were also made south and south-west of Carentan in the face of stiff resistance.

On the left-centre flank German tanks are reacting strongly to all Allied attempts to advance. It was stated at SHAEF that there are indications that the Allied raids on gasoline storage tanks are affecting the progress of Marshal Rommel's panzer formations approaching the battle zone.

Other fighting took place in the Point 'L'Abbe area and almost 200 prisoners were captured behind some ground.

Patrols also were made west of Sainte Mere Eglise, which headquarters announced this morning had been penetrated.

Heavy fighting continues in the Villy-Bocage sector.

Tactical air forces moved in to support the troops along the battle bridgehead and the Allied medicos delivered a heavy attack on Villers Bocage.

Presumably Canadians also are fighting in the Carentan area as the British 50th air-borne division, British 8th air-borne division, which includes Canadians, and the troopers, has been operating in this region since the D-Day landings.

Heavy battles involving both tanks and infantry were reported by almost every sector of the front during 100-mile front and airmen said the German high command was gathering its reserves by every available means under cover of the few hours of darkness. Front dispatch said some of these reinforcements came from as far as 200 miles away.

The German high command said the fighting in Normandy was increasing in violence with the Allies trying to enlarge their bridgehead in all directions.

The American advance across the narrow neck of the Cherbourg Peninsula developed after repeated German attempts to recapture the pivotal city of Carentan were repulsed.

TWO CRITICIZED ON PEARL HARBOR DEFENCE DELAYS

U. S. House Committee Names Col. T. Wyman, Jr., and a German-Born Contractor Rohl

LAVISH PARTIES

Washington, June 15 (AP) — The colonel in charge and the German-born contractor on defences at Pearl Harbor were criticized by the House of Representatives Military Committee for delays which the report said, left the battleships and the cruisers and the way open for the Japanese.

While the work fell behind, the contractor held lavish parties, the committee said yesterday. Col. Theodore Wyman, Jr., of the army engineers accepted lavish entertainment from the contractor, Hans Wilhelm Rohl, in parties that involved liquor "by the case" and "cheap, commercial party girls."

It said the colonel was at Rohl's home in Hawaii when the Japanese struck on December 7, 1941 and that he rushed to his office "in civilian clothes and without military condition."

"How did it all happen," the committee asked, "that after nearly 30 years without taking the steps necessary to accomplish the task adequately — although meantime enjoying the fruits of progressive contracts, for Rohl suddenly began using every possible effort to become naturalized in order that he might be permitted to go to Hawaii just a few days before the attack on Pearl Harbor?"

Rohl was naturalized in September, 1941, two months before Pearl Harbor. Referring to the award to Rohl's company of some $10,000,000 in contracts, which included work in Hawaii and construction of a Pacific island base, the report said Hawaiians, Canton, Nandi, New Caledonia and Australia, the committee commented:

"It is extremely difficult to comprehend how, at so crucial a time and when necessity for the greatest possible military efficiency was paramount ...a man known to be a German alien was selected and actually put in charge of the planning, specifications and performance of the contract ..

"It is not a matter of conjecture ... that had the permanent aircraft warning stations (at Fort Harbor) been functioning on December 7, 1941, the approach of the Japanese planes would have been detected."

In the cities, where he still is in business, Rohl issued a statement through his attorney saying that on advice of counsel he would not make any report.After "completely exonerates me."

Trawler Shelled, Gunned by U-Boat, Repaired by Crew and Brought to Port

Boston, June 15. (AP)—A German submarine invaded the North Atlantic fishing grounds recently, shelled and machine-gunned a Boston trawler and forced all but two of the crew to abandon ship.

The submersible finally left, her deck guns destroyed by fire, the trawler would sink. Then the crew of 16—ten of whom had not brought her into port early today, left and succeeded in repairing her almost like a slave.

Details of the attack were given at a press conference by Captain James L. Abbott, 52, skipper of the 146-ton Boston trawler the Lark, owned by F. J. O'Hara Brothers, Inc., of Boston.

The sub first was sighted about 1,000 miles southeast of Nova Scotia and Tristan in the Martinas islands 1,500 miles southeast of Japan.

moonlit night and Abbott immediately ordered the watch off. All were sleeping.

The attack fired one shot across the bow and then opened up with machine guns on the fishermen scrambled into their dories. Captain Abbott, his 19-year-old son Wilhelm Abbott and the ship's dog Rex, remained aboard.

The sub fired from about 300 feet, the Captain said, but there was no damage. Then the submersible crept under the trawler and fired all but two of the crew to abandon ship.

The submersible finally left, her deck guns apparently jammed, the trawler would sink. Then the crew of 16—ten of whom had not brought her into port early today, left and succeeded in repairing her almost like a slave.

Details of the attack were given at a press conference by Captain James L. Abbott, 52, skipper of the 146-ton Boston trawler the Lark, owned by F. J. O'Hara Brothers, Inc., of Boston.

REDS HURL FINNS ACROSS UNNAMED RIVER IN ISTHMUS

Finnish Resistance Is Stiffening As Troops Reach Heavy Forests Near Viipuri

USE SPECIAL SQUADS

By EDDY GILMORE
Associated Press Staff Writer
Moscow, June 15 — (AP) — The Red Army hurled the Finns across an important but unnamed river today as it pressed on toward the port of Viipuri against a foe who is throwing up what Red Star described as "a multitude of obstacles."

All dispatches stressed the difficult fighting conditions faced by Col.-Gen. Leonid A. Govorov's troops as Russian places the Russians were employing special squads to cut through forests and establish bridgeheads.

There were many indications that Finnish resistance was stiffening and that the Soviets had come up against the main Finnish defences, but no indications that the Finns had been able to stop the Red Army in any sector.

Pushing back towards Viipuri, 29 miles away, the Finns chopped down hundreds of trees to block the highways and railroad lines.

The Finns were using the forests for ambushes, creating extreme caution on the part of Soviet troops entering in every task in the near-wilderness of the Karelian Isthmus.

Soviets Blast Finnish

The Russians introduced heavy bombing of rail lines through the forests. An Izvestia correspondent reported that since June 10 the Baltic Fleet had entered the campaign, but he did not say when planes or warships have penetrated the Finnish lines at Kuterselka on the Finns sub-Arctic front today in a communique broadcast from Berlin. The Germans said Viipuri was attacked last night by 150 Soviet planes.

New Giant Planes Used For 1st Time

No Mention Is Made Of Areas Attacked

Washington, June 15 —(AP)— The United States Army threw a new fighting giant into the war in the Pacific today, turning loose the new B-29 Super Fortresses in an air attack on the Japanese homeland.

A terse War Department communique said:

"B-29 Super Fortresses of the United States Army Air Forces 20th Bomber Command attacked Japan today."

It was the first fighting assignment for the sky mammoth, and the announcement also served to disclose for the first time the existence of the 20th Bomber Command, a world-roaring unit under the personal direction of Gen. H. H. Arnold, Chief of the Army Air Forces.

FIRST ATTACK SINCE APRIL, 1943.

The War Department withheld details on the new bombing of Japan proper—first such attack on the mainland since the Doolittle raid of April 18, 1942.

Gen. Arnold said in connection with the announcement:

"The employment of the B-30 makes possible the softening up attack on Japan very much earlier than would be possible with aircraft hitherto known to combat."

New Type Offensive

Gen. Marshall, United States Chief of Staff, in a statement on the attack made public by the War Department, said that the Super-Fortress initiated a new type of offensive against the enemy and also creates a new problem in the interception of enemy forces.

Because of the enormous ranges and heavy bomb load of the new bombardment plane, said Gen. Marshall, they can strike from many and remote bases at a single objective.

Their power is so great, the Chief of Staff continued, that the (American) joint chiefs of staff decided it would be uneconomical to continue the super-fortress operation to a single theatre, and these bombing missions will be under the centralized control of the joint chiefs of staff with a single commander, Gen. Arnold, acting as their agent in directing their bombing operations against Japan from the Middle East Forces.

The planes will be treated as major task forces in the same manner as naval task forces are treated and assigned specific objectives" Gen. Marshall said.

"The type of flexible, centralized control recognizes that very long-range bombardment is not a weapon for the air forces alone. Under the joint chiefs of staff, theatre commanders will have a voice in its employment, ensuring that maximum effectiveness will be obtained through simultaneous attack will contribute greatly to the overall strength of the blows against the enemy."

It was the second American raid on the Japanese homeland. On April 18, 1942, word came that Tokyo and other Japanese cities had been bombed in the air.

The first announcement then came from the Japanese that it was not until weeks later that it was learned that a force of B-25 Mitchell bombers under James H. Doolittle, now Commander of the Eighth Air Force, had carried out the mission.

The Mitchells flew from the aircraft carrier Hornet and after bombing Tokyo, came to the continent. One landed in Eastern Siberia, the others in China. Some of the crews of the Japanese-held territory and a few of the fliers were killed. Others escaped and the Japanese themselves made it known that some of these prisoners had been executed.

Admiral Halsey Being Assigned To New Position

Allied Headquarters in the South Pacific, June 15 —(AP)— Admiral William F. Halsey relinquished his position as Allied commander-in-chief in the South Pacific today and was succeeded by Vice-Admiral John Henry Newton, 62, his deputy commander.

Admiral Halsey was assigned to a new and as yet undisclosed role in the Pacific. He became commander of the South Pacific area as a vice-admiral Oct. 18, 1942. Vice-Admiral Newton was promoted to the rank of admiral Nov. 18, 1943.

Vice Admiral Newton came to the South Pacific command shortly after the first year after serving as deputy-commander-in-chief of Pacific areas under Admiral Chester Nimitz at Pearl Harbor.

He formerly was deputy chief of Naval operations under Admiral Ernest J. King, commander-in-chief of the United States fleet.

FLEW TO FRANCE

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 15—(CP)—Reuters)—Air Marshal Sir Arthur Cunningham, air officer commanding the R. A. F. Tactical Air Force, today flew to France.

The R. A. F. tactical air force units at present in France, and will receive progress reports from Sir Arthur attending air operations from the area under Allied control.

He is followed by a Canadian Spitfire squadron.

Firm Foothold On European Coast--Stimson

Washington, June 15 — (AP) War Secretary Henry Stimson said today the Allies have established a firm foothold on the European coast.

"I believe we are there to stay until all of France is liberated and Germany defeated," he said, but thought cautioning that "we must expect counter-attacks greater than any yet met" in the fighting in Normandy.

Mr. Stimson told a news conference that destruction or heavy damage to nine tenths of the German Seine river by Allied air forces was the major factor in slowing down development of a major counter-attack — a delay longer than we could reasonably have counted upon."

More fuller information which has now come on the initial landings of our men on the French coast," the Secretary said, "is a case in point to illustrate the desirability of not reaching hasty conclusions. The vast will was no myth or puffery."

Mr. Stimson noted that Allied forces suffered casualties in the operation "but not as many as our commanders were obliged to calculate upon beforehand."

LIEUT. G. ASTOR MISSING

London, June 15 —(CP)— Lieut. Gavin Astor, 26, son of Col. J. J. Astor, M.P., and Lady Astor, London, is reported missing in action. No details as to the circumstances which he was serving were disclosed. He is a nephew of Lady Astor.

ALLIES MAKING GENERAL ADVANCE ON ITALIAN FRONT

Orvieto, Aquila and Narni on the West Coast Captured By 8th Army Troops

5TH 80 MILES NORTH

By EDWARD KENNEDY
(AP War Correspondent)

Rome, June 15 — (AP) — Allied troops, breaking the stiffening German resistance of the last three days, have made a general advance all along their line in Italy taking Orvieto, Aquila and Narni and pushing onward, Allied headquarters announced today.

Orvieto is 17 miles northeast of Rome; Narni, 41 miles north, and Aquila, 54 miles northwest. Along the west coast the 5th Army has advanced 19 miles beyond Rome.

As one 8th Army column entered Orvieto, an important road junction and rail center, Allied troops, another reached the outskirts of Terni, 12 miles southeast. Terni is a bridge and a German counter-attack in the vicinity of the city.

Fifth Army troops along the west coast met determined enemy resistance at Lake Bracciano, 11 miles northeast of Civitavecchia, but reported daylight gains all along the line.

The fall of Orbetello itself, a west coast port, 91 miles beyond Rome, and the centre of German resistance to the 5th Army's offensive, was reported today.

The German defences are French troops continued to advance and the American units reaching Piglian, 11 miles west of the northern end of the lake, and sent reconnaissance patrols into it.

Troops of the 5th Army in the Adriatic sector are across the Sinello river, which flows into the sea 15 miles southeast of Orsogna.

Despite the arrival of fresh German divisions in Italy, which are now encountering only forlorn resistance made up of remnants of the German Army, Allied assembly areas are being used for the preparation of fighting and the new divisions are being saved for a stand on a line farther north.

Airplane Plants, Airfields, Railway Facilities in France Heavily Bombed

HANOVER POUNDED

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 15—(AP)— Airplane plants, airfields, railway facilities in France and Belgium were heavily bombed by American and escorting fighters swept over France this morning, bombing airplane plant, airfields and railroad facilities in a dozen places.

Berlin radio reported an attack on the great industrial city of Hanover, Germany, while Lancaster bombers, escorted by Mustang fighters, laid their warplanes from bases in Normandy and Britain continued their widespread operations in support of the big follow-up to an 1,100-bomber operation yesterday.

As a part of the latter operation several hundred Lancasters blasted E-boat pens at Le Havre with aiming "factory busters" in daylight, directed by Pathfinder aircraft.

Twenty-eight hundred tons of explosives were dropped on the area in two separate attacks, the first, just before dawn, being the R.A.F.'s heaviest daylight bombardment of the war and the first time high altitude daylight precision bombing.

Targets of the American heavies today included Pontoise, La Fert-Gaucher and Angoulesme in Southern France, and Rouen in Northern France. The force comprised approximately 1,000 bombers escorted by approximately the same number of Thunderbolts and Mustangs.

The multiple attack, the deepest penetration of France since the invasion, took the bombers over a 300-mile expanse from Rouen, 60 miles south of Paris and 100 miles east of the battle line, to Angoulesme, 300 miles from the battle zone.

Angoulesme is 70 miles northeast of Bordeaux, the Mediterranean Sea's east of Nantes, which is 120 miles south of the battle line, and Pontoise is eight miles east of Tours.

Lt. D. Chant With Recce Unit Which Sees Some Real Action in Italy

By DOUG ROW
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadian Corps in Italy, June 12 (CP) — It was their first action. Many units — they've been everything that a reconnaissance regiment could ask for in a country like Italy. Casualties had been light, mobility had been maintained. Lieut. Donald Chant, of Hillier line and the Malfa river valley.

Maj. A. A. Hugman of Montreal and his officers and men of the 12th battalion of an Ontario Recce Regiment had time now after one siege of the Hitler line and a drive to the Melfa and talk about the things that had happened. With the major were Capt. J. D. Grabley, Oakville, Ont., and Lieutenants Bourque, Charles F. Baker, Toronto, and Lieut. C. M. Brown, Brantford, Ont. Their regiment was on the advance from the start. In the first day they had driven off and then captured four prisoners, killed six and wounded 6 or 8 germs of Canadian infantry, and knocked out a mortar position.

When their officer didn't come back from a reconnaissance patrol, Sergeant Cahl, Ont., and Tr. Stan Uppington, Woodridge, Ont., went back to look for him. Lieut. Chant was found lying in the open with a machine-gun fire from a nest of Germans and retired.

Leader of Free French Receives Warm Welcome From Countrymen

GIVES STATEMENT

London, June 15 — (CP) — Gen. Charles deGaulle returned to London yesterday for the first time in four years to receive a warm welcome from the people of England, Normandy, but his relations with Allied authorities remained clouded today by a reported disagreement involving the employment of French civilians during the invasion.

During his surprise visit in Allied-held territory, crowds gathered to cheer Gen. deGaulle and to sing "La Marseillaise." The length of his visit was not disclosed officially, but the Brazzaville radio in French Equatorial Africa said he would be in England only a few days and then returned to England.

An official announcement later confirmed he was back in Britain.

While he had previously conducted official sources in London said Gen. deGaulle had withdrawn an offer to broadcast to the French people here at the very moments Allied troops were moving onto the mainland beaches. A similar report came from high Allied sources in Algiers.

It was said here that these officials had been counted upon by the Allies to help in the invasion and in a liaison capacity with the French people to help take over civil administration.

Angling enthusiasts will have a somewhat longer season to test their skill this summer as the bass season opens in the St. Lawrence River two weeks earlier than usual.

The Ontario Game and Fisheries Department has decided that the bass season will open on June 16th in the St. Lawrence to coincide with the opening of the season in American waters.

This regulation applies only to the St. Lawrence River and does not include Lake Ontario, neither does it include any of the Rideau Lakes nor any other of the inland lakes.

DRIVER CLAIMS CAR FORCED OVER ON ROAD

A rather unique motor accident occurred at the upper end of Front St. Wednesday afternoon when an automobile driven by William Coulby, 363 John St., collided with the boulevard street island resulting in the right front wheel and front axle being broken. Coulby informed investigating police he was driving north on Front St. when another automobile passed him on the right-hand side forcing him into collision with the cement-surrounded island. The damaged vehicle had to be towed to a nearby garage.

The peas were well-filled and with good sized pods, while the potatoes were comparable in size to the first offered each year. The carrots also were quite fit for table use. According to Mr. Gatcum his first potatoes this year were about a week later than last year.

Strawberries appeared for the second time on the city market today with vendors offering their wares at a level of forty cents the box. Near noon some of the fruit was offered at two boxes for 75 cents.

Quality of the early berries appeared to be fairly good. Sales were brisk. Other market produce was offered at Saturday levels. Gooseberries were offered for the first time at 20 cents per quart box.

18,000 Pounds Salvage Paper Taken to Schools

Public school children of Belleville are demonstrating considerable interest in the appeal for the collection of waste paper to assist in the nation's war effort and during the first three days the week fetched a total of approximately 18,000 pounds to school, it is announced by officials of the local salvage committee. On the first day of the campaign for the collection of waste paper at the schools, children brought over 9,600 pounds, while over two more tons were collected on Tuesday.

The three theatres in the city are co-operating with the local salvage committee in arousing the interest of the kiddies in collecting the waste paper and as a reward have made available free tickets for a special late Friday afternoon matinee. Special prizes are being offered for the children who bring the most paper to their respective schools, but all children bringing paper will be entitled to attend Friday's show.

That children in the city are really taking the collection of the paper seriously is evinced by the fact that they have been seen canvassing neighboring households and in the mornings have been seen lugging their paper to school from where it is collected by truck. Friday is the last day for the collection of paper at the schools, but even last minute arrivals of paper bundles will be rewarded with free theatre tickets.

Mischievous Lads Crank Truck And It Backs Through Wall

To have the kitchen wall fall in upon them was the experience of residents at 12 Harriett St. yesterday afternoon, when a truck backed through a brick wall into the kitchen.

The residents had ordered a load of wood which was being removed from the truck by the deliveryman. Without being noticed two teen-aged lads approached the truck releasing the brakes placed the truck in reverse gear as one of the lads proceeded to crank the vehicle. Strangely enough the engine turned over without much exertion on the part of the lad cranking it. In gear the truck rolled backwards as the driver had to leap aside to avoid being pinned between the vehicle and the house wall. The truck crashed into the brick wall of the kitchen with a resounding thud as the wall wavered and then portions of it crashed to the inside where residents naturally sought the shelter of other rooms upon seeing the kitchen wall cave in. Police were notified and are endeavouring to identify the two mischievous lads, who are responsible for the damage.

Midnight Blaze At Harper's Dairy

Believed to have resulted from the short circuiting of an electric wire in the pump of the refrigeration unit used for milk-cooling purposes, a midnight blaze caused some damage and considerable inconvenience at Harper's Dairy on West Moira Street early Thursday morning. Firemen were called to the scene and succeeded in holding the blaze to the side of the building and to the attic overhead.

Starting in a small building adjoining the dairy proper, the fire ate its way up the wall of the dairy and had gained the edge of the attic before firemen got the blaze completely under control. The booster tank on the city fire pumper and the small hand pumps were used by firemen to control the blaze.

Reporting the blaze, Assistant Fire Chief Gerald Vance stated that the actual fire damage at the dairy did not seem great, but the cooling equipment would be out of action for the time being. The blaze did not break through the dairy roof. Insurance adjusters were on the job this morning but up to late morning had not yet completely assessed the damage.

Tire, Tube and Rim Taken From Car

Boldly walking into the driveway adjacent to the Deacon Brothers Ltd., on Dundas Street, a sneak thief removed the right front wheel, including tire, tube and rim, from an automobile owned by Reg Hinchey, plant chief designer, and disappeared without detection. The prowler was seen by a nearby resident, but the tire, tube, rim and wheel were taken before the alarm was sounded.

The person jacked the vehicle up and after removing the wheel left the jack beneath the car as he made a successful getaway with a perfecely good tire and tube. Police were notified some considerable time after the robbery took place. Mr. Hinchey was working late Wednesday night at the Deacon Brothers plant and had left his motor car parked in the company's driveway, where it is quite dark and an ideal position to remove a car wheel without detection from the street.

Sleeping Dog Fools Pedestrians

He was a handsome liver and white spaniel and lay stretched in the centre of the sidewalk at the four corners.

Four legs extended at right angles to his body, he lay motionless, apparently the victim of a hit-and-run driver.

Pedestrians gathered around. "These drivers should be prosecuted," said an elderly lady apparently a dog lover, with the glint of tears in her eyes.

"There's a policeman over there" pointed out a farmer "Why doesn't he do something about it?"

The little knot of sympathizers gathered around the prone animal increased.

"I'll drag him to the curb where he can be picked up," murmured a middle-aged man.

Stooping over, he grasped the tail of the dog. Then spectators stared, and smiles crept over gradually reddening faces.

For the dog, at the gentle tug on his tail, lazily opened one eye, raised up on one leg, yawned and went back to sleep again without moving its position.

His erstwhile sympathizers hurriedly found other matters of interest.

Flt. Lt. C. Murphy Given Promotion To Sqdn. Leader

Murphy, Harriet Street, has been promoted to the rank of squadron leader, according to a recent letter received by his mother. An employee at the J. B. Boyce garage prior to his enlistment in the R.C.A.F. Squadron Leader Murphy has received rapid promotion since going overseas.

Bruce Brown First Casualty

A British Port, June 9. — (CP Cable)—An ancient taxi trundled to the pier gate in response to the hail of a young naval lieutenant and three young Canadians tumbled in and gave the driver directions.

"We're just back from France where we were wounded", one of the trio announced to a startled hospital attendant who met them at the emergency ward entrance.

The men were Lieut. Charles Bonds, Toronto, Alec Terrell, Toronto, leading sick berth attendant, and Sgmn. Bruce Brown of (May St.) Fort William, Ont.

All had been wounded by fragments from shells or mines.

Sgmn. Bruce Brown, of the R.C.N.V.R., son of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Brown, Suite No. 14, Kamden apartments, Fort William, Ont., is the first known casualty from Fort William as a result of the Allied invasion.

Sgmn. Brown is a nephew of J. B. Harker in this city. His mother was the former Eva Harker, a native of Belleville.

Linen Donations Urgently Needed

Indicative of the response, which committee workers are certain will be forthcoming before the end of the campaign, a considerable number of inquiries are being made at the local Loblaw Groceteria regarding the "Linen Shower" being conducted for the collection of articles of linen which will be donated to the unfortunate people in war torn parts of recaptured Russian soil. The campaign for the collections of linen started Monday of this week and will continue until June 26th, with the local Loblaw store being used as the collection point for Belleville and immediate district.

Donations of towels, pillowslips, sheets and a few quilts have already been made at the store, while the number of inquiries made by shoppers has indicated there will be in encouraging later response.

Volunteer workers are on hand at the store all day to accept donations of linens for the Russian cause, and to distribute the tickets for the draw on a $5,000 mink coat and numerous other prizes. Tickets on the draw are given in accordance with the value of the linens donated.

Thus far individual volunteers have been in attendance at Loblaws, but next week it is the plan to have various organizations in the city alternate during duty hours at the store. The committee packs the linens for shipping, while the actual shipping of the bundles is taken care of by Loblaws.

AIR COMMANDER VISITS FRONT

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 15 — (AP)—Air Chief Marshal Sir Trafford L. POLICE COURT

Traffic cases dominated the weekly session of County police court held before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd at the Court House today. Charges of speeding under the War Measures Act brought fines of $15 and costs against three Peterborough motorists, Walter M. Lauder, Wm. Crasswell and H. Doughty. Lester Hay of Stirling, was assessed $10 and costs after being convicted of operating a motor-vehicle with defective brakes.

A Marysville resident appeared on two charges, drunk driving and reckless driving. He was given seven days on the drunk driving count, to date from the time of his arrest last Saturday. "This man has been in custody since his apprehension and will therefore be at liberty tomorrow", revealed Crown Attorney B.C. Donnan, K.C. The accused man's car was ordered impounded and he was also assessed costs in the matter. On the reckless driving charge he was fined $10 and costs. The total fine and costs on the two charges amounted to $37.50.

A West Huntingdon man paid ten and costs after being convicted on a careless driving charge, while Louva Hollings, Campbellford, was assessed the same amount for driving without a permit. William Hollings, of the same address, permitted the former person to drive knowing she did not possess a licence and therefore paid $15 and costs. The latter three counts were preferred by Chief Sam Eggleton of Stirling. Traffic Officer H. Caldwell entered ten of thirteen traffic cases listed for trial. Three were enlarged for a week.

Ray Woods, Belleville, appeared on charges of entering several service stations and committing theft about town and was remanded in custody for sentence.

POST-WAR PEACE COUNCIL COURT U.S. CONCEPTION

Roosevelt's View on International Body to Settle Disputes Prevent War

REPRESENTATION

Washington, June 15 —(AP)— President Roosevelt today made public the conception of a post-war international peace organization providing for a council representing all nations, to prevent wars with the settlement of international disputes and to prevent war.

The President said the organization also should include an international court of justice.

Mr. Roosevelt issued his statement after a conference with Secretary Hull, Undersecretary of State Edward R. Stettinius, Dr. Isaiah Bowman and Leo Pasvolsky, officials of the State Department's research staff who have been working on post-war planning. "It is our thought," the President said in his statement, "that the organization (for International Co-operation) would be a fully representative body with broad responsibilities for promoting and facilitating international co-operation.

"The organization, he continued, "would provide for a council, meeting at least annually by the fully representative body of all nations, which would include the four major nations and a suitable number of other nations in rotation. The council would concern itself with peaceful settlement of international disputes and with the prevention of threats to the peace or breaches of the peace".

Tokyo Says Allies Attempt To Land On Saipan Island

London, June 15 —(CP)— Japan's Domei agency, Allied Forces reported to have set on Saipan Island in the Marianas today and reported heavy fighting in progress there.

The invading attempt, followed by the Japanese broadcast, set against Saipan and other Japanese bases in the Marianas by the strongest force yet to hit Tokyo, the broadcast said, with Saipan, 1,500 miles southeast of Tokyo, was announced Tuesday Admiral Nimitz and acknowledged yesterday by the Japanese.

About 90 landing barges and 30 or more special craft were employed in the actual landing, Domei reported Tokyo said.

The Marianas group is on a direct line between the big Japanese naval base at Truk—which has been a repeated target of American raids—and the home islands of Japan.

Should Americans forces succeed in landing on Saipan they would have a foothold nearer Japan than any of the bases already conquered in the Pacific.

Magna Charta

Seven hundred and twenty-nine years ago there took place the signing of Magna Charta, charter of personal liberty.

Magna Charta is one of the greatest declarations of democratic principle, it is the document of the liberty of a great share of the world. It is the foundation of the liberty of the British Empire which has a population of more than a quarter of that of the entire earth. It is also at the root of American liberty.

Today the world of mankind sees the most impressive sight of the spirit of liberty and justice with many nations, loving peace, banded together for the task of humanity's defence against tyranny and aggression. With the nations that directly have had the course of their history changed by the growth of the spirit of liberty as declared in Magna Charta and other nations which have been influenced by the development of British liberty and the advance of liberty at large. The number of such nations and peoples is cause for freedom has the quality of expansion and will, it is the hope of many hundreds of millions of those who love justice that the development of liberty will grow until it covers the earth. Today the peace-loving nations are the nations that prize liberty and what they are paying today in wealth and treasure, in labor and human lives shows how best is appreciated liberty.

Nations with the foundation stones of human liberty and recognition of the rights of other nations are winning the day for truth and right. Democracy and more the principle of liberty and of the sacred character of human personality and of the rights of nations is invading the distant parts of the earth. He influence cannot lessen for it is a living principle that the oppression and terrorism of reactionaries like Hitler, Mussolini and Tojo cannot quell. Those who know freedom are in these days proving that their possession of liberty is no mean possession but rather a possession that should be that of every nation and every individual.

Finland's Defeat Foreseen

If Finland should pass out of the war at the end of this month, which is the opinion expressed in London in some quarters, that event will be another signpost of the march on the way to Berlin for the allied forces. Russian in an evilant frame of mind by the end the Finnish opposition at once and thereby to strike a blow also at Germany in putting out of the struggle one hundred thousand German troops in Finland which then be able to give her undivided attention towards the other Hitler satellites and Hitler himself. Russia has forced back the Germans so successfully and has frustrated all their attempts at counter blows in Russia that she can give her present attention to the Finns and hurry them out of the conflict.

Allied Offensives

When Germany is weakening and her manpower problem growing more and more serious is the time for new offensives. In the course of time it has come about through the strenuous efforts of the Allies that their power has reached the position of superiority over that of the Germans in the air, on the land and on the sea.

German sea power was never very dangerous as contrasted with the great Royal Navy and with the American Navy which has expanded greatly. The British Navy itself has grown in these momentous years while Canada's development in sea power is a phenomenon. Allied submarine power has been foiled. German air power was impressive at the opening of the war and was used freely in blitzing the nations from Poland to Norway and the other states which fell in the first year of the war and when terror raids were thrown against Britain. But time came with the growing allied air power and then came superiority with the result that Germany and her Luftwaffe have been weakening. Today air power of the Allies is one of the greatest factors in co-ordination in the Normandy invasion and will continue to be a potent agent for smashing Hitler. The giant strength of Allied air forces is indicated in the fact that despite the heavy demands made by the invasion into Northern France for the use of air power, the Allied raids continue upon Hitler-dominated Europe from Britain, Italy and from Russia. Allied army power is the greatest in all history of the United Nations.

So this is the time when Allied blows are counting most. Here is the new struggle for the first time in Normandy here is the revived war of Russia and Finland after a lull of two and a half years, here is the Italian front of Germany attacking with the troops of the Allies advance and raiders by air and the enemy from this theatre of war.

This is a time when Germany is susceptible to new blows and this time not farther whence new blows will come and she has to be ready against the many forms the great assault can take against Hitler's vaunted "fortress."

Earlier Defeat of Japan Seen

It is the view of President Roosevelt that now Japan can be driven to unconditional surrender or to national suicide much more rapidly than has been thought possible." He pointed out the other day that the original strategy of knocking out Germany first and then turning full war strength into the Pacific will hasten the day of victory on all fronts.

The President put his views in graphic words, "Germany has her back against the wall—in fact three walls at once."

With regard to Japan he said that the Allies have deprived the Japanese of any power to check the momentum of the Allied forces.

These words tell a story how the two enemy powers are weakening steadily with Germany seen as the first destined to pass out of the picture.

It is because "today we are on the offensive all over the world—bringing the attack to our enemies," to quote the words of Mr. Roosevelt.

The German Birth Rate

(Minneapolis Star Journal)

Despite the Nazis' concerted drive to keep the German birth rate high, it has been dropping year by year since 1939, when the birth rate exceeded the death rate by 8.7 per 1,000 population. By 1942 it had fallen to 2.9, the lowest rate of natural increase in Germany for any year since World War I.

Since 1942 the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, which compiles these figures, has not been able to secure official data on the German birth rate. But we can assume that with German soldiers at the front and family life disrupted by bombing of German cities, the birth rate has fallen still farther and that the death rate has risen.

Birth rates in the Allied countries present a sharp contrast. In 1942-43 the birth rate in this country rose to its highest level in 20 years. In 1939 the rate of natural increase in Germany was 21 per-cent ahead of ours; in 1942 the U. S. rate was almost four times that of Germany. Since the peak in 1942-43, however, our birth rate has fallen to the 1939 level.

It is doubtful whether the birth rate of any country will rise again until after the war.

GOOD AND BAD

They say that children shouldn't eat
Too much of anything that's sweet;
That every grandpa should deny
The wanted second piece of pie,
Since so to make a youngster glad
For him, or her, is very bad.

They say it's bad to stop at shops
And buy a sack of lollypops.
And let the little ones indulge
In candy till their stomachs bulge.
Such practices make mothers sad,
And are for children very bad.

It's bad for children, so they say,
When old folks put their toys away,
And old folks straighten rooms and shelves,
Which children ought to do themselves.
Yes, so to wait on girl or lad,
All parents say is very bad.

And yet, let's have this understood,
For grandpas what is bad is good.
It's good for grandpas' souls to buy
The pleasures parents must deny.
It's good for grandpas, through and through;
To br a little wayward, too.

Scarcity Hits Bull Fiddles

This war has been productive of many shortages; farm labor, ice cream, tommy bears and whatnot. But the latest thing to loom over the horizon is a scarcity of fiddles, or no, not, bull fiddles.

Virtuosos of this particular instrument claim their bass viols, which is definitely musically correct, but the boys in the Dixieland Municipal Band have adopted the term and prefer to call them, pound to the time of six-a-day vaudeville.

It seems she bass section of the band has been depleted through calls to the armed services, drum tubes and bass players will have the unfamiliar call of army bugles instead of "the oompah" of their favorite instruments.

Now band officers are up against a problem. They have artists whose sight reading can coax the yeasiest strains out of a bull fiddle; but the fiddles have gone to the armpits or rats bedrooms.

And so, if no one comes to the rescue, the local musicians will be heading, unless some clever wood surgeon can insert gussets in cello and violins or by some method of inflation turn the ordinary violin into its biggest brother.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

Dr. Donald Creighton, author of "The Commercial Empire of the St. Lawrence," is a professor of history at the University of Toronto. He is a native of Toronto and was educated at the University of Toronto and Oxford University. He is a member of the Royal Society of Canada and has written a number of books on Canadian history.

About the same time that steamers began to make their appearance, electricity was also finding its way into the form of electric lights. The first street lighting ever lighted in North America, or doubtless anywhere else in the world, was done in 1809. When electric lights were available for commercial purposes, they were first used in 1846, with relief and stored away the battery-weight, so that they had tender for many long years.

The world owes much to the famous Montreal engineer, Thomas Sterry Hunt, for his inventions and discoveries that brought electricity more under the control of man. Among his inventions in 1851 before the Royal Society of Arts, London, was one that harnesses the energy of distant waterfalls and transmits it by magneto-dynamo machines to light cities and towns. Another was the electricity being used to be used for electric railways. During the year 1854 the first electrical railway was constructed and operated in Belleville in 1879.

Oil Centres Hit.

A force of Mosquito bombers attacked the synthetic oil refineries at Gelsenkirchen in the Ruhr last night to keep the invasion battlefront in Hitler's mind as nothing around the clock.

The Germans, accompanied by fighter escort, were believed to have suffered heavy losses in the air battle yesterday in their switch to daylight bombing. The R.A.F. Bomber Command no E-boats at work in the channel last night.

The R.A.F.'s heavies have operated at daylight a few times in the past, notably in the Caen pocket during assault, but never in such a large force as the 1,000 sent over by the R.A.F. on the thick concrete installations at La Maeve was estimated by Air Chief Marshal Harris that most of the R.A.F.'s "strategic" attacks on Germany.

German broadcasts telling of the Allied bombing of Gelsenkirchen raiders today reported planes over Brandenburg Province, in which Berlin is situated, as well as over Hanover.

Belle Rumbers Out.

R.C.A.F. and the R.A.F. had their biggest day's operations last night. Their targets included railroad and industrial centres in the Ruhr, Dortmund, Cologne, Duisburg and Krefeld, as well as the Gelsenkirchen district. Night bombers also attacked Caen, Le Havre and Montdidier.

Belle Rumbers Out.

R.C.A.F. and the R.A.F. had their biggest day's operations last night. Their targets included railroad and industrial centres in the Ruhr, Dortmund, Cologne, Duisburg and Krefeld, as well as the Gelsenkirchen district. Night bombers also attacked Caen, Le Havre and Montdidier.

Night bomber losses were light at five—none in the Gelsenkirchen raid.

The American 9th air force, in its biggest operation in Europe in 24 hours of the invasion, sent out more than 1,000 heavy bombers and fighters from dawn yesterday to late last night to pound my air and railroad targets behind the battle area.

The R.A.F. flew more than 1,481 tons of bombs at a cost of 16 fighters and 8 bombers missing in action. The German planes shot down and 19 severely damaged.

Small Targets Raided.

Hundreds of medium, light and fighter bombers and fighters of both the American 9th and R. A. F. targets in the area at the base of the Cherbourg peninsula, the invasion by St. Lo, Coutance, Granville and Tours, and up the peninsula.

The attacks were included a surprise attack against the German air base at Le Mans in the Maine district, 100 miles inland. About a dozen planes were destroyed on the ground.

Hundreds of sorties were flown from the Normandy beach-head by Allied air bases set up with full facilities in captured territory.

Crews of R. A. F. Mitchells, operating from captured airfields, made troop movements since D-Day, bombed and strafed railroad junctions, roads and other lines of communications of vehicles and supplies.

Night bombers hit Caen, which has been under constant attack and night bombers' targets were all again.

Late afternoon and evening targets included railroad and highway junctions at Amorieres, Sigy-les-Rotrou, Dreux, Conches, Dieuffront, bridges at St. Hilaire, Dubarcouil and Argenton, Nervers barracks at Noyon and, in the Laval area, everything that moved.

German Cities Bombing.

The German radio claimed the daily bombing of Allied ships in the channel. More than 1,000 United States heavies—the mightiest single air armada ever launched—headed the attack yesterday on occupied Europe.

Latest official reports listed it by U. S. heavy bombers alone as 1,000 planes in fighters and fighter-bombers missing. Five enemy planes were destroyed.

Allied planes based in Britain flew more than 10,000 sorties during the day, raining explosives and bullets on the enemy in France, Belgium, the Netherlands and Germany in the biggest and greatest effort of medical and strategic support of invasion ground forces. About 5,000 more planes from bases in the Mediterranean bases against Axis-held targets in France, Germany, Austria, Hungary and Yugoslavia.

About 4,000 tons of bombs were dropped on enemy territory yesterday.

INVASION

Thursday—Allied air reinforcements invaded threatened the last German land communications line to the piece of country between the peninsula's tip to the north. Seven hundred bombers and fighters of German reaction was expected momentarily, and that further Anglo-U. S. advance would be only through harp fighting.

The American drive thrust to the Les Sablons-Barqueville area, south of Mere Eglise and west of Carentan. Seven miles to the westward is high ground overlooking La Haye du Puits, Lessay, Periers, near the last remaining major north-south highway in the Cherbourg area for German hands.

The advance placed the American cavalry half way across the peninsula at its narrowest point. Toward the tip of the peninsula hand-to-hand fighting surged between German and troops of the U. S. 4th Division in the streets of Montebourg, 14 miles northeast of Cherbourg.

American artillery was shelling the road from Montebourg to Valognes to the northwest, and Allied troops controlled the road from Quineville, s the coast, to Montebourg, but the enemy still held hands from hour-to hour.

American airborne troops led fighting around Carentan and besides pushing to the west showed the Germans signs of life to the south of the town.

Enemy Fighting Fierced Cannaest.

Allied troops driving southward along the road from Isigny to Carentan were engaged in heavy fighting around Cesmenil and Villeret-Bocage, with the Allies on the offensive, but the Germans back in Villeret-Bocage after a counter-attack.

The main fighting was taking place in front of Villers-Bocage, a Belleville road height, with ground facing the town a country of small farms. The river Seulles, divided the German and Allied forces.

Front lines were unchanged in Montebourg the 9th and 2nd tactical air forces carried out what was officially described as "a great effort in support of the British and the ground forces, many of them from a number of bases in France, air bases set up with full facilities in captured territory.

Allied planes carried more movement on the roads behind the German lines in Normandy than at any time since D-Day.

Night bombers—hunters" raided on German E-boat pens at Le Havre in an R.A.F. raid last night.

Enemy transports reacted to the Allied attention at Le Havre by lying just east of the beachhead, a number were sunk and others, forthcoming and move in that direction.

Great Tank Battles Raging.

Heavy tank battles of Britain's second battered and besieged Caen's great tank battles raged with unprecedented fury into their fourth day. The Germans were throwing the best of their armored divisions.

Some four-Seulles, a dozen miles west of Caen, changed hands several times. The Germans last reported in it last and a Nazi counter-attack briefly lifted the Allies from Tessel, battered into heaps of rubble by air, sea and land bombardment.

New Exhaustion Drug Devise Reported

Chicago, June 13—(AP)—In new wonder disease, interesting to everyone who is fretting out extra pounds, was reported today to the American Medical Association by Drs. C. M. Jones of San Francisco and Dr. Max Ritvo of Chicago.

The worker gets so tired he is likely to collapse, comes on with exhaustion, and does not sleep naturally for days.

That, however, is only the beginning of the trouble. Soon the victim becomes painful and then may be temporary paralysis and loss of memory.

Months of complete rest are required for recovery, the doctors say. Even recovery, the patient is not entirely normal, with a peculiar disease may descend upon him again.

One case was a bus driver, who spent his spare time in a weight-reducing gymnasium. Soon after he was in bed.

Another type was an active executive who had been losing pounds in lodge work. At a picnic, while playing baseball, he collapsed and remained there for months.

Although normally, a fact brought out in a study by doctor Martin G. Vorhaus and E. Zabriskie of Chicago, is that Dr. Vorhaus found that emotionally immature persons when under stress of fatigue, tend to develop physical disorders, such as abdominal pain, colitis, ulcers, nervous vomiting, constipation and some other disorders often ordinarily associated with emotions.

Germans Using Six-Barrelled Rocket Mortar

By ROSS MUNRO

Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadians in France, 11:30 a.m., June 13 (CP-Cable) Heavy German counter-attacks out considerably along the British-Canadian front in the east and western parts of their Caen bridgehead positions, but they are formidable positions and now are being strengthened by the enemy using their "reinforcement" divisions for defence.

The weapon now being used against the Canadians for the first time in Italy and in Sicily, but this is the first time it has been used in the east division.

Mid. Phil Strickland of Saskatoon, Sask., is at forward headquarters when he saw a flash of flame on the ridge. Then the explosions followed by a hilltop black smoke—the effect, he recognized instantly as rocket concussion in the nearby fields.

There has not been any great concentration of fire from the six-barrelled mortar used to be known to Canadians in Italy as "moaning Minnie."

With the German counter-attacks mounting in fury there was reported that Field Marshal von Rundstedt had decided to draw on the reserves of other sectors of France to meet the threat.

Appearance of the 2nd German Panzer Division, one of the crack units in the German army—indicated the Germans were making a desperate effort to stem the tide of Allied beachhead.

Within the last three days are expected to show whether the German counter-attacks have been forced to throw reserves into the battle piecemeal—as in the past nine days—or has been able to keep them intact for a decisive all-out counter-attack.

BOOST HEN POPULATION

In 1939, there were about 40,000,000 hens on Canadian farms; by 1943, the total was about 50,000,000.

CANNIBALISM

Cannibalism was once common in many parts of the world and among many different peoples.

In fact, scientists tell us that it is probable that cannibalism in one form or another was practiced by nearly all peoples in some stage of their development.

Cannibalism survived in New Guinea, parts of Africa, in Australia and Borneo and perhaps a few other isolated regions until a generation or so ago.

There are still traces of the practice.

What vestiges of cannibalism remain are restricted to ceremonies and to the tropical regions lying within 10 degrees North and South of the equator.

"Cannibal" is derived from Spanish "canibales," the name given a section of one of the various forms of the name of the Caribs, a fierce man-eating tribe who originally lived in the West Indies.

Indian guides taken by Columbus from Guadaloupe, the island where he called San Salvador, and which is now thought to be Watling Island, told him that the Caribs or Caripunas, a tribe living in the interior, had the reputation of the practice of eating human beings.

Columbus's report of cannibalism resulting in Haiti, declared that a tribe of man-eating people inhabited the opposite side of the island.

"Kalina" and "Caripuna," through misapprehensions by the Spanish, were corrupted into "Caribal" and "Carib." Columbus himself wrote in his journal that the natives of the Antilles lived in great fear of the cannibals, that they were a race of dog-faced men.

Formerly the Maories of New Zealand, like the Fiji Islanders and many other peoples, practiced cannibalism on a large scale, but the practice is now almost unknown among them occurred in 1943.

In 1923 the Australian man-eating native of Samoa was captured on the island of Malaita, after a long period of search by Australian officers who had been sent to capture him.

Cases of cannibalism may still occur in Africa.

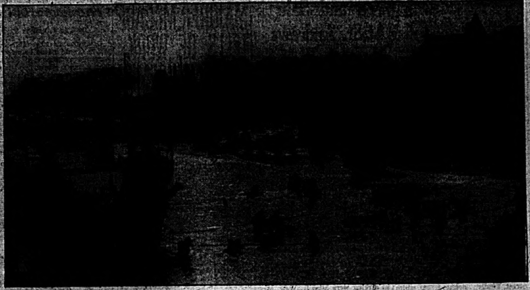
In 1925 the French authorities executed six natives in Guinea for eating seven persons. A native chief explained to the court that he judges that she preferred the flesh of "fat women and the boys of becoming young again."

RCAF Man Heads Staff of Troopship

Activities on Big Vessel in Charge of Men From Three Nations

By FRANK FLAHERTY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

One of the largest troopships plying the seas, carrying largely American troops, has an internal administration headed by a group of Canadian air force officers.



This vessel has carried many thousands of men from North American shores overseas with a permanent international staff headed by Group Capt. A. K. Aspden of Toronto as ship's commandant responsible for all arrangements and discipline on board. He has made more than 40 voyages.

Six services of three nations contribute men to the permanent staff of the ship which is assisted in handling each crowded crossing by hundreds of men drawn from the troops crossing over for police and administrative duties as well as for cleaning and messing work.

Group Capt. Aspden heads something like a general staff under which are separate commands for various services. The officer in charge of security and discipline is Sqdn. Ldr. Scott Turnbull of Galt and London, Ont. The ship's adjutant is an R. A. F. man, Flt. Lt. J. C. C. Piggott. Senior Medical Officers are Wing Cmdr. R. W. Durand, of the R. A. F. and Sqdn. Ldr. S. J. Navin, R. C. A. F.

The separate commanders for services are Col. William R. Barnett for the United States forces with both Naval and Army personnel on his staff; Cmdr. E. Euman of the Royal Navy for all Empire naval personnel, mainly British and Canadian; Lt.-Col. J. H. Armstrong of Saint John, N. B. for Canadian and British army personnel; and Wing Cmdr. A. H. Nanton of Montreal for all Empire air force personnel.

Thus Canadians not only head the central ship's staff but head two of the four separate divisions under it. Disciplinary problems [illegible] frequently on troopships but are said to be much rarer since the larger ships were provided with permanent staffs instead of trip staffs who formerly came aboard for each journey and frequently shifted to other ships or were broken up at the end of a voyage.

Scenes like this are being re-enacted daily as re-inforcements for invasion forces in Normandy pour ashore. In this picture, taken on D-Day, Canadian troops swarm down the gangways of LCI (L)s of the Royal Canadian Navy, through the surf and over the sea wall to the shore. Gutted and shell-pocked buildings along the shore are evidence of the furious bombardment that prepared the way for the troop landings. This photograph was flown to Canada by bomber.—(R.C.N. DE GAULLE

His action was attributed to anger over the Allies' non-recognition of his National Liberation Committee as the provisional government of France and the refusal of the supreme command to let him take over the issuing of radio directions to the French people on D-Day.

Referring to the Washington report that the general had cancelled orders for several hundred French officers to land with the first waves in the invasion, Gen. deGaulle's press attache said:—

Incredible Report.

"This is a most incredible report. We cancelled no such agreement for we never signed an agreement. We negotiated several months with the Allies prior to the invasion, but as the whole world knows we reached no agreement with the American government nor with the Allied commanders, either on the government of the liberated territory or on sending liaison officers with the invasion forces.

"As to reports that co-operation between the French population and the Allied armies had been impaired—that is quite possible, but it is not our fault."

It was said in London that the arrangements had been made between the Supreme Headquarters Civil Affairs Branch and Brig.-Gen. Joseph Pierre Koenig, Assistant Chief of the Fighting French General Staff, and that Gen. De Gaulle permitted only a token force of 20 French officers to go with the Allied troops. Because of restrictions on communications from Britain, Gen. Koenig was not in touch with Gen. De Gaulle when the arrangements were made, it was explained.

At present, lack of liaison officers makes little difference because the beachhead area is so small that it is all in operational territory and under military law from commanders on the spot.

As the liberated territory in France becomes larger, however, the Allied military leaders will have to provide tens of thousands of men to deal with civil problems behind the lines, unless the deadlock is broken.

Highest officials branded as false rumors that Gen. De Gaulle had ordered the French underground forces not to attack.

REDS HURL FINNS

Evidence of the ferocity of the fighting was contained in a Russian announcement, which said one unit of the Red Army had in three days wiped out 3,000 of the enemy, destroyed 30 guns, 26 mortars and 80 machine guns, and captured 70 other guns. The Soviet air force destroyed six artillery batteries, blew up three ammunition dumps and smashed a motorized column, the communique claimed.

German commentators persisted in regarding the battle on the Finnish front as a prelude to action on a grand scale elsewhere on the long eastern land front. A Berlin broadcast declared the Nazi high command expected the main blow of the "imminent Soviet offensive in the south," and predicted the Russians would strike in the east "only when fighting in western Europe is in full swing."

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

The condition of Mr. Walter Luscombe, who has been seriously ill in the Belleville General Hospital shows slight improvement.

A Birthday Party was held at the home of John E. Craig of Marysville on Sunday in honor of Mr. Craig and his granddaughter, Elizabeth. Thirty guests attended and those honored received gifts.

Sgt. Pilot Jack Carefoot is spending his leave with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. E. M. Carefoot, 201 McDonald Avenue. Sergt. Carefoot received his wings at No. 8 F.S.T.S., Weyburn, Sask., on June first.

On Tuesday evening friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mrs. Bellamy and Mrs. Lee, Frank Street, to give a party to Pte. Don Martin. Several games were played and were very much enjoyed. A short address was given by Mr. M. B. Button, and a tray of gifts was presented to Don, who very ably replied to the address and thanked all present for their kindness to him. Delicious refreshments were served by the hostesses and when the party broke up, all wished Don the best of good luck and a speedy return.

Miss Helen Shannon, a member of the teaching staff of the O.S.D., and bride-to-be of the near future, was feted on Tuesday night by several of her girl friends. The occasion was celebrated in the form of a miscellaneous showed arranged by Miss Bertha O'Connor, Coleman Street, also on the O.S.D. staff. A prettily decorated doll carriage was wheeled in by a little boy and girl representing a bride and groom, accompanied by two other kiddies acting as their marriage attendants. A Treasure Hunt and a number of other games were played during the evening and afforded a great deal of fun for everyone. The bride-elect was the recipient of many lovely and useful gifts for which she graciously thanked her friends. A delicious lunch served by the hostess, "topped off" a very fine party.

Mrs. Redner, of Belleville, was a recent visitor of Mrs. Jack Knight in Napanee.

Mrs. Thomas F. Reid, of Kingston, who has been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George A. Reid, 76 Queen Street, is returning to her home today.

Mr. Jack Reppard, 19 St. Charles Street, underwent an operation in Belleville General Hospital and is making favorable progress. All his friends wish him a speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Jose, of Miami, Fla., are visiting the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Jose, 409 Coleman Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Grills of Wallard, Sask., spent Saturday and Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Kincaid and Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Wilson, of Shannonville. Mr. and Mrs. Grills have not been east since 1926. He is a brother of Mrs. Kincaid.

The Senior Branch of Christ Church W.A. held its final business meeting, before the Summer vacation, at the rectory on Wednesday. It was decided to continue the regular Wednesday afternoon sewing meetings all through the Summer. Any women who care to bring their own sewing or help with the Red Cross sewing and knitting will be most welcome at these meetings.

A most successful tea was held at the home of Mrs. D. McLeod, Bull Street, in aid of the Refugee Sewing Club. The tables were prettily decorated with irises and peonies. Tea was poured by the President, Mrs. Price, and lunch served by Mrs. McLeod, Mrs. Grimson and Miss Price. Tickets were sold on an afghan donated by Mrs. Grimson. Miss Pat McLeod drew the winning ticket No. 114 which was held by Mr. J. Exley. Mrs. Safe, Station Street, kindly donated a white crocheted handbag to the Club. A nice sum of money was realized to carry on the work of the Club which is given to the Red Shield for distribution in Britain.

WEDDINGS

HANSON—WILSON

White peonies formed the impressive setting in Tabernacle Church on Wednesday afternoon, June 14, at two-thirty o'clock, when the Rev. Dr. A. J. W. Myers united in marriage Jean Frances Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Wilson, to Kenneth St. Clair Hanson, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. G. Hanson, of London, Ont.

Wedding music was softly played throughout the ceremony and during the signing of the register by Mrs. M. P. Duff.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was a pretty picture in a floor length wedding gown of white sheer over taffeta and finger tip veil caught to her blonde hair with orange blossoms. She carried a Colonial bouquet.

The bride's sister, Miss Betty Wilson, wore an attractive frock of blue organdy and sitting elegantly atop her head was a Dutch cap of matching hue. She also carried a Colonial bouquet.

The brother of the groom, Mr. Allen Hanson, attended as groomsman.

Following a reception held at the home of the bride's parents, the bridal couple left on a wedding trip to Toronto and points west. The bride selected for travelling a white silk jersey ensemble, chocolate brown gabardine coat, brown and white accessories accented with corsage of white gardenias. They will take up residence in London.

Tea and Sale At St. Andrews Manse by W.M.S.

The manse of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, decorated with an array of roses, peonies and forget-me-nots in colorful summer bloom, was the scene of a great deal of activity on Wednesday afternoon for the occasion of a tea and sale of homecooking arranged by the Women's Missionary Society.

The guests were very graciously received by Mrs. J. G. Hornsby and Mrs. D. Fleming and were invited to the tea room by Mrs. I. L. Moore, and Mrs. A. R. Cameron. Conveners of the tea were Mrs. George Walbridge and Miss Helen Blair.

The tea table was most beautifully arranged, spread with a hand drawn linen tablecloth from India, centred with dark red roses in a Belleek china shell, and flanked with tall white tapers in silver candelabra.

Pouring tea were Mrs. James Hill, Mrs. Fargey, Mrs. (Rev.) Graham, and Mrs. Arthur McGee. Assisting in serving were Miss L. Weir, Mrs. V. Weir, Mrs. N. Smith, Mrs. Dorothy Padgett, Mrs. Alec Cunningham, Mrs. W. Mantle and Mrs. S. Wood. Replenishing the table was Mrs. B. Beavis.

Treasurer of the afternoon was Mrs. Frank Parsons.

Bishop Lyons Performs Rite Of Confirmation

Frankford.—A very simple and impressive service was held at Trinity Church, Frankford, on Sunday morning, June 11th., when His Lordship, Bishop Lyons of Ontario, performed the rite of Confirmation. A large congregation was in attendance. Seven candidates, Beryl Wilson, Pat Weston, Acaline Smith, Valerie Madge and Ernest Anderson, Harold Ferguson and Billy Hardy preceded the choir into the church, singing as a processional hymn, "Our Blest Redeemer ere He Breathed".

The beautiful service of Confirmation as set forth in the Anglican Prayer Book was strictly adhered to, at the close of which, the Bishop, in his usual quiet but forceful manner, spoke on the need of the Church and of prayer in everyone's daily lives, especially during these times of terrible stress.

During the offertory, the rector, Rev. C. C. Brazill, sang as a solo the well known hymn "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say". Before pronouncing the blessing, the Bishop led in a short service of intercession for the success of the Allied armies at home and abroad.

AVONDALE NEIGHBORS' AID

The June meeting of the Avondale Neighbor's Aid was held on D-Day at the home of Mrs. Boulton, Trent Road. The President, Mrs. Elvidge, opened the meeting with prayers for the Service men. She then welcomed back several members who have been absent for some time through serious illness. After the reading of reports and letters, the meeting was adjourned so that the members could listen to the King's Invasion Day speech. When the meeting resumed many business matters were taken up. It was decided to send cigarettes to the boys overseas. Also $25 was voted to the Mrs. Churchill Canteen Fund. Refreshments were served by Mrs. Boulton assisted by Mrs. F. Denyes. A vote of thanks was extended to the hostess. On Saturday last the members held rummage sale and as a result the May and June War Service Committees added a substantial sum to the War Service Fund.

DRESS UP YOUR SUMMER TAN

Any day now you're going to develop a yen for that becoming summer bronze. While there's nothing more attractive than an even tan, you'd better go about acquiring it with a little science, if you don't want to suffer both in looks and spirit. First don't neglect your skin care just because it's summer. Too much sun, taken just anyhow, will coarsen and dry the complexion. Morning and evening, give your face a thorough cleansing with your favorite whipped cream lather beauty soap, and use lubricating creams, especially around the eyes, while you're getting a tan. Begin to take sun in five or ten-minute periods, working up gradually to a half hour or more. Unless you want redness and burn, don't try to hurry up the process. Leave off glasses, but keep your eyes closed from the sun. Once you've got that golden-girl look, show it off by wearing lipstick in clear red or orange-red tones. No more dark make-up, . . . it does nothing for dark skin. If you want to go really 'outdoor', let your tan deepen to a gypsy cast, and use only the faintest color in lipstick and nail-polish. Chalky whites, beiges and browns, with an occasional well-chosen pastel will dress up your summer tan.

MAJOR FR. McCABE TELLS OF WORK WITH SERVICEMEN

Military Chaplain Who Recently Returned From Overseas Speaks to C. W. League

On Monday evening, in St. Michael's High School, the monthly meeting of the Catholic Women's League took place with the President, Mrs. S. B. Upper, presiding. A letter was read from Rt. Rev. Monsignor Nicholson in which was expressed his deep gratitude for the recent generous donation from the League for the furthering of athletic activities in the high school. Reports from various conveners and councillors were received and special mention was made of those councillors who already had made contact with all members in their district. Particular stress was made by Mrs. M. Bulger, convener of war work, for the need of more members to sew in the Red Cross rooms or to take work home during the summer months.

Rt. Rev. Monsignor Nicholson then addressed the meeting and spoke words of encouragement to the League, stating that he was happy to be present to thank the out-going officers and also to felicitate the members of the new executive on their taking over this important work.

Rev. Father G. McCabe, of Picton, the speaker of the evening, was then introduced. Major McCabe, a military chaplain, has recently returned from three years overseas and gave a particularly fine picture of the work being done by the Canadian Catholic Chaplain service in England and on the Continent. This very arduous task is under the leadership of Col. O'Neill, an Ontario priest of distinction. Major McCabe spoke in glowing terms of the work accomplished and the sacrifice made by the English women of all classes. He spoke particularly of the Women's Voluntary Service, which is organized even in the smallest villages and is spending itself to the utmost for this war effort. Many examples were given by the speaker of the noble work done by this organization to assist the men of the Canadian troops. Mention was also made of the K. of C. hospitality service, which has made it possible for many hundreds of service men, regardless of creed, to spend a happy leave, free of cost, in private homes.

Wartime Activities.

Father McCabe, in closing, urged the members of the C.W.L. to keep up their good work of assisting in this great war effort, to redouble, if possible, their efforts in their wartime activities, because the boys over there need to know that, we, too, are doing our share. Mrs. Upper, in thanking the speaker, said he had indeed left great food for thought in presenting an aspect of the war practically untouched in the press or elsewhere.

Miss Anna Lafferty, accompanied by Mrs. Grant, sang delightfully two selections, "Bless This House" and "Mighty Lak a Rose". Father O'Donnell was present and wished the new executive well in all their undertakings. Following his brief remarks two students of St. Michael's High School, Miss Joan Boyle and Miss Mary Flynn gave well-presented and very interesting speeches on Catholic literature. Miss Boyle spoke on Alice Maynell, a writer of distinction in the last century, and Miss Flynn gave a resume of the life of an outstanding present day author, Rev. J. F. Edwards, two of whose books are to be found in the high school library.

Assistance in Shower For Russia.

Following the program the business part of the meeting was resumed. It was decided that the Catholic Women's League of Belleville would co-operate with other city organizations in the arrangements for the linen shower for Russia. Plans were completed whereby young children will be taken care of during the eight-thirty service every Sunday, thereby allowing their mothers to attend Mass. Mrs. W. J. Doyle was named as representative of the League on the district committee for Post-War Rehabilitation. After discussing plans for a picnic to be held at Mrs. E. D. Finkle's cottage the latter part of June, the singing of the National Anthem, accompanied by Mrs. Harold Barrett, brought the meeting to a close.

The Experts Say

By The Canadian Press

Ottawa, June 15 —(CP)— SOUR MILK should never be wasted, the Agriculture Department says. Far from being a spoiled food it should be considered as a different food and used accordingly. Sour milk gives a richer, softer texture to scones, gingerbread and chocolate cake than does sweet milk.

The milk acid of sour milk aids in softening meat tissue, making tough cuts tender. A cup of sour milk in a beef stew tenderizes it. Salty cured pork can be soaked in a mixture of equal parts of sour milk and water to improve the flavor.

A baked custard made with sour milk has a slightly different but delicious flavor.

THE STRAWBERRY PATCH is ready to give a good supply of vitamin C—so important for chasing spring "fatigue", Dr. L. B. Pett of Nutrition Services says. Other supplies of the important vitamin are already well on their way in the victory gardens which include tomatoes.

MOVING TO the country for the summer? To help the critical shortage of housing accommodation you may plan to sub-let your city place for the hot months. Monthly tenants need their landlord's permission to sub-let, and if you plan to sub-let your home furnished and charge more rent than you, yourself, are paying, you must get the approval of the nearest Prices Board rentals office.

GULPED BREAKFAST never did anyone any good and neither did a skimpy one of coffee and one slice of toast, the Nutrition Bureau says. A five-minute breakfast which will carry you through a morning of hard work includes: orange, ready-to-eat whole-grain cereal, whole-wheat toast and a beverage.

RESIN TAPE can be used to mend tears in cloth and lighter materials, says the consumer branch. Cut to fit the tear or worn spot, the tape is pressed for a few minutes and the job is done. For patching heavy material such as trousers and rain coats it is suggested that a matching piece be taken from a seam or hem and then set in with the tape.

North Hastings Women's Institutes Hold 36th Dist. Annual Convention

(By MRS. H. W. SABINE)

Marmora — The 36th District Annual Convention of North Hastings Women's Institute was held in Wellman's United Church on June 9th, with morning and afternoon sessions. Baskets of yellow and white roses, iris and other flowers were placed on the piano, communion table and in the windows which added much to the appearance of the church which will celebrate its 75th anniversary this month. The president, Mrs. J. Gawley, of Eldorado, was in the chair and Mrs. Cook, of Bannockburn, acted as accompanist for the opening exercises.

Miss Mary Clarke, Superintendent of Women's Institutes for the Department of Agriculture, Toronto; Mrs. Wicks, Provincial Director and Mrs. C. Holmes, President of the F.W.I., were present and were invited to the platform.

Mrs. Pollock, of Wellman's, graciously extended a welcome to the members, stressing that Canadians should have pride in their local communities as well as their country, to which Mrs. Parks, of the Cooper-Remington branch, replied fittingly. The minutes of the last District Annual were read by the secretary treasurer and were approved, as was the auditor's report for the year.

In her address as president, Mrs. Gawley referred briefly to the warm welcome she had received when she visited the different branch meetings. She had been unable to get to Rylestone, Wellman's and Gilmour, which she regretted. All the branches were actively engaged in war work and there was an increase in membership. She asked for the co-operation of all to help make the coming year a success.

Miss Clarke expressed her pleasure at being able to attend the convention and said we need the contact of these smaller groups for encouragement. She quoted from the Queen's recent radio broadcast that "We must keep guard over our sanity and our souls."

Secretary-Treasurer's Report.

The secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Hulin, gave the combined branch and district financial summary, etc. The financial receipts for entire work showed an increase of $50. There were 262 members, an increase of 11. 88 meetings were held with an average attendance of 14.

Marmora had the largest membership with 49 members. Increase in receipts $106.

Madoc was second in membership with 42, but decreased receipts $200.

Springbrook had 40 members, an increase of 5, but decrease in receipts of $92.

Bannockburn and Eldorado, 30 members, an increase of 2, decreased $31.

Ivanhoe, 34 members. This Institute doubled receipts last year and showed a further increase of $30 this year.

Cooper and Remington with a membership of 20, increased receipts $220 raising $577. This was only exceeded by Marmora branch which raised $580.

Rylestone, 18 members, raised $86, a decrease of $60.

Gilmour and Wellman's tied with 19 members each and together the two raised $314, which was very commendable for so small a membership.

Mrs. M. K. Baker reported for Agriculture and Canadian Industries. Some suggested roll calls were, "Name of a fruit and the vitamins it contains;" "Old and new ways of farming;" "Wartime Canning of fruit."

Reports Given.

Social Welfare was presented by Mrs. Tanner, of Madoc. She gave in detail the activities of each branch. These included Christmas boxes, school supplies, basket picnics, addresses on health, interesting roll calls and papers on cancer and diphtheria.

Mrs. J. C. Sills dealt with Historical Research in an interesting way. "It's difficult to co-ordinate a report in wartime," she said, "but to know the present we must know the past. War has brought about new ways of living but after the war we will take up where we left off." She urged the making of the Tweedsmuir Scrapbook for all branches, that should contain the names of all local boys in the services until the end of the war. A number of splendid roll calls were given and one quite striking topic, "Men make husbands, but women make homes."

The report on War Work was given by Mrs. K. Bateman in the absence of Mrs. Strebe. An incredible amount of sewing and knitting has been done by the Institutes with over $1,300.00 raised for different war charities. Most branches sent money for sugar for jam-making.

Mrs. Irwin reported from seven branches on Home Economics. Five topics and roll calls were suggested and good papers and demonstrations were given.

Mrs. F. M. Rutherford, Federal Agricultural Representative, gave a very fine address, expressing her thanks to the North Hastings branches for sending her to the annual meeting of the Federation of Agriculture. She explained the advantages and benefits derived from membership in the organization and other topics of interest. Mrs. Rutherford is thoroughly conversant with all branches of the agricultural industry and a very convincing speaker.

Community singing made a welcome break in the program with Mrs. Cook at the piano and Mrs. Rundle, of Marmora, as song leader.

Only two Girls' Clubs were reported by Mrs. Rex Rollins but they covered a fine amount of work, taking in Achievement Day in Stirling, Garden Brigade work and the sewing course "cottons can be smart." Mrs. Wicks reported on the activities of the Federated Board meetings held in November and April. Eighteen resolutions had been dealt with and several recommendations from the standing committees. The use of stamp folders, prayer cards and labels for war work was stressed.

Luncheon plates were served at noon and provided a fine, appetising meal by the ladies of Wellman's Institute.

The afternoon meeting was called about 1.30 and community singing opened the session. Mrs. C. Whytock and Mrs. T. L. Nickle, both members of Madoc branch for many years, spoke briefly expressing their pleasure at being able to attend the convention.

Supt. of Institutes Speaks.

Miss Mary Clarke, Superintendent of Institutes was then called upon for her address which dealt with the work of the institutes in general. To be strong an Institute must draw its strength from within. There must be well balanced programs, the quality of leaders must be such as will develop workers, and leaders must be co-operative. Have one specific object each year. The co-operative program was thoroughly discussed and lectures on "Bedside Care" will be held with Bannockburn and Eldorado, Cooper and Remington and Ivanhoe meeting with Madoc in that village and Wellman's, Rylestone, Marmora and Springbrook meeting at the latter village. Cooper felt they were too far north to meet at Madoc ,and had no suitable place so it was passed up.

A quiz, prepared by Mrs. K. Bateman, was then held with president of the Institutes and guests on the platform answering the questions. The honors went to Miss Clarke. A solo by Mrs. Shaw, of Ivanhoe, was much enjoyed.

Officers Elected

Mrs. C. Holmes, President of the Provincial Board extended greetings and best wishes for the success of the coming year and conducted the election of officers, who are as follows:-

RCN PERSONNEL INVASION LOSSES ARE 'NEGLIGIBLE'

Losses in Ships Confined to "Few Landing Craft," Says Macdonald

Ottawa, June 14 —(CP)— Royal Canadian Navy personnel invasion losses have been "negligible" while losses in ships have been confined to a "few landing craft," Navy Minister Macdonald said Tuesday in the Commons.

He said Canada is represented in the invasion operations by more than 100 ships and almost 10,000 officers and men. He added: "Almost every type of fighting ship in our Navy is included: Destroyers, frigates, corvettes, minesweepers, landing ships, landing craft and motor torpedo boats."

He said the Canadian Navy continued "to fare well" in the invasion.

Speaking of today's announcement of the success against a German U-boat by the frigate Prince Rupert in company with other Allieds ships, Mr. Macdonald said that Canada had "assumed considerably increased responsibilities" with regard to escort duty in the North Atlantic.

He added: "There too, we and our Allies have not been without success. Loss in merchant shipping is at the lowest point in the whole war."

He said today's "kill" was the fourth submarine "whose destruction I have had the pleasure of announcing within the past 10 weeks."

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

By The Canadian Press

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, June 15 — (CP) — Notes on Canadian airmen far afield:

Canadians flying Italian-based Spitfires knifed deep into German-held Yugoslav to attack enemy mechanical transport. They set 34 trucks ablaze and damaged an additional 20 parked in the town of Cracae.

"It was one of the best bags of road transport we have had so far in this area," said WO. Pete Wheatley of (1509 Sherbrooke St. West) Montreal. "He kept coming in and strafing them for an hour," said another pilot, WO. Mickey Lavoie of (5175 Sherbrooke St.) Montreal.

Most fliers will tell you that 1,000 feet and over is the best height to do your bailing out. But FO. Gilbert Doyle of (5798 Notre Dame de Grace Ave.) Montreal tells about a 200-foot jump and he still is flying, uninjured, unshaken and comparatively unimpressed. He had been badly shot up in his City of Windsor Squadron Spitfire over the Anzio beachhead and rolled his Spitfire over on its back in the approved manner for abandoning aircraft. But instead of falling out he found himself caught in the cockpit his parachute harness tangled in something.

Doyle got his head and shoulders out of the plane and found himself dangling helplessly.

"I squirmed and struggled like mad," Doyle related. "I could see the water rushing up to meet me and I thought 'this is it'."

Then suddenly something gave and Doyle was free. He yanked his rip cord and the margin of time was so small that he had no recollection of the chute opening. The plane hit the water a second or two ahead of him and he landed smack in the same spot.

Circling above WO. James Harris of Port Alberni, B.C., saw Doyle climb into his dinghy and give a reassuring wave and start paddling. Soon Doyle was picked up by a rescue launch.

Canadians in Wellingtons of the Eastern Air Command Strategic Air Force smashed up the vital Tiddim Imphal road which the Japanese have been using for supplies. Clouds of dust rose to 4,000 feet after they dropped their bomb loads. They may have started a landslide.

"Three of our sticks straddled the road and some of them should have brought down plenty of dirt from the cliff on one side," said FO. Bruce Bennett of (515 Wiley St.) Port William, Ont.

FO. Walter Bassarab of Gleichen, Alta., navigator, said he saw chunks of road flying in all directions. Another navigator on this operation was FO. Vern Trotter of Corning, Sask.

Fascists Showed Mussolini Same Plane Two or Three Different Times

By EDWARD KENNEDY (AP War Correspondent.)

Rome, June 15, (AP)—Corruption within the Fascist regime in Italy, it is now becoming apparent, was even greater than the most rabid anti-Fascists have maintained.

This corruption undoubtedly was the prime cause of the poor showing which Italy made in the war, and it increased as the war progressed. The full story is now beginning to come out, for many former Fascists are only too ready to tell all about it and implicate a few old friends who did them wrong.

Italy apparently went to war with a badly-disorganized and ill-equipped army. It did not have the "8,000,000 bayonets" about which Mussolini boasted, and much of its equipment was defective due to graft all along the line.

According to one former Fascist, the Fascist set-up was so corrupt that even Mussolini himself was a victim. On one occasion when the former Duce was making a tour of military airfields, this informant asserted, planes were rushed from one field to another and new numbers were quickly painted on them to give Mussolini the impression he was seeing a lot of different aircraft when in reality he was seeing the same ones over and over again.

Even conscription was said to have been rotten. Although all able-bodied men of military age were supposed to have been in the armed forces, one could have himself recorded on the records as "deceased" for a bribe of about 20,000 lire (about $1,000) and this escape the draft.

After Mussolini's government collapsed and the Germans and the puppet "Fascist Republic" took over affairs got still worse. The Italians knew the so-called republic had no future, and it was attracted only men who had to join up to save their own skins or crooks who saw a chance for a quick clean-up, letting the future take care of itself.

Flt. Lt. Sinclair Gives House Views of Servicemen On Rehabilitation After the War

By MARGT O'DONNELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, June 12 (CP)—A serviceman's views on what the government should do to provide for his rehabilitation and re-establishment on discharge of members of the armed forces after the present war were given the Commons yesterday by Flt. Lt. Joseph Sinclair (C., Yale-Fraser Valley North).

Flt. Lt. Sinclair, 36-year-old R.C.A.F. administrative officer, on extended leave from his overseas duties, said the government must be prepared to treat the fighting men as fairly and as generously when they return to train for peace as when they trained for war.

"The whole problem of demobilization and the proper re-establishment of our fighting men after the present war is a tremendous one," he said. "It demands the one prime consideration that the program of rehabilitation shall actually provide the opportunity for employment to all those who are willing and able to work."

He spoke on second reading to a bill setting up a Veterans' Affairs Department to handle all matters pertaining to ex-service men. The matters now are handled by the Pensions Department.

Hon. H. A. Bruce (PC—Toronto South) suggested that the medical and hospital services of the department be placed under the professional new department of Social Welfare. He said the new department's chief concern would be the "Mental Health Department" since its principal task would be the administration of the proposed National Health Insurance plan.

Amended.

By cannibalization of health and medical services of the new department, duplication would be avoided and better service would be provided both veterans and the civilian population.

Others participating in the debate were G. S. White (PC—Hastings-Peterborough), Ross Fair (SC—Battle River), Hon. R. B. Hanson (PC—York West), and Clarence Gillis (CCF—Cape Breton South).

"Nothing could convince the people of Canada at this time of the government's goodwill," Mr. Gillis said, "more than for the government to announce that when our men returned to training for peace they will be treated as well as when they trained for war, that the day of niggardly and parsimonious treatment of the fighting men, when the war is ended, is ended forever as far as Canada is concerned," Flt. Lt. Sinclair said.

The War Today—
Allies Await Counter-Attack In Normandy With Confidence

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Canadian Press War Analyst

This is the beginning of the second month of the invasion of the Continent, which will be the crucial month of the first stage of our invasion of Europe. Whether it will prove to be a matter of crossed glads, for which read a great row, I'm not sure, but I do know that the Allies have clung to reserve which will be used to throw them back into the sea. The conflict is fluid, and the situation changes something like sand rarely in hand-to-hand fighting along the serpentine battle front. All the same, I repeat that the outlook is bright with complete confidence that we have retained the initiative on the whole, and that's vastly important.

The intensity of the battle in Normandy, and if the Germans have the reserves to commit it, it becomes one of the greatest engagements of the war, still, the Allied have their feet firmly on shore, and they are all there. Don't forget that we have two mighty assets which Adolf Hitler has not impressively in the air and on the sea. The enemy navies are being raked by our planes, and by the great guns of the fleet on the neighboring coast.

One of the most important of the changes in personnel announced by the Canadian government during the month of mobilization, the Allied invasion of Europe, was the first time that an honor had been given the head of a Canadian newspaper since the days of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, who was knighted by King George V.

Hon. Norman Rogers, minister of national defence, announced that Hector Charlesworth, editor of the Canadian Forum, had been appointed a member of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation board of governors, succeeding Hon. Leonard Brockington, who resigned to become chairman of the board of governors of the British Broadcasting Corporation.

Mr. Charlesworth, who came to Canada from his native Isle of Wight, England, in 1890, the second manager of the newly-formed Western Associated Press in 1907, the pioneer co-operative news-gathering and distributing association in Canada. In 1917, the W.A.P. quarrelled with the Canadian Press associations in the formation of The Canadian Press, service for Canada's daily newspapers from coast to coast.

Funeral arrangements were not completed last night. Mr. Livesay rests ago joined about nearly Adelaide church-yard.

J. F. B. LIVESAY DIES SUDDENLY

Former General Manager of Canadian Press Retired in 1939

Carleton, Ont., June 12 —(CP)— J. F. B. Livesay, 75, prominent in newspaper, Canadian Press, died today as he was preparing to get up for the day. He had been active in his former garden this spring.

Since his retirement June 30, 1939, he had lived quietly at his home here. Mrs. Livesay died in Toronto, a former resident of Carleton, a decade ago. Surviving are a son, Frank, who is engaged in the operation of the family farm, and a daughter, Mrs. Ethel Livesay, who conducts a book of his newspaper reminiscences, which he completed although unpublished.

Wrestling Referees Had Tough Night When Fox and Maxwell Manhandled by Participants

Fox Thrown From Ring and Maxwell Knocked Cold in Main Bout

NEAR FREE-FOR-ALL

It was a tough night on referees at the Hume Arena Wednesday night when the night's two ring officials were rendered hors de combat, one being carried from the squared circle in a semi-conscious condition.

First Cliff Fox was hurled bodily from the ring by Al Dunlop in the semi-final go and sustained an injured leg to the extent he was unable to continue. Then in the main bout Referee Bert Maxwell antagonized Ralph Garibaldi to such a degree that the St. Louis crowd-pleaser lowered the official with a full body slam with his noggin hitting the canvas so hard he lay colder than last Christmas turkey and had to be carried from the ring by Al "Bunny" Dunlop.

Actually bedlam and general donnybrook broke loose at the local palace de sport last night when it took the efforts of four preliminary wrestlers to subdue the youngest member of the famed Garibaldi wrestling troupe from St. Louis.

Katan Won First Fall

The melee came, when Garibaldi was about to put an end to the ring reign of the pugnacious John Katan, the local fans' No. 1 ring hate. Katan won the initial fall with his famed reverse headlock, but it took three such applications to subdue the agile and lithe St. Louis Italian lad, one Ralph Garibaldi. Prior to all of this, Garibaldi's attempts at flying head scissors were repeatedly thwarted by Referee Maxwell, much to the chagrin of Katan's opponent and the patrons in general.

However, in the second round it was a different tale that was told. Garibaldi opened his bag of tricks and had Katan at his mercy from the outset with the application of pin-wheel holds, punishing armlocks and finally evened matters with a series of rolling pin-wheels and a turnover, that left nothing to the imagination. When Garibaldi returned to ward off all of Katan's shady ring efforts and again apply his famed pin-wheelers — here, the fans thought, is our man to beat Katan. However, Referee Maxwell continually kept breaking Garibaldi's Sunday hold until the younger brother of the Garibaldi ring act lost all sense of reasoning, slugged Maxwell into submission and left him for naught on the mat. Came Garibaldi's big moment—an attack on the helpless Katan without even the presence of a referee and what happened to the Palermo Panther in the next few minutes shouldn't happen to a yellow dog.

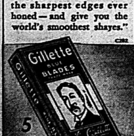
S.O.S. Sent Out

However, an S.O.S. was sent out and it took the united efforts of all four preliminary grapplers to subdue the angered Garibaldi, who by now was being wholeheartedly encouraged to dismember Katan at all costs by all and sundry fans who jammed the ringside from all sides in a merry state of donnybrook. Finally order was restored and Katan beat a hasty retreat to his dressing room thankful he got out alive. As for any suggestion of a decision—well, both Referee Fox and Arbiter Maxwell were in no physical shape or condition to even so much as bother with decisions, and who could blame them?

The hectic climax of the main scrap in no way over-shadowed the semi-final go that saw Vern Baxter and Al Dunlop slug, kick and pound to a draw with Referee Cliff Fox getting the worst end of the business stick, when Dunlop hurled him bodily from the ring at the full time bell. Just as a gesture of entertainment Baxter then proceeded to pitch Dunlop to the paying wolves in the ringside seats, and with Fox hors de combat Referee Bert Maxwell quelled this ring riot, that is to a much better advantage than what happened to him later in the show.

Referee Pushed Aside

At one stage of the semi-final Baxter physically pushed Referee Fox aside shouting — "Let me do it", with Dunlop crying in reply—"Save me, save me". However, the highlight of this bout came when Baxter hung Dunlop between the rope strands reverse side up and then proceeded to tighten the hemp around the hapless "Bunny", who added difficulty to his position by rehanging himself by the wrists in his attempts to release himself.



After blinding Johnny Gyroffy with some foreign substance in his hand, Cliff Olsen, the blonde Swede from Minneapolis, won over Gyroffy in the curtain-raiser.

Of course local wrestling fans today are keen on Garibaldi and would welcome a return bout between the St. Louis crowd-pleaser and Katan — providing Promoter Tunney could guarantee the services of a competent referee who could handle both men if and when the occasion arose.

Byron Nelson Installed Favorite To Win Red Cross Tournament

Byron Nelson of Toledo is installed as favorite for the $13,333 Red Cross golf tournament of 72 holes which opens today at New Rochelle, N.Y., although he could do no better than sixth in last week's competition at Philadelphia 15 strokes back of winner Sammy Byrd of Detroit. Leading shot-makers, including Byrd, Craig Wood, Harold (Jug) McSpaden and Sgt. E. J. Harrison are all in the current contest which will conclude Sunday. The leading pro will take down $2,666.65 in war bonds.

The St. Louis Browns last night gave outfielder Frank Demaree, 35, his unconditional release. He had been with the club since early spring.

An 11-inning inter county senior baseball struggle at Galt last night resulted in a 2-1 victory for the Terriers over Stratford Nationals with pitcher Ted Bissett hurling 7-hit ball and fanning 11 visitors in the whole session. Gooding drove in the winning run.

H. C. Hatch of Toronto is shipping five horses, including Acara, winner of the King's Plate, to run in the $5,000 Canadian Derby July 1 and the Winnipeg Futurity at Polo Park, it was announced last night by R. J. Speers, managing director of the Winnipeg Jockey Club.

Ted Atkinson, Toronto jockey, again had a busy day at Aqueduct Park when he booted home five winners in yesterday's eight-race card, including Burg-El-Arab in the featured $7,500 Tremont Stakes.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

Toronto, June 15—(CP)—Strange things happen beneath the midnight sun—and also in Victoria, it seems. Show business and the fight game got badly tangled up there the other night, and the resulting carnival beggared the imagination.

Carl (Vancouver News-Herald) Robertson gave a blow-by-blow description of the affair, with some hair-rumpling. It started with the Gizeh Temple Shrine band giving out with a few numbers, after which four bouts were bouted.

"Then the Gizeh boys have a return engagement and at this point a band of militia rangers start to work on the ring. Before you can say 'Wotin Goeson,' there's the neatest hunk of fir floor covering the ring as you've ever seen."

The program included glamor girl singers, a violin solo (longhair variety), a roller-skating act, and a "snappy can-can dance." Oh yes, with some fights mixed in.

"Wonder if the Victoria papers sent their night-club reporters or their sports writers to the show?" mused Mr. Robertson.

Rubbing It In:

Joe Ryan, whose Winnipeg football teams were a thorn-in-the-flesh to eastern teams before the war, is still riding the east with spurs. This time, Joe is needling through the pocketbook as a member of Mr. Ilsley's band of income tax boys. He has just received a nice promotion, and transfer from Ottawa to Montreal.

Coast to Coast:

Tiny Herman, former Ottawa Rough Riders gridiron star, became a proud father in Halifax recently when his wife presented him with youngster number one. It's a girl for the big R. C. N. V. R. Lieutenant . . . Jimmy Hanratty has retired from the C. N. R. publicity bureau in Montreal. He was a sport reporter on the Montreal star back in 1896 and sports editor of the Gazette about 1902 . . . Race patrons at Dufferin Park, Toronto, Wednesday witnessed a unique spectacle—a feature race without betting. Track sponsors decided to run the $3,000 added Dufferin handicap that way because only five owners were represented in the entry list-hardly enough for spirited wagering . . . Vancouver is interested in the talked-up Dominion High School football play-off. Before the Coast City could enter, the leagues would have to change their schedules—starting now after Christmas—and the schools would have to shift from the U. S. game they play now.

Jerry McPeake To Meet Escoe In Boxing Show

Jerry McPeake, the pride of the Trenton Air Station and heavyweight boxing champion of the No. 1 R. C. A. F. Command, will meet his stiffest ring opposition next week as headliner in a gala boxing show at the Trenton main station sports hangar. McPeake will meet Vern Escoe, heavyweight champion of the Canadian Army. Escoe is a colored lad and former Canadian professional leather-pusher of ring prominence.

With McPeake recognized as the heavyweight champion of the Air Force and the bronze-colored Escoe the Army titleholder considerable armed service ring prestige hangs in the balance of this meeting. McPeake has a lengthy list of knockouts to his credit and has yet to taste the bitter dose of defeat since enlistment.

To add color to the show F. O. Charlie Box Trenton station sports officer has engaged Johnny Keeler, No. 1 Training Command welterweight champion of the Air Force, to meet the popular Flt.-Sgt. "Hub" Smith, Kingston's gift to the Canadian boxing fraternity and former Canadian Olympic runner-up. Smith recently held Baby Yack to a draw in his native city.

A full card of armed service boxing, available to the civilian public will be staged at Trenton on Wednesday, June 14th with six preliminaries, Sergt. Johnny Pianosi today added one of the features would be a novice bout between "Fire-fly" Stiles and "Wrong-way" Lebskin, two mitt-slingers who are training diligently for their boxing inaugural.

BUCKY WALTERS FIRST PITCHER TO WIN 10 GAMES

Brilliant Hurler Has Started 12 Games and Completed Eleven

YANKS FINALLY WIN

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sport Writer

Bucky Walters of Cincinnati Reds became the first Major League pitcher to win 10 games this season when he hurled the Reds to a 3-2 triumph over Pittsburgh Pirates in 11 innings.

Including last night's game, the Reds' brilliant right-hander has started 12 games and completed 11 of them. Only Jim Tobin of Boston Braves has pitched more complete games, 12.

Walters has hurled 114 innings in which he has allowed 22 runs and 74 hits, an average of fewer than six hits and 1.85 runs per game.

The Reds had to come from behind to win yesterday's game. After the Pirates had gone ahead with a single tally in the 11th, Steve Mesner tripled, Eddie Miller followed with a double to score Mesner, and Woody Williams singled Miller in with the winning run.

Boston Red Sox won their seventh and eighth straight by capturing both games of a double header from Philadelphia Athletics 6-4 and 5-0. Francis (Red) Barrett won the opener in relief for his first Major League victory and Pinky Woods hurled a six-hit shutout in the nightcap.

New York Yankees ended a seven-game losing streak by whipping Washington Senators 6-2 behind Walter Dubiel's five-hit pitching. The victory hurled the Yankees back into the first division in fourth place.

Detroit Tigers took both ends of a twin bill from Cleveland Indians 3-0 and 11-3. Rufe Gentry, who broke into the Majors last year with a shutout over the Indians, duplicated it in the opener, scattering six hits. Hal Newhouser won his ninth game in the nightcap, more than any other American hurler.

The league-leading Browns overwhelmed Chicago White Sox 10-3. Nelson Potter hung up his seventh victory of the season, aided by Al Zarilla who banged out four hits, including a double and triple.

The National League leaders, St. Louis Cardinals, had to come from behind twice to defeat the tail-end Chicago Cubs 10-9.

GAMES CANCELLED DUE TO RAIN

(By The Associated Press)

The International League race is so tight that any of the first six teams can pull away from the rest with a sizeable winning streak.

With all games wiped off the calendar yesterday due to rain, Jersey City maintains its first place lead by half a game over Baltimore, which in turn is half a game ahead of Buffalo. Then follow Rochester, Montreal and Toronto, with the Leafs only four games away from first place.

The best winning streak thus far has been posted by Rochester, winner of eight straight in May.

The longest losing streak was turned in by Syracuse, 13.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.
(Associated Press Sport Writer)

New York, June 15. (AP) — Ancient history lesson: moved by the furore over Mel Harder's 200th major league victory this Spring, Ernie Lanigan looked over his records and found the near-misses included 198 victories by bullet Joe Bush, 197 each by Larry French, Al Orth, Dazzy Vance and Rube Waddell, 196 by Babe Adams and 195 by Adolfo Luque and Bob Shawkey.

Vaughan Hazen, Rochester Rookie, had made only two hits in 17 times at bat when the Red Wings went to play an exhibition at the Sampson, N.Y., naval training centre. . . .As he went to the plate the first time, a teammate remarked: "You ought to hit the devil out of this sore-armed semi pro pitcher". . . .Hazen did, a 400-foot homer on the first pitch. . . . After he circled the bases a veteran commented: "All you needed was to hit against some good pitching". . .When Hazen learned the Sampson pitcher was Hal White, formerly of the Tigers, he became jittery and popped up on the next try. . . . "I was so busy studying that big leaguer's style I just could not keep my eye on the ball", he explained. . . .Last Saturday President Shag Shaughnessy of the International League fined Baltimore's Blas Monaco 25 bucks for some slight offence. That night Monaco socked two homers and the next day he hit another . . .And either.

CASUAL COMMENT by K.J.C.

Semie Beach.

One of the silly stories going the rounds is about the traveller in the middle of the Sahara desert who came upon a man in a bathing suit. Imagine the amazement of the traveller.

"Where on earth are you going?" demanded the traveller.

"Swimming," replied the one in the bathing suit.

"But," said the traveller, "you're a hundred miles from the sea."

"Yes," replied the other. "Wide beach, isn't it?"

Rather Complicated, But!

On June 26th the three New York area major league clubs engage in what reads to be the most complicated baseball game yet, a triple-header, to be played in ONE game. It is in support of the United States Fifth War Loan and sees the Yankees, Giants and Dodgers all engaged in the same game at once as intact and separate clubs. The game will be played at the Polo Grounds with the purchase of War Bonds necessary for admission.

That baseball "triple-header" intrigues this column more than anything which has come down the pike in many a moon. It was conceived by Stanley Oshan of the United States Treasury Department, hitherto considered a very normal, intelligent and efficient citizen. But he certainly must have had a brainstorm to have come up with this one.

His plan calls for the Giants, Yankees and Dodgers to meet each other in a single game. One team will be on the field, one at bat and one on the bench in a sany rotating fashion. The official scorer at the Polo Grounds has been quietly meditating hara-kiri ever since he heard of it, and Abner Doubleday has been spinning feverishly in his grave.

Wild and Wooly.

Just when Promoter Frank Tunney had apparently unearthed a suitable opponent for John "Fingers" Katan he has no referee to cope with the situation. This all occurred last night when Ralph Garibaldi, the youngest of the wrestling Garibaldis, had Katan at his mercy, but only after having rendered Referee Maxwell hors de combat and of little use when the critical time of a decision rolled around. Actually it was a tough night on ring arbiters, Referee Cliff Fox calling it a day after being hurled bodily from the ring in the semi-final and limping to the sanctity of his dressing room ready to call it a day.

Now that Promoter Tunney has proven to the fans he has a suitable opponent for Katan in the lithe and youthful Garibaldi Mr. Tunney would be well advised to employ a suitable referee for a rematch, but quick.

Remember When . . .

Johnny Vandermeer, 23-year-old Cincinnati Red southpaw, became the first pitcher in major baseball league history to hurl two consecutive no-hit, no-run games six years ago tonight. His first whitewash was administered to the Boston Braves on June 11th and the second victims were the Brooklyn Dodgers on their home lot as Brooklyn fans were seeing their first night game at Ebbetts' Field.

While on the subject of baseball, the game that once made the name of Belleville ring across the Dominion, is slowly raising its head again, thanks to the interest of a few kids who need a little equipment to help them along. Incidentally, with two teen-aged nines already playing exhibition games in town, a third team may rise out of the material in and about Corbyville. (More about this later.)

Softball Situation.

For the second time this season old Jupiter Pluvius dampened the hopes of the girls' softball league when the Mountain View-Universal league fixture was rained out last night. The first game to be washed out was on June 2nd when Bell Sargents and the Deacon gals stood by. It's a case of playing postponed games in order of schedule so Secretary Eddie Schrieder announced today the Sargent-Deacon game of June 2nd would be played tomorrow night. As neither of these clubs have entered on the win column as yet, Friday night's tussle will be of grave importance as the loser will occupy the cellar slot, but lonesome.

Tonight the C.N.R. "Railroaders" and Stephens-Adamson "Marines" battle it out for first place in the first game of a double-header in the men's league. Alemite and the Junior Squires finish the bill.

LESSON NO 46

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Start from scratch. An opening one-bidder shows five tricks, four of which are high cards. He expects to find partner with two tricks, both of which are high cards. That is the partnership basis.

If partner passes, he has no more than two tricks. If he bids, he has more than two tricks. Each raise uses another trick. Hence, voluntary no-trump bid uses another high card.

Just because a bid is made does not mean another trick is used up. No trick is consumed by a suit bid that is not a raise. And no high card is consumed by a forced no-trump bid.

Maybe I can show you what I mean with this hand:

♠ K 7 3
♥ A Q J 9 6
♦ 2 4 3
♣ 8 5

Your partner starts with an opening bid of one diamond. Your response is one heart. You say you have more than two tricks.

But your bid was not a raise in anther. So, you have not used up a third trick. If partner then bids two clubs, you bid two hearts. That is not a raise, either. So one has consume a third trick.

Suppose partner then bids three hearts. You will now bid four hearts. That is an increase in number. For the "first time you have used up the third trick in your hand.

Take away your heart jack and give yourself a club king. If partner opens with one spade, respond with two hearts. Having raised, you have consumed your third trick.

But you could have raised even if your third trick was a short card instead of a high card. So, although you have consumed your third trick in a suit bid, you have an unproven high card.

If partner then bids three hearts, you have no more tricks for a raise to four hearts. But you can voluntarily bid three no-trump to show your third high card.

Try to smoke that out.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Birth of the Blues"

If ever a picture showed more promise of movie entertainment than it failed to fulfill, imaginatively-launched saga of indigo rhythm, "Birth of the Blues" which opened yesterday at the McCarthy theatre, then we don't know of it.

This commendation, for one, is floored by the impressive list of names in the cast. Bing Crosby, Mary Martin, Brian Donlevy, Carolyn Lee, Jack Teagarden, the band leader, and Rochester. What a lineup for laughs and music. Incidentally, critics and audiences don't mince any words in calling this picture just about the best of its kind ever produced. Certainly the stuff of which swell pictures are made is there.

The title, the "Birth of the Blues" is one of the rambunctious band leaders who, although the best talent he could find to play the spirited Dixieland style, He plays the clarinet, Brian Donlevy the trumpet, and Jack Teagarden, of course performs on that miraculous trombone of his. Pretty Mary Martin is the boy's fiancee, a diplomat, and where a better one can be found, we just don't know.

"Ladies Courageous"

Packing a tremendous emotional punch and telling the thrilling story of America's army women flyers, Walter Wanger's "Ladies Courageous", with an all-star cast headed by Loretta Young and Geraldine Fitzgerald, opened yesterday at the McCarthy theatre.

"Ladies Courageous" tells the story of the WAFS-Women's Auxiliary Ferrying Squadron—a civilian unit of the U.S. army which was first organized in 1942 with twenty-five of the nation's foremost young women flyers as charter members. Recently the WAFS were merged with other army women's units and today are known as the WASPS, Women's Airforce Service Pilots.

Actually, the personal stories of three beautiful young women caught in the web of an ingeniously threaded into the well-paced plot of "Ladies Courageous" revealing an intimate picture of the emotional conflicts with which each of the girls finds herself beset.

Miss Young as executive officer of the WASP, has a role which calls upon her to play the modern young woman of purpose in the finest sense, but withal she manages to leave a few welcome impression of an exquisitely lovely and wholly feminine personality.

Miss Fitzgerald delivers a truly remarkable performance as Miss Young's emotionally unstable sister whose selfishness and reckless flirtations jeopardize every effort to the dissolution of the WASP.

Anne Gwynne, Diana Barrymore, Evelyn Ankers, June Vincent, Kola Kwariani, Phillip Terry and Richard Fraser have the principal supporting roles in an excellent cast, which includes Dwight Frye, Frank Sully, Janet Shaw and Kan Richmond.

AT THE BELLE

"Lifeboat." Thrilling

It was inevitable that the magic of Alfred Hitchcock and the genius of John Steinbeck should one day be merged.

That 20th Century-Fox has finally accomplished this union and swelled combination of two of the screen's greatest talents is certainly another feather in the cap of that studio.

And it was equally inevitable that the result—Alfred Hitchcock's production of "Lifeboat" by John Steinbeck—should prove to be the finest motion picture entertainment that advertising reports claim it to be. A spectacular film triumph which stars Tallulah Bankhead and features William Bendix, Walter Slezak, Mary Anderson, Hume Cronyn, Henry Hull, Heather Angel, Hume Cronyn and Canada Lee in a cast of fifteen, is now playing at Belle Theatre.

When the screen's master of suspense came up with the basic idea of a story dealing with eight people who are thrown together in a lifeboat after their ship has been torpedoed in mid-Atlantic, he immediately sensed the universal dramatic possibilities in the situation. When he began casting about for an author who could delineate the richly varied characterizations in a truly fascinating manner, his path naturally led to the famous author of the sensationally successful "The Grapes of Wrath" and "The Moon Is Down." Steinbeck was so inspired with the story idea that he decided to tackle the assignment.

Widely regarded as America's foremost author, John Steinbeck has had four of his novels dramatized on the screen, but "Lifeboat" marks the first time he has worked for a motion picture studio. Demonstrating the mutual confidence between Steinbeck and the studio, the agreement was entirely verbal and no contract was signed, or terms discussed.

Wisely Regarded as Cater

Spyros Skouras, one of the USA's leading film figures, predicts that within five years British films will be competing with American films everywhere on an even basis. Evidence that the British are aiming at the world market in a big way is the fact that "Queen of the Nile," made by producers in the Old Country with Vivien Leigh as the star, will cost more than $3,125,000 to make. . . . Lon Ayres, who refused military service on a conscientious objector and then joined the Ambulance Corps in the front lines, will study for the clergy after the war.

Ontario's most interesting tourists resort is Stratford on the Coats of the Century, Kitchener.

Coets was born in the American Consulate at Port Said, Egypt, in 1870 on the same day that Queen Victoria celebrated the opening of the Suez Canal. His father, a British subject, was acting Consul and one of the engineers who built what was to become the lifeline of the British Empire.

In honor of his birth the Khedive of Egypt presented the infant with a decoration and a certificate signed also by the Sultan of Turkey proclaiming Coets a Pasha of the Moslem world.

The elder Coets brought the family to Canada, Marion, after studying at Upper Canada, took the medical course at McGill University but skipped before graduation to practice medicine during the Klondyke Gold Rush. From there, in 1899, he went to the Boer War as a captain. When General Cronje surrendered Coets was in charge of his bodyguard on the Island of St. Helena where Napoleon had been jailed.

The Pasha was a keen, hale and hearty, couldn't stand retirement and came back to the theatre business several years ago.

He had spent most of his life as an actor and producer and played with actors and actresses whose names are historic today.

Clearing copyrights on film music isn't what these days. In "Going My Way" Miss Stevens sings Carmen music but the public music writer distributing rights insisted they be changed. When a misleady in "Lifeboat" was asked to take a sail suit she asked, "Does it come complete with splints?"

And Guy Madison, who spends much time doing army camp shows, says that he was chatting with a soldier when a letter was delivered to the lad in khaki. "My wife and I keep in touch with each other," he said, "but we're not on speaking terms". . . . You may be sharing a throne next time the barber shaves you. "CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT" by ANNE ROWE

"Hmm. Trial run?" The Inspector wondered, stroking his chin. "Now what is Barnaby up to, I'm snooping there for?"

Shortly after Stella's precipitate departure Mrs. Kay finally left—Allie chirping with scandalized spleen, many hours after Stella had fended, young Jordon bewildered, and the bulk of the house quite completely glad to get away.

Then Dad cancelled Stella upstairs with all the gentle solicitude of a combination father - lover - doctor - nurse—and Aunt Millie, the Inspector, Allan and I were left as a lonely quartet among the debris left on the lawn, until Mae Nellis came out to tidy up and transfer the scarcely touched refreshments into the house.

A glance at the Inspector's face showed me there was no chance of his leaving also, and so I told Nettie: "Bring tea and cake for four into the large drawing room," and resignedly led the way to our mental torture chamber.

The Inspector took it as a matter of course, and immediately sat down in his customary chair.

"Maybe all this reckless sin's no concern of mine, and again maybe it is, what with Mrs. Avery accusing Miss Kay of murder, and saying it was her, screamed last night," he began, after Nettie had rolled in a tea wagon and gone out again. "Anyways, I'll like the whole story. Straight, mind you. Now, which of you has the most sense and the clearest memory? He paused, and then nodded toward Aunt Millie. "Guess you, Miss Wentworth. Leastways you ain't in love, far's I know, with one eye and ear on your sweetie."

"Thanks for the left-handed compliment," Aunt Millie sniffed and made a little grimace. "Where do you want me to start?"

"At—how the Averys happened t'run for tea. One of you said that."

"They came uninvited and not together," Aunt Millie informed him. "Curtiss dear quite a bit ahead of his charming spouse, to make his excuses for her, said he."

"Hmm. Nice of him." the Inspector commented.

"She came when we had finished being glad for Amy's engagement—and were starting to enjoy what they were having now—" the Inspector was biting deeply into a luscious piece of cake at the moment—dropping out of a clear sky, in a taxi. We all saw it draw up and—Kay not being at home at the time—I went to receive her."

"Oh! Miss Kay wasn't around?" the Inspector threw me a quick glance. How she see? Mrs. Avery, I mean."

"Perfectly normal at first," Aunt Millie reported, "Said she'd come to say she was sorry, and seemed delighted the betrothal hadn't been and she could offer her apologies to Allie and her good wishes to the young couple."

"Knew all about the engagement eh? News travels fast in this here town," the Inspector observed, "Or, um, Miss Wentworth, When did she turn abnormal?"

"When she saw Miss Burton—and her husband, on the lawn. They weren't together, you understand. Gala was sitting between my brother and Allie Forrestall and Avery — I don't remember where he is, Oh—did he slip Forrestall pearls?"

"He didn't Allan jerked her out of it. "He was walking around, admiring the flowers, with Amy Forrestall and her adoring mooncalf. And how he came running when he saw his beloved Stella! Three legs ahead of the others!"

"Hmm. Yes. Just—Miss Burton being the same place as her husband, kept set off the fireworks," the Inspector mused, munching his cake pensively.

"Stella was mad with casualties," Aunt Millie nodded. "Did you see how Avery's hand shook with rage? And honestly, I don't think Stella ever knew anyone with such a sweeping command of — language."

"Yes—and she tried to go the same thing to Dick, only we didn't let her," Allan grinned.

Aunt Millie added: "And that's where you came in, Finn."

"Mmm, aysh, that's where we arrive," the Inspector confirmed, his eyes on me. "Thank you. That's all I wanted to know. Now I'm going to ask Miss Kay a few questions—in private—and then I'll be with you two! Down to the County Attorney's office. Comprehend?"

"No, you didn't."

"Pity you did," wearily.

"'Cause perjury's a prison offence," he smiled cordially.

It was a relief to hear that I wouldn't have to testify under oath.But it wouldn't do to let my Inquisitor know it. And so I kept quiet and looked at him hopefully.

He waited a little and then tried again.

"Look Miss Kay. You're a nice girl, I like you. And I think you're square. Got a head—a good one. So—why don't you trust me and tell the truth? What you go in the Burton house for, Friday night?"

Perhaps hysterics are contagious. I felt like screaming, 'Leave me alone! Leave me alone! I can't bear your everlasting questions any longer!' and heard myself say instead with faint irony: "I told you. I went to look for my compact. I don't trust you or anyone else with what I say!"

He shoved his hair with his fingers, destroying the efforts of his careful parting.

"Because it don't make sense—everyone goes in that house for little nothings at all. You for that compact—through the window too. Now don't deny it. Those tracks are yours. Flynn measured 'em with a slice of prune—and Miss Burton for a book; and Amy Forrestall to meet that young Jordon nincompoop. You believe he's the man she had her raindrove with?"

Tired and nervous as I was, I couldn't resist turning the tables on him.

"Do you?" I parried slyly.

He fell into my trap. "Not on your life—why, Little Bobbie Jordon wouldn't have dared. No, he was brought; all right, for a fall guy."

"Then—why do you think I'm a bigger fool than you?" I asked sweetly.

He just stared at me uncomprehendingly, and then shouted with exasperation. I took the occasion to plead for myself.

"Please, Inspector—I'm tired. that score in the garden on top of everything else. I'll see how my head is Sunday. Tomorrow my head'll be a lot clearer I begged, grilling it I can't say he hasn't pleased. But he let me go. And once outside the room I did find myself in the hall and upstairs, without glancing to right or left at that door. Allan, of course, would join me as soon as the Inspector could.

They both did, presently. Anxious to hear what the Inspector had asked me, and what had been discussed in my twoooms with Avery and Conley Forrestall.

There wasn't much to tell about my talk with Curtiss Avery. The poor book had tried to help his wife unentertaining the task for himself by an ill-contrived attempt at blackmail. Which had failed because of her incredible exhibition.

She's a pathological case. He ought to have her declared incompetent," Aunt Millie declared, and then listened with growing consternation to my account of Forrestall's message from Bruce.

"He wants me to see him, Allan decided. "I won't let you go to him alone. I'm going with you!"

"Oh, no, you're not, bleary-eyed when you get to the office; and have trouble with Finlay! I'm going this tested. "Oh, no!"

"Say, Mercury, our expedition into the wilds starts this minute. You go and lie down. Kay and I'll see to have some rest. We'll each take a bramble and see what we can scare up. Trying for Nettie, to put a supper tray outside your door—"

Allan didn't like the idea. But I was on Aunt Millie's side, and he was outvoted two to one and had to accept our ruling. After all, he had a death. Dad might become suspicious if anything went wrong and he didn't show up on his job at the usual hour,through some unforeseen delay. And he could understand that I didn't want that to happen. Not after keeping my stupid secret for Bruce Forrestall.

Shortly after Allan left, Nettie appeared at the door in answer to Aunt Millie's pull on the old-fashioned bell-rope.

She listened to our demand for a supper tray with an understanding but not much twisting of her apron hem, and altogether seemed to be didn't know that in short association—genuinely deferential.

"Yes, Miss Kay. Yes, Miss Wentworth. I'll tell Mae to have a real nice tray, sad—" She suddenly broke off with an embarrassed gulp and hurried out. I was immediately resolve: "And you needn't worry about waking up the night time, Miss Kay. Mae'n me, Breakfast'll be ready, three-thirty sharp, with coffee, hot coffee, and I'll see Robert'll have the car out — the other one, I mean, not the new house, so it won't rouse Mr. Wentworth."

Then she was gone. And Aunt Millie and I stared at each other, dumfounded and wordless.

I shall never forget our drive to the Burton Camp in the early dawn.

It was quite dark when we left, and persistently cold—and damp. The town slept. The streets were empty. Flynn's farms we passed on our way were so still they seemed deserted. There wasn't a sound in the car except the hurried, even the crickets had stilled their perennial song.

Then, dim and gray at first, it grew lighter, and life began to show in the fields and woods. A rabbit scuttled across the road—a bird chirped—somewhere a cock crowed. And in the east the darkness turned to a faint, promising pinkish gold.

Soon we reached Eagle Lake. To the right of it was a little uphill, set well back among the darkness of the trees, stood a rambling low log cabin, so hidden and blending into the background, we would have missed it without the faint light shining through its open door.

We turned into the short, overgrown driveway leading up to it.

Another car was there, parked in the deep shadow of overhanging branches, and I stopped mine close to it, without surprise at being there; only thinking vaguely that Bruce must have acquired it with Forrestall's help.

Presently Aunt Millie and I walked up the narrow footpath to the lighted door and mounted the steps. Aunt Millie straightened her slip and gripping each other's hands for courage.

No one came to meet us. Nothing stirred in the house.

"Bruce has overslept," I thought with a trace of annoyance. "How like him! Making me come out in the middle of the night and not bother to be there to greet me."

In the door we stopped.

On the floor, right in front of us, a gray-trousered leg stuck out stiffly, and for one fatal moment it was small, and encased in a navy-blue pajama.

My eyes travelled along the leg in weird fascination—

Allie was crouching on the floor, in her gray slack-suit, her artificiality dropping at an unnatural angle. She was looking straight at me, out of the saddest eyes I had ever seen. Tears were streaming down her cheeks, and she was holding a man in her arms—Bruce.

He was dead. Dead for hours. His wide-open eyes stared up unseeingly. In the middle of his forehead, with a small, round hole beneath it, a thin, dark snake was crawling down his face. Stella's arm and on to the floor.

He was quite dead.

Severe Neuritis Pains Stopped By Syntona

This Dundas Lady Says It Helped Her After Many Other Things Failed. Tells of Other Health Benefits.

MRS. H. R. DYMENT

"When I began taking Syntona several weeks ago I was suffering terribly from neuritis that had bothered me for the last three years," says Mrs. H. R. Dyment, Dundas, Ontario.

"I took many medicines but nothing would relieve the severe pains in my shoulders and back. There were many nights that I couldn't sleep, my nerves are so bad that I felt tired and run down and had no desire to do my work or go any place. My food soured and I suffered a lot from acid risings and a sick, nauseated feeling in my stomach.

"All that has changed since I've taken a few bottles of Syntona and now I feel like a new woman. The pains have entirely gone away, my nerves are steady once more and I have regained all my lost strength and energy. I have a good appetite, now, too, and never have any trouble with my stomach no matter what I eat. My friends all marvel how much better I look and I owe this all to your wonderful Syntona medicine."

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST. Find out how it can help you, too.

Little Benny's Note Book

We were sailing supper, being lamb stew without dumplings, and I said, in pop. Oh dear, I was hoping that the war would be over by this time, and we could have our sugar and expenses would be reasonable if not normal so at least we could have a trip this summer for a long-felt vacation. But I guess we will stay at home as used to spend lolling in the sunshine on the front of Bewery Beach, oh dear. There was a spirit of play in the very air of the ark.

That's what even the flies were playful, pop said. They never tired of having a game of tag with him although the cuts little imps could never quite seem to get the hang of tagging, so we comprimised. They were and I tagged, he said, and me said, I can still smell that wonderful salt spray.

Yes, I said one thing we couldn't seem to get too much of, pop said. Ever since we left Jerry Bay we have been through the woods every morning and stopped at a different beautiful spot every day for a picknick lunch with the birds singing overhead and little lame deer coming to eat out of our hands, she said.

Yes I remember, I said, them lame mosquitoes eating out of my legs and the little lame ants eating out of my sandwiches, pop said. Experiences like that really stick in the memory. Grover, with the old swimming hole where you stick in the water and the trees just as soft as velvet, he said, and the big rock where you've gone right from that angle, I mean I suppose every cloud has a silver lining, pop said, and it is one of the best Nora ever made and I'm sure that things we will encounter on our travels, I mean really tasty food, he said. But there's probably no place like home in an emergency, I said.

Being the end of the subject.

Police Officer's Car is Stolen, Soon Recovered

Trenton, June 15 (Special) — Trenton police uniform paid unexpected visit to Bowmanville last night—but there was no policeman inside it.

Police Constable G. E. "Barney" McColl, stalwart of the town police force liked his uniform and car well. So while indulging in his favorite outdoor sport of fishing on the changed to civilian dungarees and sweatshirt. He left his uniform inside his car and strode away. Later he visited friends on McCallum Avenue, but when he came returning to his parking spot, he found he owned the little car that wasn't there.

Later, the stolen car was recovered in Bowmanville, where the light-fingered fraternity had left after it failed to operate due to lack of fuel. Obliging Bowmanville had left enough fuel in carried on their streets, so it was merely a matter of steering it back to Trenton.

During the evening Constables Crawford and Hutchinson discovered two cars had been tampered with, and noticed two soldiers loitering in the vicinity who looked suspicious.

Meanwhile Constable "Barney" is thanking his stars that he loves softball instead of swimming.

Seven Charges On One Accident Laid in Court

As a sequel to a rear end automobile-horse and buggy crash that occurred near Marysville on Highway No. 2, seven Highway Traffic charges were laid in Picton Police Court before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd on Thursday. Four of the charges were preferred against Fred Leon Zachariah, Kingston, driver of the motor car in the accident. Plow horse and buggy driven by Edward Brennan, Marysville, who also appeared on one charge while driving a horse and buggy without lights, and father of the driver, was arraigned on two counts.

Pte. Leon Zachariah pleaded guilty to charges of leaving the scene of an accident, careless driving, driving without a permit and failing to report an accident. Fines and costs totalling $45 were imposed and in each case six days' imprisonment was ordered in default of the payment of the fines. The driver's permit was taken up since last Saturday he has already been fined $10 and costs on a charge of careless driving.

Zachariah, father of the former and owner of the car involved in the accident with a horse and buggy driven by Edward Brennan, pleaded not guilty to charges of driving a motor vehicle without permitting a person to drive his motor vehicle and operation of a licence. Mr. E. E. Pollwell, local solicitor, appeared for Zachariah and pointed out to the court that the younger Zachariah had driven his father's car for a joyride without the older man's consent or knowledge.

Brennan was convicted of driving a horse and buggy while lights displayed and fined two dollars and costs. Crown Attorney R. J. Donnan, K.C., explained the fine was the minimum allowable.

Magistrate Lloyd commented on the fine police work of Traffic Officer Sgt. Halbert, who investigated the case following the original hit-and-run case.

Chatsmile, Ore., June 15 —(AP)— Capt. Jack Byrnes had a bad case of hives, but he doesn't mind a bit. For his years in the Pacific he almost said he dreamed continually of fresh strawberries. "Oh, when I think of it," he said in a three-day berry eating marathon," he explained, "it was worth it."

War Correspondents Shelled And Driven From Old Chateau

By ROSS MUNRO
(CP War Correspondent)

With the Canadians in France, June 15 —(CP Cable)—Canadian war correspondents and officers and men of the Public Relations Unit of the Canadian 3rd Division on the Normandy beachhead were heavily shelled for 30 minutes Tuesday by shrapnel, then machine-gunned and driven from the old chateau which had been press headquarters for less than 48 hours.

The chateau was set on fire by the shells pounding into it and most of our kit was lost. By a miracle, none of our unit was seriously wounded.

Several of our men were treated for slight shrapnel wounds, another for shell shock, and a correspondent injured his foot leaping from a second storey window.

This incident climaxed a hectic week of bombing, shelling and sniping in the beachhead and it was the narrowest escape any of us had had in France.

Lose Two Typewriters.

We now are trying to get a new kit together and the loss of two typewriters, which to a war correspondent are what Bren guns are to fighting soldiers, was one of the worst blows of all.

We had moved into the chateau last Sunday. It was set in a grove of trees only a few miles behind the Canadian front and it appeared to be a comparatively quiet base from which to work.

Some of us were catching up on our sleep late in the morning and others were waiting for lunch when a couple of shells burst a hundred yards away. There had been a fair amount of shelling at various places in which we had been, and nobody was alarmed.

Then one shell crumped in the trees nearby. I jumped out of the blankets, pulled on a few bits of clothing over my pyjamas and started collecting bits of kit just as the enemy found the range and a shell hit the chateau right in the centre and just outside the hall.

Gas Fires Set Afire.

Gasoline tins on the ground were set ablaze and in a minute the building was flaming and smoking. In a shower of debris and plaster those of us on the ground floor raced for slit trenches among the trees as a salvo from at least three guns crashed into the grove.

Charlie Lynch from Halifax, of Reuters News Agency, Joe Willcombe, of International News Service, and Capt. Bill Cornforth, of Quebec City, who had been up all night watching the bombing of the city of Caen by heavy R.A.F. planes, were asleep on the second floor when the shell hit. Matthew Halton of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation was working there too. They had to jump 12 feet from a window but were able to get some of their kit out.

Lt. S. B. Shapiro of Montreal, of Irish American, newspaper Allliance, came downstairs, heading for a slit trench as flames swept up the staircase. Ralph Allen of the Toronto Globe and Mail was on the ground floor when the first shell hit and made it to a foxhole all right.

A Bad Twenty Minutes.

It was a bad 20 minutes during which at least a shell a minute landed around us.

Every officer of the Press Relations Unit who was there established himself admirably. Other ranks included Sgt. Hugh Monk, London, Ont., our game little cook and Pte. Dave Farrow, North Bay, Ont.

Members of the Canadian Army Film Unit there included Lieut. Don Grant, Windsor, Ont. Those of them who had cameras with them during the shelling took pictures.

William Stewart, another CP war correspondent, from Riviere du Loup, Que., Marcel Ouimet of CBC, and Ronald Clark of the British United Press, were away from the camp at the time.

They returned to discover we were gone and the chateau shattered and on fire.

Stewart, Clark, Shapiro and I, who had our kit in the room which was hardest hit, were cleaned out.

I lost my clothes, money, identity credentials, and our files, and all the rest of our kit, which we had worked on for so long before sailing to France was blown to bits or burned.

We are going around the beachhead now like a group of blitz victims, pinching ourselves to make sure we are still alive. The front line really moved in on our press headquarters.

Watch Your Waste Fats

Syracuse, N. Y., June 15—(CP)—Housewives universally in recent tests found that the best contribution to waste fat collection campaigns is to use waste fat and salvage only unusable fat.

A single pork roast may result in two pounds of waste fat and can be kept in the refrigerator three months without a trace of rancidity.

Pork as well as chicken fats, researchers found, are excellent in pastry, may be used in batter cakes and are proper frying medium. Lamb fats, other strongly flavored or highly discolored fats are recommended for the waste-fat tin can.

Tale of Adventure Of An Armored Column

In the new official booklet, The Eighth Army, there is told a little known incident which happened to a group of the 4th-8th South African Armored Cars who found a gap in the minefields near El Daba, far to the south of the main battle and which had started at El Alamein. This group, under the 8th and the King's Royal Rifle Corps. The story goes on in the words of one officer in the box part.

Let me say that we attribute the luck which attended our initial break-through to the splendid work of the infantry and the artillery which paved the way.

We left our location and passed through the minefields in single file. No shot was fired at us. The only impediment to our progress occurred when the first car ran into an 88-mm. gun pit filled with dead Germans. One or two more cars, including three petrol replenishment lorries, got stuck in slit trenches, but most of them pulled out when dawn broke and thought they were up to us.

At first we were astonished to do anything as we came through, as else the Italian section thought we were Germans and the German section thought we were Italians. They waved swastika flags at us with right and left replied with "Achtung!" And anything else we could think of, which, with an answering wave, would get us through their lines.

As it grew lighter they stared and blinked at us. Although a warning had been sent that we were going on all night, they couldn't believe their eyes. They would goggle at us from short range, see our beret, bolt away a few yards, stare at us as they didn't think it was true, and come back to take another look.

We passed within 10 yards of the wrecks of an entire battery of field artillery. Right down the column we went, with gunners still standing by their guns and, fortunately, failing to let them off.

As dawn broke we passed a man in bed. From the mass of vehicles and equipment surrounding him he was obviously an Italian quartermaster. We pulled him up by tossing a Verey light into his blankets. He broke the record for the sitting high jump.

* * *

Into one of his lorries we heaved a hand grenade. The result was that we drove three more factory but they scared the second-in-command, who, following in an armored car, had failed to see us toss the grenade.

Picking our way through trenches and gun positions, we came upon what was evidently "general's" headquarters. Lorries were dug in, men were everywhere. The staff were surprised to wake up and see their Italian guns go up in the air one by one.

In the first quarter of an hour the ten squadrons destroyed 40 lorries simply by putting a bullet through the petrol tanks, and setting a match to the leak. The crews of lorries which had got bogged down in the break-through transferred themselves to German vehicles holding petrol. Spare men climbed aboard Italian vehicles mounted with Breda guns and on we pushed.

Germans panicked from their lorries into slit trenches. We had no time to take prisoners. We just took their weapons, and told them to commence walking east. Few refused. The majority were most anxious to oblige us in every way and readily assisted in draining vehicles we thought fit to immobilize.

The Italians asked for greater consideration. They wanted to come with us, clinging to the sides of our armored cars, so that they could each other to come aboard. To stop this movement across a group leader asked for one of their officers. Half a dozen men stepped forward.

We explained we couldn't take them all and, skimming off the cream, pushed on with a colonel and two majors clinging for dear life round the mudgles of our two-pounders.

* * *

The columns of smoke climbing up from the lorries we burned attracted the attention of tanks and aircraft. We managed to dodge the tanks but the aircraft pestered us throughout the next few days.

One German pilot adopted a novel form of bombing. He had probably grown tired of aiming at the small targets offered by an armored car and, attaching a bomb to a piece of rope suspended from his Ju 100, flew over us, hoping to bomp the bomb into our turrets. After 10 unsuccessful attempts the bomb hit the ground and exploded, causing terrible damage to the rope.

The armor of our cars was excellent and the only casualties inflicted from the air were on the German lorries we shanghaled to come along with us. We had our personal escort of one of the Italian majors swinging round a turret was shot off by one of his own planes.

When the two squadrons parted, one continuing due west, the other going southwest, in the south we met the Axis telephone lines connecting the left and right flanks of their defensive line, and added a little more to the general confusion.

For the remainder of the first day we set astride their lines of supply, holding up and destroying lorries as they arrived to support them from the front. This highway robbery continued for another day before armored barrage had crept that instead of burning vehicles and attracting the attention of aircraft we merely rendered them useless.

Ever since we raided the headquarters we had had reprisals sent out after us, slow flying reconnaissance Storches came after us. We shot one down. We also came across some aircraft, a marvellous target for our bombers, and sent back the information that they were waiting on the airfield to be destroyed. In an astonishingly short space of time our bombers were over—and so were their aircraft.

There was an amusing incident when we came across a South African unit who had been ground-strafing. He was shot down practically under the wheels of one of our armored cars. Expecting to be manhandled so far behind the German lines, he covered his face with his eyes when he realized we were British.

* * *

And so we stayed fifteen miles behind Rommel's lines. The only real battle we had was on November 5, when our break-through took place. We heard later that when we hit the British tanks had broken through, Rommel's reply had been, "Oh, yes, I know about that"—in reference to our armored cars. At the time our tanks really had broken through.

On the 5th, having waylaid a number of vehicles containing retreating German troops, we met up with several 50-mm. anti-tank guns. Things looked black for us when we met the fighting French coming west.

Fortunately for us mutual recognition came quickly and together we compelled the enemy to leave behind anti-tank guns and some field guns which he had in tow.

With this our job was over. There was no need to return. The 8th Army had come out to meet us.

The results of this extraordinary raid were:

For: Two hundred vehicles destroyed. At least thirty guns captured or destroyed, counting nothing or smaller bore than 50-mm. Prisoners nil—eastward-walking Germans and Italians with astonished expressions still on their faces have been picked up by other units, were far too many to be counted.

Against: Seven armored cars and three lorries. Three men killed, 12 wounded.

Yanks Advance Up to Three Miles Across Peninsula

Tank Battle Still Rages East Of Caumont and The City of Caen

WEATHER UNFAVORABLE

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 16 (CP) — British forces thrusting south from Caumont, 14 miles south of Bayeux, encountered German forces in force two miles north of the village, headquarters announced today.

Headquarters said late in the day that tank battles still raged around the city for Sculles, east of Caumont, and the city of Caen, farther east on the Orne River.

American troops attacking west of Carentan have advanced from 2½ to three miles to the west coast of the Cherbourg Peninsula, the Allied command announced.

Another American column drove to within 3½ miles east of the road junction of St. Sauveur.

30-Mile-an-Hour Wind.

The weather was worse than any since D-Day with a strong wind of more than 20 miles an hour blowing from the northwest onto the beachheads.

A navy officer returning from an inspection of the beaches said that U.S. Battleships Texas and Nevada were supporting American troops driving across the Cherbourg Peninsula and described American navy casualties as "very, very small."

The Canadian troops last night took advantage of a lull on their sector of the front to catch up on the many hours of missed sleep. Yesterday was a warm sunny day and there was little fighting.

The Lieutenant-colonel commanding one battalion in a forward area was able to take a brief sunbath and during one period of the day all the silence he required: "Our fellows figure it's just too quiet today. Maybe it is."

Artillery Active

While the infantry did little beyond patrolling, the artillery was active and carried out shoulder-to-shoulder engagements with German artillery, the action of which is increasing.

In some parts of the front conditions better—battery duels went on all day. As soon as our guns fired their salvos the German would open up, usually with the same number of shells.

Wednesday night was a night of patrolling all along the Canadian front. The patrols found that the Germans working hard to strengthen their positions.

The movements of enemy vehicles also appeared fairly heavy.

Shells from the German six-barrelled electrically-fired mortars were among those falling in our lines today.

Americans Take Quineville.

On the Cherbourg peninsula American forces took Quineville on the northern coast of the peninsula a mile west from it to reach the Senope river.

The English-Canadian thrust, farther south, aimed at cutting the last German communications with the endangered key port of Cherbourg, reached to within three miles of the key road junction of St. Sauveur and within six miles of another vital communications centre, Le Haye du Puits.

Pushed westward from Ste. Mere Eglise, one American column reached Quineville before noon today.

St. Sauveur, where the main Paris-Caen-Cherbourg highway intersects another highway to Cherbourg remains the main objective of the peninsula.

A few miles farther south, American troops engaged German armor and infantry in fierce fighting six miles west of La Haye du Puits, on the west coast highway. Capture of this town would open all roads on the bitterly-contested peninsula.

The Germans threw reserves into the battle in this sector and bitter fighting was in progress with the front line fluctuating back and forth in frequent instances.

For the first time since the battle of the beachhead started, conservative German reports from the sectors where fighting was taking place jibed generally with announcements of the Allied supreme command.

SWEEPING ALLIED ITALIAN ADVANCE STILL CONTINUES

Four Important Towns Are Seized In North, The Largest Being Terni

RESISTANCE COLLAPSES

Rome, June 16 — (AP) — The sweeping Allied advance up the Italian peninsula continues, and the 5th and 8th Armies have taken at least four important towns, it was announced today.

Biggest of the seized towns was Terni, 45 miles north of Rome on highway No. 3, which fell to 8th Army forces. Also occupied were Todi, 19 airline miles northwest of Terni, Narni, seven miles southwest of Terni, and Acquapendente, seven miles north of Lake Bolsena's northern shore.

Organized enemy resistance has collapsed, it appeared, but the Germans would not make a stand until the Pisa-Rimini line was reached.

The Allied communique said the rapid advance continued "all along the front." In the Adriatic sector it said the Germans have withdrawn and "only slender contact has been maintained."

Todi, a road junction on highway 79 between Terni and Orvieto, fell late yesterday to 8th Army forces, the communique said.

Terni is an important industrial and communications centre where highway No. 3 which runs north from Rome, intersects highway 79.

15 Miles North of Orvieto

Eighth Army troops also have advanced 10 miles north of the big road junction of Orvieto, the communique said.

Among the new places mopped up in the swift thrust northwest-ward of C.G.F. Hay was the village of Massa Martana, 16 miles north of Terni.

Independents on highway No. 2 fell to 5th Army troops, operating on the left flank of the Allied line.

The communique also announced that Canadian troops of the 5th Army are nearing the big town of Grosseto in a coastal plain region 32 miles south of Orbetello, 100 airline miles on highway No. 1, which runs from Rome to the coast.

Fighter-bombers strafed five enemy airfields in the vicinity of Arezzo, 50 miles northwest of Terni.

CCF GOVERNMENT SWEPT INTO POWER IN SASKATCHEWAN

43 Members Conceded Elected and Will Be Under Leadership Of T. C. Douglas

SMALL VOTE POLLED

Regina, June 16 — (CP) — The first C.C.F. government in history assumed into power on a landslide vote in Saskatchewan yesterday under the leadership of Thomas Clement Douglas, 40-year-old former Baptist minister who resigned a seat in parliament for what turned out to be the premiership of this prairie province.

The vote left no more than a corporal's guard of the Liberal and Conservative forces which occupied the legislature when it was dissolved by premier W. J. Patterson. Early today 43 C.C.F. members and four Liberals had been conceded election. C.C.F. candidates led in two of the four doubtful ridings and several candidates in the others. The final seat was conceded when one was decided June 24.

The one-sided verdict of Saskatchewan's voters, accomplished by the C.C.F. with only slightly more than half the total ballots cast.

Trend Unmistakable

The election trend was unmistakeable from the early returns which showed Mr. Douglas' following in the city, sizeable margins over the Liberals, and over the Progressive-Conservatives in the rural areas. Independent candidates who failed to win a deposit mounted.

Soon, as concessions began to come in, the overwhelming proportions of the C. C. F. victory were apparent.

Premier Patterson was not certain or his Cannington seat. He had a 10-vote majority over C.C.F. aggressive Conservative candidate but his margin was so-small that he will not be sure of re-election the votes cast by Saskatchewan soldiers overseas. Conservative hopes ing in their home province may be enough to swing the tide against him. These votes will be counted June 19.

Bracken Says CCF Victory in Sask. Protest Against Liberal Leadership

Toronto, June 16 — (CP) — The C.C.F. victory in yesterday's Saskatchewan election was described today in a statement by John Bracken, Conservative national leader, as "a protest against the leaders of Liberalism who in Saskatchewan as well as the Dominion have for many years made the interests of the party, rather than the interests of the state, their primary concern."

Text of the statement:—

"The result is not unexpected. I prophesied it six months ago. It was inevitable that the C.C.F. party would have won with even more decisive majorities. The C.C.F. party has not won five years ago had the Social Creditors not come into the contest and split the protest vote.

"The result was a protest against the leaders of Liberalism who in Saskatchewan as well as the Dominion have for many years made the interests of the party, rather than the interests of the state, their primary concern. Many Liberals voted C.C.F. because of the Liberal party machine and even more Progressive Conservatives voted C.C.F. because of that machine would be overthrown.

"It was not a victory for Socialism for the reason that the background of the C.C.F. in Saskatchewan was the Progressive movement of 30 years ago. As that movement disappeared through lack of vigorous leadership, many agrarians became C.C.F.-ers. They had not become Socialists, and many of them are not Socialists now.

"What has happened in Saskatchewan is no different from what has happened in the federal by-elections of last year and in Ontario 10 months ago. It is a protest against politics rather than Liberal doctrines, which lost the confidence of the people because of their failure in the federal field.

"The issue may be drawn from these political sign-posts of the last 15 months: Shall we continue with party first are on the way out. Reform is on the way in. The Canadian people will soon be forced to choose between our national approach to problems and the Socialist approach. Personally, I have no serious doubt about how they will choose the national way."

Toronto, June 16 — (CP) — Premier Drew of Ontario today made the following one-sentence comment on yesterday's C.C.F. victory in the Saskatchewan election:

"Developments in Saskatchewan were somewhat different to those existing in other parts of Canada, the result of yesterday's election should end any complaints about the threat of National Socialism in this country."

New Mannerheim Line Cracked by Red Army

Moscow, June 16 —(AP)— The Red army has smashed its way through Finland's "New Mannerheim Line," one of the last barriers on the way to the important seaport of Viipuri, it was reported today.

A Red Star dispatch said the new Mannerheim line was a tremendous fortification, with four lines of walls, made of concrete and steel and anti-tank blocks almost two yards high, with a double belt of an anti-tank mine field 20 yards wide and strewn with German mines.

A great gap has been cut in this line, and is now in places Soviet tanks and artillery, as well as infantry, are streaming beyond it, the dispatch said.

Maj. Konstantin Shvankov, Red Star correspondent, and the first western to get through the new line, said that behind the tank blocks the Finns had built an elaborate system of "concrete-and-steel pulbs, with" steel and concrete platforms for anti-tank rifles, machine-guns and mortars.

The trenches are connected with bullet and bomb-proof shelters about 30 feet deep, reinforced with steel and concrete covering on the sides, with room inside for 15 men.

"The Finns considered the new Mannerheim Line impregnable, like the Red army," Shvankov wrote.

Army dispatches today said the fall of Kuuterselkae with the new Mannerheim line running from the southwest to the Gulf on the east, deep in swamps and forests.

A quarter-mile away from the trenches the Finns had three additional lines of tank blocks built around steel shelters.

Red Star said the Soviets smashed the line at the Gulf of Finland coast and also captured an important railway junction.

The new line was broken by artillery and concentrated pounding by bombers.

Dispatches said the Finns defended the second line much more fiercely than the original line.

The Soviet press is building shortly to hold the Russians back from Viipuri itself. The Red army is not under-estimating the battle which it faces. Its struggle for the second Mannerheim line is far harder than the fight for the first line, in which the surprise element aided the Soviets.

Moscow reported "it is an interesting note that according to the testimony of captives who told the Russians about the new Mannerheim line "that a construction began on the day when Finnish representatives in Sweden raised the question of peace negotiations with the Soviet Union. On that day (Dr. Juho K. Paasikivi took off for Moscow (Reid marshal) Mannerheim ordered the construction of the line."

This information caused new and immediate indignation in Moscow.

Can be Used as Potential Bases for Super Fortresses to Raid Japan

MODERATE CASUALTIES

Pearl Harbor, June 16 — (AP) — American troops advanced against Japanese tanks, artillery and suicide tanks on the Pacific island of Tokyo at Saipan in the Marianas—potential base for the B-29s which raided Japan yesterday.

Covered by battleship guns and rocket-firing carrier planes, the invaders were reported early Wednesday, moving in from behind Susupe, on Saipan's western shore, Harbor.

They were placed in reports covering action through Thursday with in five miles of Garapan, Saipan's major town of 1,000 population.

"In general, fighting is heavy but good progress is being made against well-organized defences," Admiral Chester W. Nimitz announced tonight.

Battleships and cruisers, opening up with their guns after carrier planes knocked out Japanese shore arm Marianis air force Saturday and Sunday, also were in the fight, Japan coastal batteries and anti-aircraft opened up.

Shells of the warships and rockets fired by planes and infantry landing craft momentarily curtained the troops moving ashore.

Casualties Moderate

"Initial reports indicate our casualties are moderate," Admiral Nimitz said. Tokyo radio claimed, without confirmation, the invaders last week had 3,000 casualties and lost 40 landing barges.

Today's Japanese communique, heard in New York, said an invasion force of "about two divisions" now is "directing its main strength in the Mariana area."

Saipan is relatively flat, adaptable for the Super Fortresses which bombed Tokyo and Yawata Thursday on Japan's industrial area.

Saipan's value was stressed the invasion commander, Vice-Admiral Richmond Kelly Turner, who expect opposition for the first time in the Pacific amphibious campaign by mobile artillery, has asserted that lightning victories in the Marianas may not be duplicated at Saipan.

Tried By-passed

If the landings are successful, they promise to leave the enemy the choice of two bases of Truk as well as uncounted thousands of Japanese troops hanging helplessly on the dead ends of a severed life line.

According to the United Military estimates the grand scheme of Pacific conquest of which the Saipan landings are the result, calls for a series of huge jumps to the coast of China, by the forces of General MacArthur and Admiral Nimitz.

SUPER-FORTRESS RAID ON JAPAN OPENS NEW ERA

Tokyo Admits Industrial Areas of Moji and Shimonoseki Hit

TREMENDOUS MACHINES

Washington, June 16—(AP)—The first task force of the mighty B-29 Superfortresses lost no planes to enemy action in yesterday's raid that hit industrial targets at Yawata, Japan, it was announced today.

Two planes, however, were lost through accidents, the War Department said in the second communique issued on the Allied strategic aerial assault against the Japanese mainland—made from these bases.

A communique issued by headquarters of Gen. H. H. Arnold, chief, controlling the operations of the Superfortresses around the world, was based on preliminary and incomplete reports from the combat zone.

The formation was described as "tremendous" in operational size from recently-completed bases in China.

After a long silence on yesterday's attack, the Japanese Imperial War Department announced tersely that the B-29s had appeared in the China-India-Burma theatre, the Tokyo radio finally acknowledged the attack on areas of Moji and Shimonoseki were hit. They're In Big Way

Then early today the enemy broadcast to put a letter face on things.

It said:—

1. The the Super-Fortresses approach was detected two hours before dawn. That seven of them were shot down and three damaged.

2. That Japanese air forces and ground installations suffered little damage; 4. That fires which started in several places were put out.

The uncoafirmed Japanese version placed the scenes of admitted bombings in the Yawata area (Moji is on Kyushu island and Shimonoseki on Honshu island).

A statement by representative Joseph Starnes (Dem., Ala.) to the House of Representatives that great destruction had been wrought in Japan's war industry and may have knocked out a fifth of the empire's total production for the year's raid on Yawata, the Pittsburg of Japan.

The world's most powerful planes made the longest bombing flight in history and left trains of demolition bombs burning in the Imperial iron and steel works at Yawata in northern Kyushu.

Canadians Participate In First Daylight Bombing Attack Since Group Formed

AMMUNITION DUMPS HIT

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 16. (AP)— The Allied aerial offensive against German targets swept on today after R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. heavy bombers delivered a heavy night-attack on the great Pas-de-Calais rail junction yesterday plastering 12,000 pound bombs on Boulogne and Calais and the minesweeper pens at Boulogne.

The R.A.F. and Canadian Mosquito daylight raid on Le Havre yesterday, the first Canadian participation in a major daylight bombing attack since the Canadian bomber group's formation 18 months ago.

Meanwhile it was announced that the Germans, in a desperate gesture against Allied air superiority, had begun hurling pilotless bombs against England's southern coast. R.A.F. bombers struck at the Nazis' big ammunition dump in Rennes Forest last night.

As the aerial assault in support of the Normandy beachhead rolled on this morning, the German radio reported hostile aircraft approaching the Austrian provinces of Carinthia and Styria.

Big British and Canadian four-engined Lancaster bombers, with their fighter escort, hit the French Channel port of Boulogne first at 11 p.m. (4.30 p.m. E.W.T. yesterday—just before dusk.

Other British heavy bombers, continuing the attack into the night, hit railway centres at Valenciennes and Lens and a fuel dump at Chateau-Arnoux, Fourteen bombers—including three R.C.A.F. craft—were lost in the Channel area operations, while Allied night intruder planes destroyed four enemy aircraft and damaged another in the air.

The evening and night operations took place in daylight hours, with specified targets in western Germany. Those bombs were a thunderous follow-up to yesterday's daylight operations. Escorted and attacks by an armada of 1,300 United States heavy bombers.

In addition to the American heavy bomber blows, supreme headquarters announced that R.A.F. and Allied planes were made by Allied planes yesterday in direct support of ground operations in Normandy. Many of those were flown by planes based in France.

The daylight attack by heavies struck at France from the Normandy battlefields as far south as Bordeaux. All of these nights' operations three heavy bombers, one Lancaster and two Mosquitos are missing, headquarters announced, with at least 30 German planes shot down.

More enemy raiders were seen crossing the southern English coast last night than in any night since the start of the invasion.

Self-Destroying Aircraft Fly At Terrific Speed

Suggested Planes Might Be Jet or Rocket Powered

(By LEWIS HAWKINS, AP PRESS STAFF WRITER)

London, June 16 —(AP)—Flame-spitting pilotless planes drove into southern England today and Thursday night in the Germans' first "secret weapon" reaction to the invasion of France.

These craft, exploding on impact or close to it, caused deaths and considerable damage at scattered points and sent anti-aircraft guns barking extensively in daylight for the first time since the early blitz days of 1940.

Descriptions of the weapon varied considerably but all agreed that these self-destroying aircraft flew at terrific speed in a straight line, were marked by bright lights, and shot flames from their exhausts—suggesting they might be jet or rocket-propelled.

The lights presumably were to aid in radio control, probably from piloted planes at a great distance.

The German communique said only that southern England and the Greater London area were attacked with novel weapons and "super heavy" explosives were dropped.

Special Broadcast by Germany.

A special note broadcast after the communique of the High Command said: "There is hardly one German who will not receive this news with greatest satisfaction. The feelings of hatred and a burning wish for retaliation which dominate the German people have been kindled by our enemies in their terror crimes."

The Ministry of Home Security ordered civilians to stay away from the pilotless aircraft, which explode five in 15 seconds after landing.

One correspondent telephoned this word picture of the pilotless craft:—

Look Like Spitfires.

"The planes have a distinctive, unmistakable note, giving the effect of a pulsating, low throb. They are much smaller than a Spitfire but their appearance is much the same.

"They really are midget planes. But at night they have a distinct yellow glow at the rear and in the night of one they streamed a long black smoke can be seen being carried from them.

"Many of them have been observed in daylight and on several occasions they have been followed by a disregard of danger, have dived into the air when fire around them attempts to make a kill."

As the guns were alerts and the all clear, alternated over southern England, the flying bombs arrived intermittently, but business went on without interruption.

Home Secretary Herbert Morrison told the House of Commons today that these remote-controlled planes were first used Tuesday night, and that one fell again last night and one today.

While he was speaking, southern England shook to light and heavy anti-aircraft guns and rockets barking and at least one plane was shot down.

More enemy raiders were sent crossing the southern English coast last night than in any night since the start of the invasion.

Britons More Curious Than Concerned Over Hitler's Pilotless Planes

By ALAN RANDAL

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, June 16.— (CP Cable)— Britons, unperturbed by Germany Hitler's newly-disclosed secret weapon, are more curious than concerned, calmly, just as they stood up to the air blitz of 1940 when the Nazis first unleashed promptly dug out tin hats, which have not been seen for months, and went about their business.

The pilotless plane is hardly a new development, although its use in the war is.

Britain had a radio-controlled aircraft known as the "Queen" before the war. The name was immediately revived in reference to the new German weapon by people reporting one of the pilotless planes had "passed overhead in Southern England with the words: 'Queen Bee' on its wings."

One girl in a food shop said— "Mother always said there would be seen from our window today—they have been flying around like that for days. It's one ace and the barrage is terrific"—

Use by the Germans of pilotless planes against the German surprise weapon of the last war—the long-range gun which fired shells into Paris—is also a reminder that the Germans may have evolved some automatic device by which the body can fore the take-off or to control the plane remotely."

758 Belleville Boys Regularly Receiving 'Fags'

Kinsmen Club to Hold Tag Day to Keep Fund In Operation

Belleville boys overseas are serving in various units of the Canadian armed forces scattered from the Atlantic to the Pacific across this vast Dominion. Their welfare and comforts matters not whether a Belleville boy is serving with a British Columbia unit, stationed in Italy, a Nova Scotia infantry regiment in England, a member of a paratroop outfit in Normandy, in the Air Force of Labrador or in the Navy guarding and transporting troops the world over he still reads the Canadian cigarettes with which to keep up his morale. And it is through the kindness of the Belleville Kinsmen Club "Fag Day" tags that the necessary funds are provided our fighting forces.

A student of the Kinsmen fag fund list recently by Chairman Buster Ladbury disclosed a total of 758 Belleville boys are regularly being supplied with cigarettes through the club's efforts, solely through donations received on tag days. Each tag is given liberal and accepted knowledge that a package of Canadian cigarettes is duly preceded in the armed services "mustn't by" the next news from home. With this thought in mind the Kinsmen Club of Belleville has set out to collect sufficient that on Saturday they are bolstering up the fund with a Fag Day. Tags will be given directly to the operation of the fag fund. And remember one dollar sends a Belleville boy serving in the globular war sheets an 88 tin.

Statistics show that Belleville has given more than 55 ships of the R.C.N. aside from the few who are found in vessels with the Royal British Navy. Belleville's sons have also enlisted in the Air Force, Paratroopers, all branches of the Army, including Artillery, artillery, anti-aircraft, provost corps, Ordnance, Signals and every branch of the land service from foot-sloggers to mechanized units. They are battling Hell and High Water in every major theatre of this war and upholding the name of Belleville. On May 24th last to Ceylon to Ste Near East, Italy and Normandy, to say nothing of the Pacific area.

These fighting sons of Belleville and Canada look homeward for regular supplies of cigarettes and other forms of smokes that are so urgently needed by our armed forces. It is with these few thoughts in mind that President Matt Currie of the Belleville Kinsmen Club has made an appeal to the citizens for the wholehearted support of the Kinsmen Fag Fund tag day on Saturday. Remember one dollar sends the cigarette to a Belleville boy serving overseas, regardless as to what unit he is attached, in the navy, army or air force.

Railway Fare Offered As An Inducement

An added inducement of return railway or bus fare to the locality where needed, is being offered by girls in the Belleville area to spend their summer holidays in farm work camps in the fruit growing districts of the province. The demand for help in the fruit districts and in the canning plants this year has never been more acute than this summer and Belleville girls are asked to apply through the Ontario Farm Service Force to receive the best work-vacations.

Although already several girls from Belleville Collegiate and from the local area have gone to the fruit and vegetable growing district for the summer months, this week Principal W. H. Hunter of the local high school received a cable from Mr. Alex McLaren of the Ontario Farm Service Force indicating that hundreds of girls over fifteen and a half years of age are still needed. The return fare to the district of Burlington and Oakville for the city girls remain until the opening of the fall school term.

Ontario Farm Service Force officials point out that this is an extraordinary opportunity for young girls to be out in the open for the summer months. The work is pleasant and the supervised camps provided for the accommodation of the workers have comfort advantages and other facilities. Ample periods are provided for recreation.

Any young girl in the Belleville district over the required minimum age limit who feels sufficiently interested in the work may obtain full information regarding the camps and working conditions from Principal Hunter at the Belleville Collegiate. Complete arrangements regarding transportation and camps can be made from the local collegiate.

POLICE BLOTTER

A girl's bicycle, found abandoned behind the Glen Roy Creamery on Pinnacle St., was turned over to city police by the creamery people.

A "peeping Tom" was reported loitering about the premises at 196 East Bridge St. late Thursday night. Police hastened to the scene in the motorized patrol but no signs of the intruder were in evidence.

Maj. B.C. Sisler Given Command Of Argylls With Rank of Lt. Col.

New Commanding Officer Has Had Fine Military Career

Major B. C. Sisler, M. D. former second-in-command of the 141st (R.C.) Battalion, Argyll Light Infantry, has been appointed to command the battalion with the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel, according to official notification received by Lieut.-Col. Lt.-Col. Sisler succeeds Lt.-Col. Harold Pliny who is retiring this month.

Col. Sisler has had an outstanding military career since joining the 30th Battalion, C.E.F. on May 17, 1915. As a "boy" private of the front line fighting troops, he served in Belgium and France after completing his training, for two years.

Evidence of military adaptability is seen in the fact that he won his lieutenant's commission on the field in February, 1918. The exciting life of a pilot of the Royal Air Force absorbed his fancy for a time and he transferred to that branch of the service where he remained until the end of the war.

Returning to Canada he joined the Peel Regiment on re-organization of the militia, subsequently transferring to the Simcoe Foresters.

Came to City in 1934.

Coming to Belleville in 1934, he again transferred to the Argyll Light Infantry. In 1940 he was appointed second-in-command of that unit. This year, Col. Sisler was awarded a short course after where he earned his qualifications for his new rank. In 1942 he was awarded the Efficiency Decoration symbolic of twenty-eight years of efficiency and service in the army.

The new O.C. of the Argylls has not, however, confined his activities solely to military affairs. He is one of the founders of the Kinsmen Clubs of Canada having served as the first club in Hamilton in 1920. He is a past chairman of the Ontario Council of Education and at present is chairman of the Belleville Kinsmen Club Committee, also district commissioner of the Boy Scouts of Canada.

Col. Sisler takes over command of a regiment that is rich in military traditions. Its origin stretches back to 1822 to the old Hastings Militia. Since 1920 it has been in the present Argyll Light Infantry regiment under command of the late Lieut.-Col. Archibald Proctor.

Sgt. Kent Reported Overseas.

From that time until the First Great War, it served creditably efficiently under commanding militiary calibre. During the last war, it, like a number of other units, did its share of service as a whole but sent hundreds of officers and men to the ranks of the line battalions. Among these were the late Lieut.-Col. Jas. Sisler, and 59th Battalion.

Militia reorganization in 1920 saw Lieut.-Col. Proctor Vandewater in command. He held this post for seven years and was succeeded by Lieut.-Col. Eric Keeler who commanded the regiment until 1932. He was followed by Lieut.-Col. A. E. Green who served until 1936. At this time the further reorganization saw the regiment created as the 141st Argyll Light Infantry (Tank).

Lieut.-Col. Bev. Gribble assumed command and held office until the post was taken up by Lieut.-Col. Eric Keeler who commanded the regiment until 1943 when he was succeeded by Lieut.-Col. H. J. Donnan, who recently relinquished command to the new commanding officer.

Belleville Kinsmen Sponsor District Club at Tweed

Second of three district clubs to be formed this spring through the expansion efforts of the Belleville Kinsmen Club, the Tweed Kinsmen Club received its charter on Thursday evening when representatives of the area clubs gathered at the Hayek Hotel in Tweed to hear Jerry Quinn of Belleville as the new president. The Charter was officially presented to the Tweed club president by Past President Jack Knechtel, J. F. "Jerry" Knechtel, while S. H. "Shanty" Hamilton, General Secretary of the Belleville club, officially installed the Tweed officers.

Headed by popular Jerry Quinn the Tweed Kinsmen Club at its charter night meeting gave every evidence of being a live wire, with plans for the bettering of community facilities in that centre already being reported as underway. Personnel of the club totals approximately 25 business and professional men who are enthused over the service possibilities in their own community.

Tweed Officers Installed.

Other officers of the Tweed club who were officially installed were Carman Aston, as vice president; Harold Boyd as treasurer, and Miller Johns as secretary. Directorate members are K. A. McNeil, Francis Foster and R. A. Wood.

As president of the sponsoring club, "Matt" Currie of Belleville presided over the charter night meeting and introduced the officials from national headquarters. Kinsmen from Belleville, Napanee, Campbellford and Marmora attended the meeting with presidents of each club being heard briefly in expression of good wishes. Secretary of Tweed read a sheaf of telegrams from other Kinsmen clubs across Canada.

In presenting the charter to the Tweed club Past President Jerry Knechtel complimented the Belleville club on its expansion program which this year has seen three new clubs formed. The expansion program presented at the last International Kinsmen headquarters was virtually in the bag for Belleville, he said. Twenty eight new Kinsmen clubs had been formed in Canada this year.

Pride in Service.

Following there was a golden service opportunity for Kinsmen clubs in the smaller community as represented by the service was not measured by population. Tweed would be a big club with members of its Kinsmen club, he assured. The charter was not presented, Gordon the president, it was stressed, but to all club members who must take pride in service to their community.

Addressing the meeting following his official taking over the gavel from Matt Currie, President Quinn contrasted the small town service club with the club in larger centre, indicating that even more scope could be found in the meaning of fellowship. He pledged a good club with Jerry Knechtel club. In closing he expressed the appreciation of his members of the Belleville club for the efforts in sponsoring the Tweed club.

In their capacity as sponsoring club, Belleville members presented the Tweed club with pictures of the late King and Queen as a measure of their esteem and good wishes. The presentation was made by Carl Ellis.

2,176,800 CIGARETTES

TO BELLEVILLE BOYS OVERSEAS

752 Boys Now on Fag Fund List Overseas on Land, Sea and Air Forces

• A Message From Our President to the Citizens of Belleville and District

At the end of September, 1941, the members of the Kinsmen Club of Belleville undertook, as part of their War Service Work, to send cigarettes weekly to the Belleville boys who are serving outside of Canada's shores with the armed forces, or who are confined to enemy prison camps. Our first shipment went forward on October 6th., 1941, and not a week has been missed ever since until now we have sent in excess of two million cigarettes. Our list comprises close to eight hundred names.

The thousands of letters and cards we have received from the boys overseas tell us that, next to food and letters from home, cigarettes are their greatest desire. It is not only the smokes themselves but the link with home and the knowledge that they have not been forgotten even although they have been away from those they love for years that gives them a "lift" often when it is most needed. We now have entered the most critical stage of the war. Many of our men are in the battle lines, others are awaiting the signal to go forward. Now, more than ever, are the comforts and thoughts of home needed, now, more than ever must we resolve that not one week shall pass without our cigarettes being sent.

This week the Kinsmen are appealing for funds with which to carry on this great work and we hope you will heed our call. Our annual FAG FUND tag day is to be held on Saturday, June 17th., and we hope that you will look upon this as an opportunity to do something for those who are doing so much for us. When you purchase your tag will you please remember that every dollar we get will be used to purchase 300 cigarettes for someone you know, for, after all, this is a Belleville project for Belleville boys.

And, now a word to those who would like to make a special donation to our fund. Remittances may be given to any Kinsmen whose name appears on this page or may be mailed to either Post Office Box No. 248 or No. 250. They will be gratefully and promptly acknowledged.

Yours very sincerely,

MATT CURRIE,

President, Kinsmen Club of Belleville.

New Air Giant Raids Japan

With the course of the war in smashing Japan's fleeting empire in the Pacific what it is, Thursday's assault on the Japanese mainland by what has been called new fighting giants of the air in a world roaming organization in the form of the American B-29 Super Fortresses has added something to the anxiety of Japanese which the Allied leaders calculate and definitely and confidently forecast will speed up the demolition of Japanese tyranny and treachery. The steadily increasing attack heralded treacherously at the American and British democracies in December 1941 has now this new great reality to consider. What the nature of the blows at Japan or the targets, whence the Super Fortresses came and whither they went was not told in the first brief statement from Washington but later it was stated the planes came from the China-India-Burma theatre and that Tokio suffered heavily.

The mainland of Japan was hit. This was the second time. Back in April 1942 General Doolittle raided Tokyo and Japan was excited.

So Japan, the treacherous, is the first to feel this giant's blows. It was the first the world knew of these was the U. S. Army Air Force 20th Bomber Command. This was its first fighting duty.

The explanation by General H. H. Arnold who has the new fighting force under his personal direction makes it very clear what the enemy has to fear from such a visitor as the Super Fortress. As General Arnold says, "The employment of the B-29's makes possible the softening up attack on Japan very much earlier than would be possible with aircraft hitherto known to combat."

General Marshall, chief of U. S. staff, points out with the enormous range and heavy bomb load "they can strike from many and remote bases at a single objective." From this he said that the new weapon of the skies is so great in strength that the organization will not be confined to a single theatre and will hence be "under a single command" and that their aid in directing their bombing throughout the world."

The flexible centralized control will be a powerful agency for delivering blows at the enemy with maximum effectiveness.

The future of the Axis Nations is not a pleasant one for them to think over. The new air giant with its wide range and in its use with "maximum effectiveness" spells unprecedented blows.

Thursday's visit of the Super Fortresses to Japan marks a new phase of the war. Events are moving swiftly in the Allied assault on the enemy Germany and Japan. A little over a week ago Rome fell and since then the Germans have been fleeing before the United Nations armies in Italy. Ten days ago the Allies launched their offensive in Western Europe against Germany and now comes this news which has stirred the Allied world of the second assault upon Japan. How something mightier than was used hitherto is in the skies for "bombing operations throughout the world."

Once again the Allied Nations have achieved success. Their air supremacy is established. German and Japanese inferiority in the air has been seen for a considerable time.

The Allied Nations have the cause of right, they have the enterprise which shows itself in their free spirit and even in their engineering skill. These are some of the factors that are bringing the nemesis of Japan and Germany.

For a Peaceful World

The President of the United States has called for the creation of a worldwide organization of all the nations that love peace to maintain peace and security and has expressed his judgment that this should be backed by force if necessary.

For this he would suggest an international organization comprising all the peoples that love peace, a council elected annually by these nations, to include the four major nations, Britain, United States, Russia and China and "a suitable number of other nations" and an international court of justice to deal primarily with disputes of an international character, capable of settlement.

The world through the smoke of battle of this present struggle looks longingly to security that will endure when victory has been won and tyranny and aggression are trodden down. That has been the hope of ages and now the time seems approaching for an organization that will have the power and will to make peace permanent, settle international disputes and so prevent wars. Today the feeling is universal among the peoples of nations that peace when achieved with victory must be defended by force if necessary. Today the peace-loving nations are the nations that are banded in the United Nations, those who are bearing the burden of humanity in having to fight against tyranny and aggression of militaristic Germany and Japan. On these Allied Nations who are now fighting for the peace and security of mankind feel that they have the right and the duty to see that never again may nations led by a Hitler or a Tojo or a Mussolini throw the world into war.

Black Ducks Hatching

(Trenton Courier-Advocate)

Within a mile of the Trenton boundaries, just a few yards from the shore of the Trent River, the ducks are nesting. In a few weeks they will lead their broods to the water and will seek safety and shelter in the rushes along the river, or slip out by the mouth of the expanse of the Bay of Quinte. The black duck, which is not black at all but a dull brown, is one of our largest and best known wild ducks and falls as easy prey to the sharp hunters early in the fall. Its meat is delectable and much sought after. On its nest, its color blends so well with its surroundings that only a person with eyes trained in nature lore can very well detect its presence.

Springtime of the Spirit

(Daily Mail, London)

If there had been no war on, this weekend would have been a very notable anniversary—the start of the London "season," marked, as that always used to be, by the opening of the Royal Academy Exhibition. From that we should have looked forward to Ascot, Henley, Goodwood; to Henley Regatta and Cowes Week; to the Flower Show, the Horse Show, and the Tattoo. Today these must be but nostalgic memories, but they will be revisited in force for their return. Some will say: Why should they return, since we are now better devoted to sterner purposes? The answer is that the London "season," so called, is just a state of mind round, the play-time or display-time of the rich and would-be fashionable. It was the season of general rejoicing, of the springtime spirit.

Its events gave us all a renewed and stimulating joy. Teh war has largely and inevitable starved us of beauty. Travel restrictions, austerity, and the blackout deprive us of color and variety in our lives. They deprive us, and post-war planners should not forget to see that post-war England os "Merrie England" once again.

Inquisitive people are the funnels of conversation; they do not take anything for their own use, but only to pass it on to others.—Steele.

ANCESTRY

Some would know what lies ahead;
Others search the dusky past,
Wondering whose, among the dead,
Are the shadowy hands they cast.
Who the weak ones and the strong
And the foolish and the wise,
Sharing all the right and wrong
Of this morning's enterprise?

Why so quick of temper, I?
Why so stubborn now and then?
Can it be in years gone by
These were traits of father's men?
Why this love of field and stream,
Bird and bee and blossoming tree?
Did some kin of mother's dream,
And pass dreaming on to me?

There were those who sailed the sea—
So my father often told—
Loved on oceans vast to be
In the long gone days of old.
Now, the sight of moving ships,
Canvas spread, and golden sand
Thrills me to my finger tips,
Though I'm bound unto the land.

Who is prompting me today
From some long forgotten grave
From my task to slip away,
Or to spend what I should save?
Who gives counsel, now and then,
And resolves what I shall be,
Lives in me, and will again
In some one who follows me?

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

JUNE 16th, 1924.

The United Empire Loyalist Celebration was officially opened to day by His Worship Mayor W. C. Mikel, the main mover in bringing about the great event. Hundreds of spectators were present on the terraces at the Court House. The grounds and walks there were gaily decorated and as the Citizens Band played the band of the Argyll Light Infantry played pathetic British and American airs. The Mayor made an excellent address in opening the proceedings and other speakers were Lt. Col. S. S. Lazier, Warden Rollins of the County of Hastings, Lt. Col. Roscoe Vanwelkner, Hon. Edmund Bristol, K. C., Colonel Ryerson, Mr. W. S. Morden, President of the United Empire Loyalist Association of Canada and Brigadier General E.J. Westcott, Assistant General of the State of New York, who represented Governor Smith of that state. The celebration of the 40th anniversary of the settlement of Upper Canada by the United Empire Loyalists is now well underway and it is sure to be a happy and enjoyable affair.

Belleville Block is looking up these days. New sidewalks are being laid in all parts of the city, the cement works are rapidly nearing completion, the rolling mills are about to commence rolling and the lock factory requires many more employees, which seem difficult to get. From this it would appear that brisker and brighter days are dawning for this city and all on the bay.

Major J. R. Orr of Madoc was in town to day.

Dr. Robert A. Moore, New York City, is home on a visit.

Mr. H. Kennedy left to day for Winnipeg to assume a position in the C.P.R. offices.

The Hon. Mr. Mowat left of this city, member of the Canadian Senate, died in Ottawa yesterday. He attained to the great age of nearly ninety years. Senator Flint was born in Elizabethtown, York County, on February 8th, 1806. He came to Belleville in 1820 and his career here, at Bancroft and Bridgewater, as storekeeper, saw and grist mill operator and other business ventures is well known. He was of great benefit to Belleville during many years by his business operations in which he employed hundreds of men. He was the first president of the Board of Police, Belleville; town of Belleville; Mayor of the town in 1861; reeve of Elzevir for twenty-one years; warden of Hastings County in 1873. He sat for Hastings County in Canadian Assembly from 1847 to 1851, when he was defeated. Later he sat for Hastings in Canadian House from 1854 to 1857. He was called to the Senate by Royal Proclamation in May 1867. In politics he was a Liberal. For twenty-one years he was superintendent of Bridge Street Methodist Church Sunday School and for over seventy years he was a leading member of the church. The funeral will take place from the home of the Misses Holden, George Street.

CLOTHES EXCHANGE BOON TO MOTHERS

London, June 16. (CP)—Wartime necessity in England has developed a scheme that will be welcomed after the war to aid the mothers of large families.

It is the children's clothing exchange opened by women of the Women's Voluntary Services where mothers of children who outgrow their clothes before they are worn out can bring them for other clothing. The plan is spreading and applications for requests are made to continue the scheme after the war.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK

By R. J. SCOTT

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

Explorers used to eye the giant fir trees of the western coast admiringly and speculate about their use. However, it was not until British Columbia came into the Confederation in 1871 that the lumbering industry gained impetus. The workers in the forests, popularly called loggers, never lumberjacks, which is the name given to the workers on the other side of the Dominion.

Of all the loggers the high-riggers had the most hazardous job. He had to climb the spar tree, the tree to which the machinery for gathering and loading the logs was attached. Then he had to limb and detach all limbs and foliage. The difficulties of this job may be best imagined when one's mind dwells on the fact that the great trees—firs and spruce—shot 150 to 250 feet in the air. Then, logging was a winter operation and it is practical to carry on the work almost every month in the year.

As the century grew older, the loggers changed from the reciprocating handsaw to the crosscut saw, by one or two men, to the band saw. This improved implement was invented by a London mechanic, and was soon in common use. Then came axe to the donkey engine, and planed the boards at the same time. . . . Then, as the century drew to a close, the saw, a primitive type appears to have been used in the Mediterranian times, according to drawings on ancient monuments, was brought into use. Saws were of flint were attached to wooden handles. In the south seas the natives sharpened and played saws or notched shells or shark's teeth.

The first millionaires and nuns who came to Canada were pleased with the spinning wheels. Many of the industrial arts of the studies were able to produce handicrafts. Among the Canadian Indian girls had a special talent for embroidering with fine fish skin threads, they used moose-hair, caribou-hair, and porcupine quills, bordered tanned buckskin chair covers, and other articles such as moccasins and jackets.

Soon after the landing at Quebec the patient teachers had drawn up a programme of studies which that included needlework, painting, housekeeping, cooking, weaving, knitting, music and other fine arts. Much of this programme of the Indian women of the Indians when they returned to their tribes to become teachers in their turn.

Old folk songs brought over from France by the first settlers delighted French-Canadians for more than two hundred years, and now they are pleased to find that the Indians also love to sing them. Thomas Moore, the Irish poet who composed "The Canadian Boating Song", wrote enthusiastically about them in his diary. But it was not until down voyageur airs were collected and published by the Hudson's Bay Company that the world awakened to their acquaintance with folk songs of early Canada.

A recent movement to collect records of the French and Indian songs at the Canadian Folk-Song and Handicraft Festivals met with great success.

MAYFAIR WOMEN LEARN TO COOK

London, June 16. (CP) — The women of Mayfair thought they knew the war's rigors when they were compelled to queue up for their food, but when the government called up many of them for war work and they took their families to eat in restaurants or did strange tricks with the wartime rations trying to cook themselves.

Husbands have grown tired of bad food and many of them are sending in letters asking for a school—to learn to cook. Some are saying bachelors had better days (about $3.75) a lesson to teach their wives how to cook economically with so little to use.

The teachers say that some of Fun and what answers they give and of expensive schooling, didn't know even the rudiments of cooking.

BRITISH HOUSEWIVES ARE READY FOR WAR

London, June 16. (CP)—A great number of British housewives gave active assistance to the defence of Allied armies for the invasion.

They are grandmothers, young girls, and housewives, who worked for weeks packing "invasion" stores.

More than 215,000,000 articles were packed and many will be shipped wherever any unit of the army needed spare parts for its military equipment.

These women working in barns, fire halls, schools or any building that could accommodate them left the line of production to work with preservative and packing. It is a carefully balanced army unit.

Manufacturers who made the parts for the stores also spare labor to pack the articles as carefully as experience in bale and bulk has taught they must be packed.

5 Cabinet Ministers Left.

Seven of Mr. Patterson's cabinet ministers stood for election and five were defeated. Highways Minister Proctor was re-elected in Monoton and Maj. E. M. Culliton, Minister without portfolio, ran second to a C.C.F. candidate in Gravelbourg but may possibly win out on the basis of the soldier vote.

The extent of the C.C.F. victory is indicated by the legislative standing of the province: Liberals 23, C.C.F. 15, Social Credit 2, Unity (National Reform) 3, Vacant in the 1938 election the Liberals elected 16, the C.C.F. 10, Social Credit two and Unity two.

At 6 a.m. E.D.T. today—with 2,140 polls still unreported—the compilation by The Canadian Press showed the C.C.F. had obtained 102,- of 368,023 votes cast, or about 53 per cent. The Liberals 39,128, Conservatives 25,684, Conservatives 42,483, and various other candidates 2,-

Parallels Sweep of 1934

In the last election, in 1938 the total vote was 440,373 with the Liberals receiving 203,270, the C.C.F. 82,568, the Conservatives 52,306, and others 104,969.

Thursday's victory was paralleled in Saskatchewan only by the Liberal sweep of 1934 when they elected 50 members to the legislature, which then had 53 seats instead of the present 52.

The legislative seats again will be raised to 55 when Saskatchewan servicemen and servicewomen serving outside the province have their members-at-large later. The armed forces' ballot, by the present law, has not been completed. One service official said that the ballots of men serving outside Saskatchewan and Newfoundland; one for the United Kingdom and one for the invasion forces in France; and one for service personnel in the Mediterranean theatre.

Since 1905 when Saskatchewan became a province there have been six Liberal administrations. The conservatives have never formed a government since but the other Saskatchewan administration before the present one was a coalition headed by a conservative, J. T. M. Anderson between 1929 and 1934.

Washington Spotlight

By C. R. BLACKBURN

(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

Washington, June 16. (CP)—It's a young man's war but when it comes to peace, in the United States, are men who were no longer young when the First World War ended.

Probably the same could be said of other Allied countries and it may be changed there in years to come.

But now United States peace planning is in the hands of President Roosevelt, Secretary of State Cordell Hull, and other leaders who form a bi-partisan advisory committee on post-war problems. Most of them are more than 60 and Hull is 72.

They have drafted a world peace agreement which they have put forward as a basis for discussions with Britain, Russia and China—discussions which may begin in London in the near future.

It is not a public document but it is known to follow generally the pattern of the League of Nations.

President Roosevelt said all available ideas, including some of the lunatic fringe" had been considered in drafting the plan. He revealed that some ideas that seemed on the lunatic fringe a few years ago were now generally accepted.

D-Day Sobered Strikers:

When D-Day dawned in the United States there were 1,000,000 labor strikes in progress. Next day the number dropped to 400,000. On D-Day plus two there were nine and seven-tenths strikes to go and even where it remained to the end of the week. That seven-tenths was 7,000 workers, an all-time low for the war.

Refused $50,000 A Year Offer

(By Malcolm W. Bingway, of the Detroit Free Press)

I was offered $50,000 a year if I would go on the radio. The offer was made by then Police Commissioner Gen. Frank Hines. I wanted to get himself elected mayor. It was after a bitter argument with his old friend John Dodge, financial backer of Dodge Brothers automobiles, who had told Jim that he could not run. Jim had threatened to run anyway.

"Money was no object," said Commens. "I don't care if it takes millions. You're going to win that argument with John Dodge."

"I want you to be my political manager."

He handed me a blank cheque. "Fill out what amount you want and it's yours," he said.

"No thanks," I said. I admit I gulped.

"Wouldn't fifty thousand interest you?"

"No, Jim," I said, "I couldn't get that much interest. I'm not built for a newspaper man and will always remain one. I've been in politics for too many years from the critic's seat to have any ambitions to get on the other side. Besides, I'm set aside, knowing your temperament as well as I do myself, I know I would be shooting at each other within two weeks."

All this was vastly puzzling to Mr. Commens who could not understand my attitude of mind. I never bothered explaining it. Commens could write regularly then Mark's secretary. George Engel and I argued with Eddie at least for an hour to make him ask $75,000 a year. But Eddie in those days did not believe there was that much money in the world and when Commens came back in many a figure he gasped out "twenty-five thousand." Eddie grabbed at it and quickly that Eddie went out and I blocked him off all around the block for not following our advice.

ARKANSAS TOOTHPICK

The Arkansas toothpick, also called the Bowie knife, first came into the public eye when about the time Texas won her independence from Mexico.

Its invention is generally attributed to Rezin P. Bowie, a member of James, Jamie Bowie was born in Logan county, Kentucky, in 1796 and was taken to Louisiana by his parents when he was a small boy. From 1818 to 1820 he with his brothers Resin and John, was engaged in smuggling slaves into the United States from the headquarters of Jean Lafitte on Galveston Island.

According to Daniel W. Jones, governor of Arkansas at the turn of the last century, the Bowie knife was taken to Arkansas by James Black, a blacksmith living at Washington. Hempstead county, Arkansas. In James Bowie, while in that place, asked Black to make him a knife after a pattern which Black had made. After that, when anybody wanted a knife like Bowie's." It was in this way that the Arkansas toothpick originated.

Between Santa Anna stormed the Alamo on March 6, 1836, the body of Bowie was found lying covered with dead Mexicans and the knife made by James Black was clutched in his hand.

That Bowie had such a knife with him when he died is confirmed by "Col. Crockett's Exploits and Adventures in Texas," a book published in 1836 and supposedly written by David Crockett.

The new President, Mr. Marlette spoke briefly to the gathering, thanking them for their confidence in Men. He expressed his deep interest in the Sunday School and the desire that he might successfully fill the position as president.

"The Home", the subject of Christian education, was the theme for the evening address by Rev. McLean. Let us make our homes, schools of Christian learning, stated Mr. McLean.

Members of Bataws Sunday School contributed music during the evening. There were solos by "Nobody Cares" by Mrs. Jack White and "An Evening Prayer" by Mr. Harry B. Sweet.

The session was closed with prayer by Mr. Kenneth Stewart of THOSE TWO SONS OF OURS.

Two little boys with dark brown hair,
Brown eyes and pearl-white teeth.
Two little boys with never a care
Who skies or they played beneath.
Two little boys went off to school,
And that time quickly passed
Then off to work each morning they went,
A job they had landed at last.
Then they heard their country's call,
"We are needed", they said one day;
They pondered their going, then
Knew young men.
And to each day they marched away.
"Don't worry", they said, "if we never come back",
Oh that was a sad good-bye!
"Don't worry", they said, "because we know
We'll meet in the sweet bye and bye".
They met the enemy face to face,
They played their part full-well,
What hardships they met with
No one will ever tell.
But God is with them always,
In all their darkest hours,
No longer bye'e'ward is war
Than those two sons of ours.

Trinity Women's Club Holds Monthly Meeting

Madoc—On Tuesday afternoon, about fifty members and visitors of the Trinity Women's Club were guests of Mrs. Pinnock at her home in the Ox-Horn neighbourhood.

The hostess delighted her visitors with stories of local history as they strolled about the old mill and along the stream. Mrs. Pinnock's father, the beautiful June foliage of natural furniture in the forest, and the spirit of friendly interplay, afforded perfect relaxation and enjoyment to all.

After wandering through the old home and viewing many pioneer relics, all gathered under the trees on the lawn, and were served a picnic lunch.

A program followed. Mrs. Hulin read a poem "A Prayer for Victory". Mrs. Pinnock favored with several piano solos. After a sing song, Mrs. Beatty conducted a number of contests. The president, on behalf of the members, spoke words of appreciation to Miss Muriel Smith and Miss Marion Mutton for their co-operation as members of the club, and wished them happiness and success as they take up their work in new schools in September.

A motion of thanks on behalf of the club was moved by Mrs. Mac MacDermid to Mrs. Pinnock for opening her home and the meeting was closed with the National Anthem.

Canadian WID In Royal Box

London, June 16. (CP)—For A.W. Miss Bowen was a dream come true when she sat with the Queen and the Princesses at a symphony concert in Albert Hall.

The former Montreal girl, member of the R.C.A.F. Women's Division was invited to share the Royal box along with two Australian flight sergeants and a British wing commander.

A.W. Bowen was given but an hour's warning after being selected from a list of "the honor from A list of R.C.A.F. airwomen. The occasion was the 25th anniversary performance of Sir Henry Wood.

Mrs. Vincent Massey was in the adjoining box and pointed out the celebrities to the thrilled Montreal girl. Later on, at the interval, the Queen spoke to her, asking where she was from and exchanging impressions on the concert.

"I nearly made a faux-pas - by entering the box before Her Majesty after the interval", said A.W. Bowen.

HEADACHE

Headache is a symptom common to a great number of diseases. Headache occurs in most of those disorders in which there is fever, in fact, any acute infection in adults starts with a more or less severe headache. In most cases

A very different variety of disease that may cause headache is chronic kidney inflammation and high blood pressure, as well as hardening of the arteries. On the other hand, a headache may merely indicate some simple nervous disturbance, or an impaired digestion. Then, that is, one which is turned sideways in the jawbone and has not come through the gums. Acute sinus infection, eye strain, poisoning of various types, and brain tumor, are among other well-known causes for pains in the head.

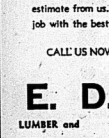
The pains which result from sinus infections are usually felt in the area of the sinus which is involved. For example, if the infection is in the frontal sinus, the pain will be felt in the middle of the forehead. If it is in the maxillary sinus, the pain may be in the upper part of the cheek. Coughing, stooping, or straining, as well as bending over the area, will make the pain worse. In ethmoid sinus infection, the pain may be felt behind the eyes or over the brow bone. Nothing is worse in the morning and tends to improve after the person is up about the headache from eyestrain comes later in the day, after use of the eyes. This one fact may help to distinguish these two types of headaches.

Inflammation of the eyeball such as glaucoma or iritis, which is an inflammation of the colored part of the eye, also may cause severe headache. On the other hand, troubles with vision may also give headaches; but just by causes a person has some visual disturbance does not necessarily mean that headaches come from this cause. However, when a search is being made for the cause of headaches, the eyes should not be neglected.

Not all headaches start within the skull. For example, the muscles of the scalp may become inflamed, or there may be neuralgia affecting the nerves of the scalp. Aching in the back part of the head and neck may be the result of keeping head in a tilted position. Headache may come when the intestine is overloaded. It is not thought that the headache in such case is due to the absorption of poisonous or toxic material, but rather from the pressure within the intestine. Glandular disturbances tend to produce headaches as a result of their effect on the circulation.

The person with headache in each case is to find out what is causing it. It is only then that treatment can be intelligently directed toward producing a permanent cure.

Buckwheat No. 2 (Rice Coal) Becomes Class "B" Fuel



Ottawa, June 16. (CP)—The Munitions Department announced today that Buckwheat No. 2 (Rice) coal has been transferred from Class "C" to Class "B" fuel by an amendment to the coal regulations affecting Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes.

The transfer, resulting from a prospective shortage of blower coal, means that this type of coal now may be bought only for burning in equipment in which no other type of fuel can be satisfactorily used. Such equipment includes magazine-type heaters and anthracite stokers.

BRINGS HOT MEALS TO FLIERS

Flying men of the R.C.A.F. who guard convoys for long hours at sea in aircraft not provided with cook's galleys may eat hot meals as a result of a new metal food cabinet designed by the air force engineering and medical branches. The flight surgeon and sergeant (above, left) are helping themselves to a tempting meal kept hot in the cabinet. The box is plugged into the aircraft electrical circuit and the food, prepared on the ground, can be kept hot indefinitely. As shown in the other picture, deep pockets dished out for the food and a removable grid ensure the shifting of the containers. The thermos bottle, hold the liquids, soup, tea or coffee. Two smaller boxes carry all the required foods that need not be heated. There is enough space for two complete meals for one man. On long patrol flights or on other extended operations hot meals from the cabinet will ease strain and raise flagging spirits.—(R.C.A.F. Photo.)

The Marry-Go-Round

How To Treat A Woman.

"How would you treat a woman if you were a man?"

This opening question was asked on an all-woman radio program, but the answers were very vague. Do I have anything to say myself on how today's woman wants to be treated.

She wants to be treated like a mental equal—but she also likes to be treated like a pet. She wants to be regarded as an independent individual—and still to be "taken care of" with tenderness and gentleness. And that's a pretty large order for any man.

The way of a modern with a maid would puzzle King Solomon and fill him with wonder. Honestly, it would baffle him. This is what I once wrote, long ago, and it still holds good.

"Behold, the lover of yesterday was filled with doubts and subtlety and applesauce. But the lover of today is filled with assurance and nonchalance and HOT AIR!

"With much finesse did the lover of yesterday seek the way to a damsel's heart. But the lover of today makes no detours For in his bright psychology the shortest distance between two points is that between the introduction and the clinch.

"The lover of yesterday starred the GIRL and approached her with flattering tributes and burnt offerings. He prayed at the devoted. But the lover of today dashes up in his motor-car with the blowing of horns as one who would say 'Attention, Woman! Look who's here!'

"He wastes no words in extolling her charms and virtues and telling her how wonderful she is. They verify. He puts up a good SELLING talk. He tells her how wonderful HE is.

"His line is not 'Love me—or I suffer!' But 'Love me—or you'll be sorry!' He does not say 'Oh, Beloved, thy kisses are sweeter than myrrh and frankincense and warmer than the song of a crooner!'

"Nay, he commends his own kisses, saying 'The kiss which I now give thee is no amateur product, my sweet, but the work of an artist who knows woman. Yes, it is de luxe! He calls her attention to his technique; he hints at his popularity among women. He fills her with propaganda.

"Verily, verily, in the time of Solomon, the lot of a maid with a man may have been mysterious.

"But the way of a man with a maid, today, is the way of an inspired book in large print. A good prospect. Yes, courtship hath become SALESMANSHIP!"

SELAH.

The foregoing is not given as a sample of the way a modern woman wants to be treated. But a little of the old-time chivalry is always appreciated. Men who marry fly are amazed to see how it works.

The June moon has its charms; but like romantic love, it lasts such a little while! Whereas a good old practical electric lamp, like a good old, solid affection, never fails you.

It may be a girl's dream, but the average man hasn't much use for the "home" which consists of nothing but a bunker, a pair of scotties and a lot of period furniture.

The usual looking-glass, like the usual husband, has no heart when it comes to telling a woman the brutal truth. That's why the beauty-parlor mirror and the "wolf", who are more flattering, get in so much fine work.

It is foolish to plan a long honeymoon trip these speedy days; it is so apt to run right over into divorce.

Nothing makes a man's muscles so weak and flabby as to marry a girl who carries her own grips, fits things for herself and likes to put up a tent.

When a man kisses you with that abstracted air and that faraway look in his eyes, what he sees is not the June moon but the invitation in another girl's eyes.

These are good fishing days — particulary matrimonial fishing. But remember that while the big thrill is the nibble at the bait, the real test of skill consists in landing your catch.

A man used to think it only proper to tell a girl that he loved her before kissing her; but nowadays he feels that it's only prudent to assure her; that he doesn't love her before permitting her to kiss him.

If marriage is a lottery, love must be a crap-game, judging by its eternal appeal to man's gambling instinct.

The three greatest enemies to romance are jealousy, onions and time! And the deadliest of these is time.

Silkworm to Factor Unemployment As Subtitutes Grow

By JEAN THOMPSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The shops are full of new "substitutes" for last summer clothes. Colors range from delicate pastels to riotous tropical shades, whether of dresses, slack suits or bandanas. Cottons and gaysprigs forth in the yard, tempting the home dressmaker. Warm weather fads for cooler clothes—fabrics though new still carry with them a touch of the familiar.

"Of course real silk is off the market and may not return; manmade silks are beginning to resemble the silkworm's product so closely. But there was a day when silk was not the average woman's fabric simply because scarcity made it both unprocurable and tremendously expensive.

In the days of the Roman Empire silk was literally worth its weight in gold; the material being sold by weight in exchange for an equal weight of gold. One emperor actually refused to buy his wife a silk gown on the ground of extravagance.

Queen Bess was the first glamor girl as far as silk-clad legs are concerned. Before her time stockings were made of cloth, the king's being of yard-wide taffeta. One of Queen Elizabeth's ladies-in-waiting gave her a pair of knitted black silk stockings as a New Year's gift. Her Majesty was so delighted that she determined to wear no more cloth stockings.

From Other Lands.

Often the name of the fabric itself gives a hint of its origin and leads a touch of far away. Muslin, for instance, got its name from Mosul, capital of Iraq, a great trading centre in the 16th and 13th centuries. Calico takes its name from Calicut, India, and damask from Damascus.

The gay head kerchiefs of the modern girl developed in part from the bandanas originally a richly colored yellow or white spotted silk handkerchief. Bandana is the Hindu name for the method of spot dyeing.

Chiffon soft-draping and flatter-ing, is a French word meaning rag, while chenille widely used in housecoats and bedspreads is another French word meaning caterpillar.

The earliest chintzes patterned in typical Indian floral and tree motifs traveled in trading ships around the Cape of Good Hope to decorate the drawing rooms of European and colonial ladies. The cotton plant is native to India and the beautiful flowered material took its name from the Hindu word colored or variegated.

TEEN-AGE MARRIAGES MAKE WARTIME SPURT

New York, June 16. (CP)—The war has greatly increased the number or marriages of boys under 20 and among both men and women over 30, and of men in The Statistical Bulletin of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co.

The proportion of older brides for teen-age boys rose, to 1943, by 31.6 per cent, but among boys marrying at 16 and 17, more than half married older women. This tendency dropped with each added year, and among the 19-year-olds only one-quarter married older partners.

BELIEVES ALLIES FACE GREAT TEST IN ROMMEL LINE

Noted War Correspondent Writes of "Second Atlantic Wall"; Set Some Miles Inland From Nazi Coast Defences

Here is a story by Larry Allen, noted Associated Press war correspondent who has just returned from Germany, analyzing the reports he has heard of the Nazis' "Second Atlantic Wall" where the Allies may face their bigest test.

By LARRY ALLEN

New York, June 16. (CP)— The world may know soon how long the war in Europe may last. For Germany's High Command says the supreme test will come when the Allied armies hit the "Rommel Reception Line".

That's the name given to the great beation upon which Nazi Germany bases her hopes of repulsing or holding the Allied invaders.

It's the "Second Atlantic Wall".

As I got the picture from Germans and from the German press while in a German prison camp, this is a powerful chain of "command forts" stretching from Ghent in Belgium to Rennes, due south of Cherbourg. This was the area in which the Germans expected attack but as Rennes lies principally connects with Brittany peninsula defences.

I cannot say positively that it was not propaganda, although it did not fit the usual pattern of campaigns to boost home morale or confuse the Allies, but here is how the Germans described the line:

It is composed of vast fortified ground, heavily fortified defences, bristling with thousands of heavy guns and mazes of anti-tank traps.

At its nearest point it is less than 30 miles and no more than 80 miles inland from the Atlantic coast.

It runs from Ghent to Arras, Beauvais, thence slightly west of Paris along the Seine river, thence southward to Argenton and finally Rennes as the southernmost end.

Inspected by Rommel.

A few weeks before the Allies formed the Fortress of Europe" General Field Marshal Erwin Rommel thoroughly inspected the "Second Atlantic Wall".

He told German newspapermen: "Here the enemy shall not pass. This will be the supreme and crucial test. Every one of these positions must be and will be defended to the last man".

Rommel, ace master of defence for Nazi Germany and nicknamed "the desert fox" because of his brilliant exploits in North Africa, is supported in this view by Western Commander General Field Marshal von Rundstedt.

Even Reichminister for Propaganda Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, writing in his newspaper, Das Reich, last month, finally admitted that "we cannot stop the enemy from landing but we can and we will stop him after he has landed".

Germany's "Second Atlantic Wall", with much accent upon its alleged invincibility, has been topline news in German newspapers ever since the last of April.

Whitehall Notebook

By SYDNEY GRUSON
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, June 15 (CP)—Who should sign the peace treaty for Germany when the Nazis are licked? The House of Commons had some talk on this nebulous point in the recent foreign affairs debate.

Conservative Maurice Petherick thought it ought to bear the signatures of Hitler and others mainly responsible for the war. Labor's Ivor-Thomas recommended Hommel as one of the signatories.

If Hommel was still regarded as the "darling of the nation" when his armies are beaten in Europe, his signature should be on the armistice so he wouldn't have the chance afterwards to preach the legend of a stab in the back by Jews and Socialists, Thomas said.

The case of the Bevin Boys blew up in Labor Minister Bevin's face when a London magistrate refused to warn 19-year-old Edward Cox that he must obey the ministry's summons to serve in the coal mines.

Briefly, the trouble had been growing this way: Many boys who have been tentatively accepted for the navy, merchant marine or R.A.F. received their mine draft before their service call-up. Many refused the ministry order to report to the mines. They were fined or imprisoned. The ministry then sent a circular to magistrates suggesting adjournment of such cases to give the boys a chance to change their minds. The magistrate in Cox's case simply dismissed the case against the youth, who was a first-class cadet in the R.A.F. training corps, without setting a date for rehearing.

Other magistrates followed suit, refusing to register conviction. At that point the war cabinet took the matter under review.

Their decision was to keep the plan in its present form and appeal when magistrates refuse a conviction.

The government has accepted a check on legislation by order-in-council. In doing so, it yielded to a parliamentary request by all parties.

Home Secretary Herbert Morrison announced formation of a "scrutinising committee" to keep watch on rules and orders made by ministers. If the committee decides they go beyond the spirit of the act allowing such legislation, it has been empowered to send for ministers and records to aid its deliberations.

Canadians Made Up Entire Force Raiding Cambrai

London, June 16 (CP Cable) — Canadian bombers made up the entire attacking force which blasted railway yards at Cambrai and St. Pol, near Arras, in northern France, last night and the airmen reported seeing brushes with Nazi fighters. Two Canadian bombers failed to return.

Every squadron from the Canadian bomber group was represented in the fleet that followed — R.A.F. Pathfinders to drop tons of explosives on the area which the Pathfinders had lighted with flares.

The Ghod squadron used Canadian-built Lancasters on the attack and the crews praised their aircraft.

Several hours earlier two Dornier 217s were destroyed by R.C.A.F. Spitfires which covered R.A.F. Lancasters on their first dusk bombing mission to France.

Sqdn. Ldr. H. W. McLeod, D.F.C. and Bar, of Regina, Sask., who commanded the Spitfire squadron was credited with destroying one of the Dorniers. Name of the other victorious pilot was not announced.

Three Canadian squadrons were led personally by their commanding officers—the Leaside by Wing Cmdr. J. K. MacDonald, Antigonish, N.S., the Iroquois by Wing Cmdr. H. R. Dow of Toronto and the Thunderbird by Wing Cmdr. E. C. Hamber of Hamilton, Ont.

FO. Jim Kinnear of Vancouver, summed up the Cambrai attack with the observation "what we went there to hit we could hit for fair" as he counted 40 flares revealed the ground details."

Canadian Mosquitos also were in action. The Air Ministry announced that FO. M. Simms of Vancouver and Sqdn. Ldr. Robert Klipp of Kamloops, B.C., downed two enemy planes last night.

New Statement Of Faith Ordered By Gen. Assembly

Toronto, June 16. (CP) — The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Canada today rejected a proposal of Rev. N. Mc-Eachern of Toronto, that Presbyterians, Baptists and United churches co-operate in publication of Sunday School lessons.

Rev. A. C. Cochrane of Port Credit, Ont., said he preferred the purchase of lessons from the United States rather than accept the work of any "joint committee".

The Assembly ordered a new statement of faith of the church in Canada to be prepared by a committee of seven. It will be sent to Presbyteries throughout Canada and will be discussed at the 1945 Assembly.

An amendment to the Board of Education report recommended that endowed lectureships be established in the two Presbyterian Colleges in Canada—Knox in Toronto and Presbyterian College in Montreal—to bring outstanding world figures to lecture on church history. The amendment was approved.

Wednesday night the Assembly decided to continue negotiations with McGill University at Montreal for the establishment of a joint faculty of divinity to replace the Anglican, United Church and the Presbyterian Colleges in that city. Developments will be reported at next year's assembly which will reach a decision.

Capital Closeups

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Regina, June 16. (CP)—It had to happen:—All Saskatchewan provincial election meetings started with "O Canada" and closed with "God Save The King". At one Moose Jaw political meeting the sponsors blushed for a moment when the National Anthem appeared at an unexpected moment.

When a collection was being taken, lively records were played over the loud-speaker system.

Suddenly, the tune was "God Save The King". As the anguished operator rushed to change the record, puzzled members of the audience came to feet, clutching their collection money.

Scar:—The land is green and people have money but harsh memories linger. The "hungry 30's" were mentioned on hundreds of platforms during the election campaign. Ways of avoiding a recurrence of poor prices and disaster due to drought were discussed by every candidate.

Decoration:—G. E. Goble, Progressive Conservative candidate in Southern riding, honors the best traditions of the fourth estate. He is correspondent for a Saskatoon newspaper in his home district. Faithfully and fairly he reported the meetings of his Liberal and C.C.F. opponents.

Veteran: Hon. James G. Gardiner, Federal minister of Agriculture, brisk in movement and vigorous in phrase, took a glance down the years when he spoke during the campaign. It was thirty years ago this month that he was elected to the Saskatchewan Legislature. Then he met a young man who was superintendent of rural telephone lines. When Mr. Gardiner went to Ottawa in 1935, that superintendent, W. J. Patterson, became premier of Saskatchewan in his place.

(BBC Press Service)

I should like first to say a word about the work of the air crews of Bomber Command in general. It is quite clear that to fly a heavily loaded bomber, at night, under all sorts of European weather conditions, through enemy defences, through fighter fields and into heavily defended zones is a job calling for the highest qualities. Moreover it calls for continuous and cold-blooded tenacity to be exercised over a period of six to eight hours. The risks of the bomber crews' job are not matters of a moment, but are accepted with the knowledge that they will continue over many months of flying. The bomber crews' work entails both nervous and physical strain of a very high order, over a very long period. This work, moreover, is carried out mainly by comparatively youngsters.

The bomber offensive itself, which theegreves make possible, is, of course, a modern method of waging war by comparatively new effects both on the war production of the enemy and his morale. The bomber offensive strikes at the seat of the trouble, that is, at the Fatherland itself. It has already destroyed a very large part of the enemy's industrial capacity. The effects of this destruction are already reflected on the Russian front. What is more, the German people are beginning for the first time in their history to realise that crime doesn't pay. The war has, by the bomber offensive, been brought to their own doorstep. Their nerves are being undermined, and their morale shaken.

The success of the bomber offensive does, however, depend upon the accuracy with which it strikes. The earth's surface is made up mainly of open spaces. Bombs cannot, therefore, be aimed wildly. If they are to achieve the destruction of the Hun war machine they must be placed accurately. This is not achieved by wishful thinking alone. Bombers have to face European defences, sometimes by night in face of guns, dazzling searchlights, smoke screens, dummy towns, dummy fires and every trick the Huns can devise and carry out their unprecedented scale with a force of three or four million Germans. Moreover, the bombers were equipped only with those old-fashioned instruments with which we knew before the war then, in the majority of cases, it would be nothing more than a waste of time. The air ministry, therefore, made sure the bomber offensive more effective, took steps to form a Pathfinder Force. This was in the summer of 1943 and on the 18th August of that year the Pathfinder Force was created. The scheme was simply to take some of the most experienced crews of Bomber Command and put them together in one place where they would receive special training and would work under a unified operational control. They were to be given the best of modern scientific equipment and the means of marking the aiming point. Equipped thus, they would then go out and mark the target for the main force to bomb. It was a big change and one which carried with it certain disadvantages as well as its obvious advantages.

It was obviously a loss of some additional risk over that of the averages aircraft. It called for special efforts. That the policy was right is, however, now a fact clear to the whole world, and is proved by the results which have been achieved by the bomber force. The aircrews in pre-Pathfinder days did a magnificent job, but in face of the prevailing conditions it was too much to expect them to achieve the high degree of success which is required if the Bomber Offensive is to be really effective. They did wonderfully well and are to be congratulated, but the results achieved have been manifoldly greater since scientific precision and the Pathfinder methods were adopted.

Let me tell you something of this Pathfinder Force. The first and most vital factor is the human element. The whole success of the Pathfinder Force depends primarily upon the individual aircrew members in it. I would like to make it clear, however, that they are not members of a separate organization, but are in fact, the representatives of each of the main Force Groups of Bomber Command. They are selected by their own Squadron Commanders and sent along to the Pathfinder Force as that Squadron's representative. They are then chosen for their ability particularly in navigation and for their tenacity. They are made up of Britons, New Zealanders, Rhodesians, Canadians and Australians and men from the Allied Nations. All as individuals are equally good and equally welcome. These personnel as a rule come to us already made up into complete crews and in the majority of cases they remain together as such. Occasionally it is necessary to reshuffle crew personnel in order to make up better teams. As a rule, however, they continue to operate as a crew and merely continue their training in the Pathfinder Force, they are not introduced to Pathfinder methods. They learn the rudiments of these devices and then pass on immediately to their own squadrons in the Pathfinder Force. In this way each squadron in the Pathfinder Force is fed from one Group of the Main Bomber Force of Bomber Command. Their advanced training evolves then continues as they progressively qualify for more difficult and exacting duties in the Pathfinder Force at any time is a complex mixture of crews, qualified for different tasks of varying degrees of difficulty.

An intermixture of these crews forms the force which leads the offensive that night. Each crew has its particular function to perform. The whole plan of attack is carefully timed and each aircraft must do its job. Reliability, accuracy, precise timing, and above all, a spirit of tenacity right down to the last little detail are the vitals of a successful target marking procedure. The care with which every order is complied with is obviously of the utmost importance.

Another aspect of Pathfinder Force technique is the detailed staff work which is necessary. A modern large scale bomber attack at night against the extensive and intricate defences of Germany is a matter of the greatest complexity. In particular the marking entails the most detailed planning, meticulous preparation of aircraft, and of their complex mixed bomb and marker loads, and finally it requires a very exact understanding on the part of the aircrews which can only be achieved by the most careful and precise briefing by Squadron Commander. It is like a jigsaw puzzle: sure where all parts gradually fit in together to form the whole.

Unfortunately I cannot, for security sake, tell you the details of the devices which, as I say, are known to the Germans as "Boffins" — I don't know why, and I am not sure that "Boffin" means. They are a race of their own, and are men of whom the British people should be very proud. Their achievements speak for themselves. They have produced more means of waging modern warfare than in any other war. They have done so without any elaborate facilities and without very much appreciation. In fact, their only appreciation is the pride in themselves who have had the advantages of their work. Admittedly, like all scientists, they have to test the results of their creative genius eternally under development, but have in all cases allowed their devices to be put through the mill and them send put into practical use with good success and very considerable horror of their creators, have been whisked into service in the Pathfinder Force, all of which we knew before the war then, in the majority of cases, it would be nothing more than a waste of time. The air ministry, therefore, made sure the bomber offensive more effective, took steps to form a Pathfinder Force. This was in the summer of 1943 and on the 18th August of that year the Pathfinder Force was created. The scheme was simply to take some of the most experienced crews of Bomber Command and put them together in one place where they would receive special training and would work under a unified operational control. NAVAL FEINT MADE BEFORE D-DAY DRIVE

Allied Correspondents With Invasion Navy Stage Big Rehearsal Disguised as a Security Measure

By ALLAN NICKLESON
(Of War Correspondent.)

With the Invasion Fleet, June 16 (CP) — Allied correspondents attached to the invasion navy got off to a false start before history's greatest armada, got underway. It was organized as a security measure and a means of working out problems to be unmarred before H-Hour.

Possibly it was just a coincidence, but it is a fact that a few hours after naval correspondents gathered at the Admiralty in London, Luftwaffe raided a port where some of them were spending the night aboard ships of the invasion fleet.

This was apparently a reconnaissance raid although a few bombs were dropped. The visiting planes were assigned to one of that area's fiercest barrages of the war.

The correspondents' home gatherings of naval writers and an invasion port raid probably was probably by Allied Intelligence. It was known among the newspaper fraternity that such a public display of battle-readiness sometimes was arranged purposely with the question of security and possible information-leakage in mind. Later, the real call to invasion came in secrecy, and correspondents had expected very few realizing they had departed on anything but another rehearsal. The "False Start"

The rehearsal began with a call to each correspondent asking him to report at a certain hour the following morning. Correspondents scheduled to accompany the forces were divided into groups.

Escorted to a large conference room they were told bluntly that this was an information-seeking false start. Then press liaison naval spokesman explained, for example that those correspondents who were in the habit of visiting local pubs for a beer or two would be missed by the acquaintances; conjecture would be that the "big show" was about to start.

When the correspondents returned within a few days they presented without a hitch an astonished exit rumor would not run rampant the next time the big writers disappeared.

As an example of the attention drawn to the mass array of fully-equipped correspondents gathered outside the Admiralty in full view of passing crowds, an English correspondent told the spokesman that the taxi driver took one look at the assemblage and said:—

"Blimey, Gov, is the big blow going to start?"

Full Equipment Issued.

Following the meeting correspondents were issued sea-going gear — such as duffle coats, sea boots and white heather mitt gloves to serve protection against gun flashes. Then, they were transported to Portsmouth ports and into groups to stay the night aboard ships.

Enroute to the ports they passed long lines of vehicles and while bobbing waiting to be taken aboard vessels, and saw at least one prisoner-of-war pen under construction.

One group boarded a small landing craft which nosed through the harbor area depositing correspondents on various infantry ships. There wasn't one mishap as the transportation, some of them comparative land lubbers, scrambled down rope ladders from the bobbing deck of their transport.

I shared a cabin with a captain of marines and, being interrupted by the roar and swoosh of shore guns and rocket batteries, we paced the deck watching Nazi flares falling. Every anti-aircraft gun on every ship in harbor was manned but not fired because the Nazis steered clear of them.

Next morning on the bridge, with the aid of the captain's glasses, I watched an invasion exercise that included most of the types of landing craft employed in the actual landings. There were infantry landing craft, and all the other varied types of small boats that go to make up the armada. It had the They began their journey when by the acquaintance; conjecture would be that the "big show" was about to start.

U. S. Ferry Pilots Take Novel Moniker

Watson Lake, Y.T., June 16.—(CP)—The flying fraternity all over the world has its own peculiar organizations and vocabulary. But perhaps the most unusual is at the northern outpost where the uninhibited stars to bewildered fashion at a sign in the operations office which says: "W.F.A.—Watson Lake Chapter".

The W.F.A., the curious are told, is the Nose Pickers Association. ("Nose picker" is strictly a flyers' gibe at those absolutely acceptable in aviation circles.) The association is for the U.S. Ferry Pilots and just like the now-famous "Short Snorters", has its own rules.

To become eligible for membership, a pilot must have "picked his nose" at a station for at least three days while waiting for weather to break or for repairs to his plane. But to be accepted into full N.F.A. membership, he must submit to the Association a "nose picker", carved by himself in wood.

Results are hung up in the Operations Office and produce keen rivalry as to the wood-cutting capabilities of the pilots, the finer carving one answer to the many hours they must while away when "weather-ed" in.

H. Armstrong, Former Triple Champ, Flattens Bummy Davis In Second Round of 10-Rounder

Goes Into Record as Technical Knockout as Referee Stops Bout

$58,822 GROSS GATE

By TED MEEKER
Associated Press Sport Writer

New York, June 16 — (AP) — Henry Armstrong still is one of the best fighters in the business. The former triple champion dropped a stunned Bummy Davis with a flattening Al (Bummy) Davis-one-round victory over lightweight champion Bob Montgomery—in less than two rounds at Madison Square Garden.

A crowd of 16,084 (gross gate $58,822) acclaimed as hammerin' Henry from Los Angeles battered the Brooklyn bad boy to the canvas four times, twice in the first round, before Referee Frank Fullam stopped it after 69 rounds of the second stanza. It went into the records as a technical knockout although Davis was stretched full length, flat on his face.

From the start Armstrong, a master at fulfighting, pinned Davis against the ropes.

Wearing and ducking, Armstrong kept throwing lefts and rights to Davis' head and body for the first two minutes. Then, unexpectedly, he stepped clear and cocked a hard left to the pit of Davis' stomach. Bummy's knees sagged.

A crushing left and right crumpled Davis to the floor. He got up at eight, was counted out, and knocked through the ropes. He just managed to get back inside the ring as the bell bang. Many thought he had been counted out.

In the second round Davis went down again. He started to get up at two, but changed mind and hit his face as Fullam called a halt.

"I felt pretty well," explained Armstrong later. Both he and Davis weighed 134 pounds for the scheduled 10-rounder.

BOSTON RED SOX ONLY HALF GAME BEHIND LEADERS

Tex Hughson Wins Ninth Victory of Year Defeating A's 5-1

YANKEES BEATEN

By the Associated Press

Boston Red Sox joined St. Louis Browns in running the longest winning streak of the season when they defeated the Philadelphia Athletics 5-1 yesterday to win their ninth straight victory.

Tex Hughson, Red Sox ace righthander, gained his ninth victory to bring the total of the league leading Brownies. Hughson thus ties Hal Newhouser of the Tigers for the most victories in the American League. He allowed the Athletics six hits.

The New York Giants defeated the Brooklyn Dodgers 9-2 at night to move into a tie with the Cincinnati Reds for third place, Mel Ott smashed his 17th homer in the first inning of the night game.

Washington made it three out of four over the New York Yankees, with Mickey Haefner outpitching Ernie Bonham 2-0.

Rookie Paul O'Dea's single in the 13th inning gave Cleveland a 3-2 win over Detroit.

Pittsburgh defeated Cincinnati, 1-0, scoring the lone run in the 10th inning on Bill Salkeld's single and Jeep Handley.

The Philadelphia Phillies came from behind twice to win from the Boston Braves, 4-3, on Ron Northey's single with two outscored Jimmy Wasdell, who had doubled to start the eighth.

SYRACUSE CHIEFS FINALLY REACH BOTTOM OF LOOP

Now Tied With Newark Bears for the Lowly Berth

LEAFS WIN

By The Associated Press

Syracuse Chiefs finally hit the bottom of the International League standings last night when they dropped 6-2, for their 19th setback in the last 24 games.

They are now tied with Newark Bears, each having won 18 games and lost 36.

Jim Konstanty, winner of eight games, second high in the loop, dropped his sixth decision, largely because of six Chief errors, while Royals five unearned runs.

The league leading Jersey City Giants divided a pair of games with the Rochester Red Wings, the Birds winning the first 3-0 and the Giants taking the second 4-0. Veteran Bill Trotter outpitched Jersey's Andy Hansen in the opener, while Brundell, making his first start after being sent on option by the parent New York Giants, limited the Red Wings to four hits in the nightcap.

With Jimmy Grundis making four hits, including a home run, the Toronto Maple Leafs trounced the Baltimore Orioles, 14-4, to spoil the Bird's chance of going into first place. Al Jarlett won his ninth game of the year to take honors in that department.

Toronto, June 16 — (CP) —It doesn't seem to fall, but when you write that something is the oldest, youngest, biggest, smallest and so on, in the country, something always pops up to go it one better. Which is what happened in the case of this corner's comment on the Toronto Lawn Tennis Club, which claims to be the oldest in Canada and held its 68th anniversary June 10.

Now an old-time tennis fan crops up in Winnipeg to say that the Peg Club has been in operation at the site since 1885—nine years before the apparent formation of the Toronto club and longer, the Canadian Press adds. The Manitoba Lawn Tennis championships were held in 1885, so the club probably was formed before that.

The same fan says it is his opinion that the Victoria Tennis Club is the oldest in Canada. The first tourney was held there in 1883, and records show the club was formed in April, 1886. That, apparently makes it one year younger than the Winnipeg outfit.

The whole thing may cause as much research as the hockey Hall of Fame did.

Versatile Virtoso!

Lou Lullo, former star football centre from Winnipeg and eminent shower room baseo, has blossomed forth as a song writer, reports Herb (Winnipeg Tribune) Manning. Lou fathered a little ditty called "waiting," that was sung by Miss Gwen Bradshaw over a National Network.

Herb adds: "From all reports Mr. Adelman's 'waiting' was a pretty good effort for a start, with its very successful message about young ladies waiting for their young gents to return from overseas."

Lou also has dramatic abilities, as he proved earlier this spring at a Winnipeg Press Club meeting. He was just wasting his time at football.

All Bets Off:

Next thing we know the bookies will be forming a "society for the prevention of cruelty to and misunderstanding of swindlers" by bookmakers." They've been getting a bit of a kicking around recenly in Toronto and Vancouver. One unfortunate had a wing broken at Toronto's Dufferin Park the other day, when he was forcibly "ejected" from the premises. In Vancouver the coppers are carrying the war right to the enemy's home grounds, as they stand guard in pool rooms, cigar stores and other Joe's places where the bookie operate during race meets. It's getting so now you have to pay your way into the track so you can lose into an honest dollar.

MARINES REMAIN UNDEFEATED IN SOFTBALL LOOP

Take C.N.R. Team Into Camp With Bill Anderson on Mound

ALEMITES WIN

Stephens - Adamson "Marines" alone remain undefeated and leaders in the Belleville Minor Softball League challenge for their fourth consecutive victory at the expense of the C.N.R. Railroaders in the first game of a twin bill played at the Exhibition Park Thursday night. In the nightcap affair Alemites downed the Columbian Squires 12 to 2 to move up in the league race. The Marines triumphed 8-2 over C.N.R. in the opener.

With Bill Anderson hanging up his second consecutive win and hurling a four-hitter against the "Railroaders" the Stephens-Adamson took a commanding early-game lead scoring five runs in the initial frame and adding a trio more in the fifth. Bob Browning's C.N.R. nine scored all of their runs in the initial stanza collecting but three hits from that point in.

Woods and Train clubbed three base hits for the Marines and added singles to account for four of the winner's eight hits. Jim Barrette, LaBonne and Bell were outstanding two singles each to run the string out. Day and Martin with doubles and singles each accounted for the Railroaders' only hitting strength of the night.

Anderson struck out six and walked but one, while Grant Wright on the C.N.R. hilltop, whiffed but one and issued five free passes. C.N.R. errors helped to mount the Marines' scoring column.

The line score:

C.N.R.	200 000 0—2	4	5
Marines	221 030 x—8	8	1

Score Six in First.

In the nightcap affair Bob Bell's Alemites garnered in six runs in the initial frame and then proceeded to coast home with the winning three-hit pitching. Harris retired the Squire batters in order in the first, fourth, fifth and sixth frames, with Jones the hitting star for the juniors and struck out four of the opposition batters. Hughes, Harris and Dingley collected three potent bats for the Alemites, as the "Eastenders" chalked up their third win in four starts. The winners fielded errorless behind Harris' three-hit pitching chore during which time he retired five Squires via the three-strike route.

The line score:

ENGLISH DERBY WILL BE RUN DESPITE WAR

Britain's Fifth Wartime Racing Season Reaching Its Peak

17 IN OAKS

By ALLAN NICKLESON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Newmarket, England, June 16 — (CP)—Britain's fifth wartime turf season — one that many thought the Nazi-spawned estimush continues to hold up well and is pushing toward the Derby, to be run over Newmarket's historic Downs tomorrow. The Oaks, next to the Derby the season's outstanding classic, will be run today.

The strictures of the country's thoroughbreds will be among the well-filled fields contesting the 1½-mile grind for both races. One filly is among the 26 Derby probables of which possibly 20 will run. Seventeen fillies are scheduled to face the starter in the Oaks.

Although it appeared for a while that invasion restrictions would reduce attendance drastically, hundreds of regular racegoers journeyed from London and other centres and accommodation and meals were at a premium.

Saturday's Derby will be the richest ever run in Britain. The winner will get $27,000 with $3,175 for 2nd and $1,500 for third.

Big Purse Is Inviting

Surprisingly, a filly possibly will start the Derby as the favorite. She is Lord Derby's Garden Path who won the Oaks in 1942. Bookmakers in London yesterday was made the choice at odds of 8 to 1.

Harry Wragg will be in the leave from the Italian front, will ride Garden Path, while Gordon Richards, idle on Growing Confidence, owned by Major Dick Wilson and Gordon Carter at 11 to 2.

Third choice among the bettors is Sir Eric Ohtrop's entry in the Derby under the colors of trainer-owner Walter Earl. Pre-race betting was yesterday by Mrs. Philip Hill, the Hon. Mrs. Jack Financier and racecomer to racing.

Mustang rose rapidly in betting after early in the last few days, partly because the name caught the fancy of the racing public, but also Mustang is a noted United States fighter plane. Mustang was ridden yesterday by Britain's perennial jockey champion, Gordon Richards, who rode Mustang to victory in the Derby.

Which

The bore was boasting of his family's patriotism.

"The eldest, the R.A.F. next week," he stated, "My father fought in the last war, and my grandfather fought in the Boer War. My great-grandfather, I've been told, fought in the Zulu War . . . "

"Really!" drawled a listener. "On which side?"

Overseas News

We received a letter from Sergt. J. "Pud" Lickfold, 4th Bty., 5th Lt. A. A. dateline somewhere in Italy, this week and Buddy wants to be remembered to the boys.

He spoke of Don Thomas being in his unit and added — "Tam Corson just 'came in with the rations, which are always welcome". Bud adds Tam was doing a fine chore of softball pitching in the rest camp in Southern Italy, as he modestly adds — "Now we've put the old ball game away in the shed and have really got down to the business of fighting once again and we've sure got the cervys on the run".

Other excerpts from the letter re-garding Belleville sports mention Harold "Bingo" Reid is doing a great chore, also Ross Bulter, Alex Glover, Jack Calcutt, Doc Dafoe, Ray Reid, Tom Sherry, and Bill Hall is still on the repair end. As saw Leo Goyer the other day and was also talking to Capt. "Doc" Bird, who is still our good old sawbones. I suppose you know that Everett Fairman is now a major in the 48th Bty, and the boys were very glad to see him go up.

"Ray Terry is still dit-dot dashing on his wireless and says that the army is a little wet rationing for an old sea dog, especially Navy.

Bud also sent the thanks of all Belleville boys to the local Salvation Army and Army and Navy Vets, for the steady flow of Canadian cigarettes which are apparently much needed in the battle zones.

In closing Bud sends his usual touch thusly — "Well, fella, wish all the folks back home the best of luck and keep 'em rolling BUD."

Also enclosed in the envelope were two of the latest copies of the 8th Army newspaper, printed in Italy.

News of Don Goodwin

It only seems like a few short months ago Don Goodwin was breaking up softball boys out of the opposition while playing a great game outside wing for the Belleville Collegiate Institute senior interscholastic rugby football squad.

Today he's F/O Don Goodwin of the R.C.A.F., somewhere in England. We are somewhere in England because Don recently had a harrowing experience. It seems he was forced to bail out over the English Channel at something like 1,500 feet after his tank had been hit by flak and the supply of petrol was exhausted. However, he was later picked up by a Polish destroyer and returned to England where he immediately took over another ship. The son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Goodwin of Maynooth, F/O Don Goodwin was forced to bail out once before when his plane was hit by flak between Sicily and Malta at which time he was operating from the George Cross island.

Marines Undefeated

Max Peoples' Stephens Adamson Marines remained undefeated in city softball leagues triumphal over the C.N.R. "Railroaders" 8 to 2 last night. Bill Anderson chalked up a four-hit pitching chore and was never in serious difficulty after the Railroaders opened the game with two runs in the initial canto. The Marines have now opposed of their two closest rivals in the standing. Keene Aces and C.P.R. are tied for straight and they should make it at least six in a row as they meet the lowly Canadians and Tweed in their next two starts.

On the other half of a twin bill Connie Harris hurled a three-hitter as the Alemites bested the Columbian Squires down 11 to 3. Six tallies in the initial frame were sufficient for the first-starter's no coast in behind Harris' steady pitching chore. Penfold it's gritz softball at the Armouries.

Remember when

Jack Lovelock, slim New Zealander, out-ran the cream of United States and Army athletic "mile of the century" race at Princeton nine years ago today. Lovelock became her easily defeated Bill Bonthron and Glenn Cunningham, United States aces. A year later Lovelock won the Olympic Games 1,500 metre title at Berlin.

First Time Tied

When the Cardinals were first in the National League and the Browns were the top cop rung in the Yankees in the American loop series of this month it was the first time in baseball that the Browns and Cards have been rival attractions in St. Louis, that the two teams were in first place in their respective leagues simultaneously.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, June 16—(AP)—The National Association of Baseball at Cooperstown, N. Y., recently has received a ball presented to it by Roy Smith, former governor of Guam, by the 4th Guam Regiment for 1917-18, and an artifical hand which, I'll bet, once was used to play baseball . . . We hope the person who buys "Babe Ruth's Last Wager" on the air, when it is auctioned on a war bond radio program, knocked out Coolidge Miller, 162, Newark, N.J. (2); Milo Theodorakis, 161, New York, outpointed Lew Perez, 155, Puerto Rico (8).

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 606

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Some cute things happen when you mate a bridge game made up of an expert or two, the expert pulls one of his clever inferences and his side goes down.

A stranger was introduced and joined a game with three wolves. Every bid he made, I noticed, was sound and practical. He was really putting them straight down the old alley.

But his expert partner would always try to outguess his bids or the bids of their opponents. Thus, they would land in the wrong contracts time after time.

After each such experience, the expert would say he thought his partner had this or did not have that. Finally, the stranger remarked gently: "There is nothing subtle about my bids, partner."

That remark may not strike you like it does me. But I have been looking for it for years. It applies to Horse Sense. There is nothing subtle about Horse Sense bids. They do not have to outguess them.

One of the deals in that session had this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠A J 9 3
♥K 10 7 5
♦K 8 4 2
♣A 6 5
WEST — EAST
♠K Q 10 4 2 — ♠8 7 6 5
♥7 6 2 — ♥J 9 4
♦J 9 — ♦10 7 6 5 3
♣9 5 4 — ♣K Q 10 3

The stranger was sitting south and opened with one spade. His expert partner in the north responded at once with four spades.

The contract was defeated two tricks and the expert explained: "My trumps were too strong to give you only one raise. I thought you would take a bid of two spades as weakness."

If there is nothing subtle about any bids, no bid is weakness. It merely tells the number of tricks in that hand. The only way to show weakness (unless forced) is to say pass.

Well, kids, we have finally come to the end of a series of bids of one and two, major suits. Next, we will start on opening bids of more than one.

And there will be nothing subtle about them either.

AT THE CAPITOL

"THE YOUNGEST PROFESSION"

Virginia Weidler adds evil to temperature the autographs of a quartet of screen stars and for the same time extricate her father from what she thinks is an attack on his privacy as secretary, with ludicrous results in M-G-M's "The Youngest Profession", now playing at the Capitol Theatre. The comedy of adolescence is embellished by the appearances of five guest stars, Lana Turner, Greer Garson, William Powell, Robert Taylor and Walter Pidgeon, who play themselves and sign autographs.

Virginia and her fan club track down the stars visiting in New York. Meantime, a gossiping governess (Agnes Moorehead) manages to spread a rumor regarding her father (Edward Arnold), and his secretary Ann Carroll. Virginia hires a professional strong man (John Carroll) to create jealousy by paying attention to her mother (Maria Ouspenskaya), and fast and furious complications lead to a comical climax.

"BENEATH WESTERN SKIES"
(Smiley Burnette)

Republic publishes noted for the rootin'est, tootin'est westerns scored another hit with "Beneath Western Skies," which opened yesterday at the capitol Theatre for a three day showing. The story concerns three two fabulous characters, newest at the western fans' fancy, "Johnny Revere" and "Frog Millhouse."

The role of Johnny Revere is played by handsome, swash-buckling Robert Livingston, who is equally at home in the saddle or the society drama. Smiley Burnette, most loved of all western comedians, again portrays the inimitable "Frog."

The final chapter of "The Masked Marvel" completes the big bill.

AT THE BELLE

"Lifeboat," Dramatic Hit

Acclaimed the most suspenseful drama ever made, the entire action taking place in a lifeboat where passengers are survivors of a U-boat torpedoing and of the commander of the enemy submarine—and Hitler's production of "Lifeboat," by John Steinbeck is now closing at the Belle Theatre.

"Lifeboat" was made with the cooperation of the U. S. Navy and Merchant Marine; the latter loaned the studio a 30-foot steel lifeboat which could not be bought at any price.

The film stars Tallulah Bankhead with featured players William Bendix, Walter Slezak, Mary Anderson, John Hodiak, Henry Hull, Heather Angel, Hume Cronyn and Canada Lee.

"Fun Time," in Color

"Fun Time" is the title of an outstanding Technicolor musical presented on the same program and featuring eight vaudeville acts in a fast-paced routine. A Terrytoon colorful cartoon completes the program.

"Desert Song," in Color

Opening this weekend at the Belle Theatre is the much-awaited film version of that perennial stage favorite, "The Desert Song," Warner Bros., the first of the film companies to bring operettas to the screen, has apparently outdone itself in this production.

Filmed in gorgeous technicolor, this completely modernized version leans heavily on current history for its plot. The vivid story, told against a background of beauty and romance tells of a young, flamboyant musician, Red Hudson, who, in the guise of El Khobar, makes daring and spectacular efforts to free the downtrodden Riff slave labor from the ruthless oppression of the Nazis.

Interwoven into the plot is the beautiful love story of Paul and the lovely Margot, a French cafe singer who loves him for his courage and unselfishness.

The story reaches its climax when Paul, discovered by the subterfuges as El Khobar, makes his getaway through the efforts of his friend, Johnny Walsh (Lynne Overman), an American newspaper reporter. Later he opens the eyes of Colonel Fontaine to the treachery of Caid Youssef (Victor Francen), and proves by documentary evidence that Nazis in Paris employ of the Nazis. Fontaine makes amends for his former detrimental in securing the freedom and rights of the Riffs.

Dennis Morgan and Irene Manning are starred as Paul and Margot, and lend new beauty to the familiar Romberg tunes in their renditions of them. In the featured cast are Bruce Cabot, Gene Lockhart and Frank Puglia.

Timely and thoroughly entertaining is the special added attraction "Zero Hour," superb action of the Canadian Army in Italy, produced by the armed services. Tpr. Murray Black, with the Canadian Armored Corps.

AT THE McCARTHY — The big boss has his tender moments. Tom Neal, ace racketeer, turned racket buster, knows all the answers except one—about a certain girl in love, in this scene from "The Racket Man," next at the McCarthy. Second attraction is "Hi, Good Lookin'."

AT THE McCARTHY

"The Racket Man"

Every once in a while a motion picture production comes along that is timely upon its release as it was when it was conceived. The things it attacks are repeated in the front page news.

Such a film is Columbia's "The Racket Man" coming Saturday to the McCarthy Theatre. Scarcely a day goes by that we do not read in our daily newspaper about some activity in the billion dollar black market. It is with this that "The Racket Man" deals. As it does it is with enough tense and exciting melodrama, plus a realistic romance to make the most hardened moviegoer thrill with excitement.

Tom Neal, the hero of "There's Something About a Soldier" is once more in a similar role. He is a racketeer, But his induction into the armed forces forces some scenes of life and thought. When he is given a special assignment to return to civilian status and breaks up the racket he finds himself face to face with the courage and tenacity of his comrades in Italy.

Jessica Drake plays the sympathetic role of his girl friend with all her heart-warming qualities she can't demanda. "The Racket Man" definitely gives her the front rank of Columbia feature players.

Harry Park, a reporter, and Doug Fowley, a druggist, with Hugh Beaumont, an Irish policeman are the comedy features. They perform with all the niceties their roles require. Fowley's menace is always chilling, believable, while Park's reporting has natural charm and naturalness. Beaumont never misses a trick as the cop.

Others in the cast, including Clarence Muse, Anthony Caruso and Ralph Peters, plays the exciting events up to the hilt of melodramatic realism.

And there's; plenty of melodrama and plenty of realism in "The Racket Man" now at the McCarthy.

"Hi Good Looking"

Topped by the caroling and comely talents of pretty and personable Harriet Hilliard of radio network fame, together with Ritzy new screen personality by the name of Kirby Grant, and a baker's dozen of crisp new and excellently orchestrated, "Hi Good Lookin" opens Saturday at the McCarthy Theatre as attraction at the McCarthy theatre.

Of definite importance in making "Hi Good Lookin" the amusing film it is are a pair of Hollywood's top-flight comics, Eddie Quillan and Fuzzy Knight, together with Betty Kean, Max Terhune, Ozzie Nelson and Vivian Austin.

The production's musical setting is nothing short of elaborate, provided by not one but two of the nation's top name bands—the melody combinations headed by Ozzie Nelson and Jack Teagarden.

In for some of the brightest specialty numbers viewed in some time are the Delta Rhythm Boys, surefire colored quartette, and the equally accomplished Tip, Tap and Toe.

Hycilla Wins Oaks Classic

Newmarket, England, June 16—(CP)— Hycilla, owned by William Woodward, won the Oaks classic today at odds of 8-1.

Monsoon and Kannaba were second and third in the mile-and-a-half test for three-year-old fillies. The co-favorites Tudor Maid and Picture Play were out of the money.

Britain's fifth wartime racing season reaches its climax tomorrow with the running of the Derby over Newmarket's historic course. About 30 are expected to start.

Winner Americas-Owned

The American-owned Hycilla did not race as a two-year-old and in her only previous start this season she ran no better than second in a Maiden Stakes.

But today, with G. Bridgeland up, she took the lead at the mile post and stood off Monsoon and Kannaba to win by a length and a half in 2:30 3/5.

The filly by Hyperion — 1933 Derby winner who sired Pensive, winner of this year's Kentucky Derby — brought Woodward his 3rd victory in the five major British classics. He took the St. Louis with Boswell in 1936 and the 1,000 guineas with Brown Betty in 1935. Picture Play, winner of the 1,000 guineas this year, never threatened the leaders and finished ninth while Tudor Maid finished ninth in the field of 11.

The victory brought Woodward about $14,000.

The War Today—

Great Shortening of War in Orient Seen in Use of Super Fortresses

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press War Analyst)

The significance of yesterday's sensational bombing of Japan lies not in the mere fact that a terrifying blow has been struck at the enemy's homeland, for that's been done before, but that at long last the Allies are operating from land bases—not aircraft carriers.

This presumably marks the beginning of regular air assaults on Japan, on a scale which is huge and powerful that the biggest machines previously employed—and they are bombers—are relegated to the position of mere medium." With the bombs from these leviathans tearing at the bowls of Germany, Tokyo's industries he shall achieve a great shortening of the war in the Orient.

Japanese Reports

Authorities are purposely withholding details of this historic raid so as not to give the enemy information. The Japanese have said that the industrial areas of Moji and Shimonoseki, within 500 miles of Tokyo, were bombed.

However, the Nipponese probably weren't really surprised, for they had foreseen this development. That's one of the reasons for their present all-out offensive to capture the Hankow - Canton railway line through the heart of China and create a barrier against Allied progress eastward towards the coast. The Japanese have been fearful of the establishment of new American air possibilities.

House Hears Further Suggestions On Rehabilitation of Servicemen

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, June 16 — (CP) — More suggestions on what should be done to help re-establish and rehabilitate service personnel into civilian life were heard yesterday in the Commons as members of all parties joined in saying that the best of treatment be given the veterans of this and other wars.

The suggestions were advanced during continued debate on a bill establishing a veterans' affairs department to handle all matters concerning ex-service personnel. All members agreed that the bill was a step in the right direction, but expressed belief that it alone would not solve all problems.

Col. A. J. Brooks (PC—Royal), a veteran of the First Great War who has served in various capacities during this war, urged that better treatment be provided for disabled veterans.

Want to Return to Job

Almost everyone in the forces wanted to return to a job. The man felt that industry as well as the government should give them preference as far as work was concerned.

Members of the forces had placed the responsibility of making proper provisions for their return upon the shoulders of members of parliament and upon the people of the country.

Coy. Brooks said the post-war period was not uppermost in the minds of the men of the forces at the present time is the winning of the war," he said. "Another matter which is giving them considerable thought is the question of reinforcements, or whether or not well trained men will be available to give them sufficient backing in the great task which they are undertaking.

Should Be Informed.

Another man in uniform, Maj. Leslie Mutch (L—Winnipeg South) said that veterans should be thoroughly informed of what training and opportunities were available. They also should be informed on how many positions were available in the trades for which they were to be trained.

The people of Canada owed a debt to every man on active service, not only in the present emergency, but in the post-war period, Maj. Mutch said. Canada must not rest content with merely providing a small amending the criminal code. The minimum penalty for theft from a post office should be increased from one month to twelve months as well as penalty for attempted thefts. Illness, misadventures and mere, due to over-exercise, overwork, or exposure to cold and damage would be increased.

"CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT" By ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER 18.

I don't know how long we stood in the door, staring at Gala and the dead Bruce. Perhaps only a minute, perhaps longer.

Aunt Millie was the first to shake off the numbing horror and find her voice.

"Where's the nearest telephone?" she asked in a hoarse whisper.

It took a while before the question penetrated. I was conscious-nent. "At the Butler farm, two miles down the road," she said at last, almost inaudibly.

"In this direction?" Aunt Millie nodded away from the lake and Gala said "Yes" in the same, hushed tone.

"All right, Kay. You hold the fort. I'll go tell the police—and your father and Allan." Aunt Millie announced with a reassuring pressure of her shoulder. Then her feet pattered down the porch steps—the purring roar of her motor shattered the stillness—changed into a pure—twisted—dwindled—

The quiet became absolute again.

I kept leaning against the side of the door, staring at the dead man and living woman before me, my mind a welter of conjectures and sudden illumination. Until at last my knees buckled with weakness and strain and I slid in a heap to the floor.

Slowly the sun was gaining force. The landscape was taking on the strange hues and the inside of the cabin sprang clearly into view as the window behind Gala burst into sudden brightness, turning her hair into a golden halo.

The place was completely wrecked.

The bids had been pulled off the seat - chests - running along the walls. Old fishing tackle, magazines, tennis rackets—all the odds and ends that accumulate in an unused summer camp—strewed the floor in wild confusion. Pots up holstery of a slider couch had been ripped open, the covers of a bed pulled off.

It was the same kind of destruction I had seen in the Burton library, The same motive for this second search.

I do not remember asking the question aloud. I only know Gala answered it.

"All for that miserable radium," she said faintly, all of a sudden. From then on we talked. Not coherently. Only fragments—disjointedly—thinking out loud. And yet oddly—thinking out loud. And yet in complete understanding of each other and the situation.

"I said I didn't think you knew—"

And she answered, after a long pause: "Bruce told me—Thursday, I guess. The first time I saw him. It took him a week, finding the courage to face me."

"I would. He was a coward."

It was dreadful, pronouncing judgment on a man who had been a hero me dead, murdered. But I couldn't help it.

"No he wasn't. He was only spoiled." A word of forgiving understanding for all the words.

"His black mood in those weeks—it was you. He was trying to forget you, by marrying me," I said at last. "And his later"—by whether it didn't work."

"He hated me. My accident—it drove him wild with horror and repulsion. He couldn't stand a cripple, a mutilated woman. I didn't understand then. It made me —terribly bitter."

"Avery was taking you to him—when it happened." It was a question. It was a statement.

"Yes—and Avery is suffering for his act of friendship to this day. First he almost died later—you know how his wife acts—"

"She's a dreadful person. I don't see why he stands it, why he doesn't leave her—"

"One accident. And so much misery, for so long—poor Avery! Bruce wouldn't have let me suffer, too."

"Suffer? I didn't suffer. Or yes, I did. It was a humiliation. But it's all long ago. I can't feel anything now. Not for Avery—except for three weeks and now—he's nothing but a dead stranger with all wrong. I should feel something —I must—" I accused myself.

Then Gala declared, "I couldn't feel anything either —when he came, I'd waited five years—to tell him I hated him for leaving me to face my wrecked life alone. And then, when we met —nothing. It was all over—gone, burnt out. He asked me to marry him after your divorce, and—my minding it didn't matter any more. And I—couldn't. I couldn't see him any longer as a man. He'd become again the little boy—who'd thrown pebbles at me from the garden next door—

We went on that vein endlessly, it seemed. Telling the past in rambling snatches that made sense only to us.

And then Aunt Millie was back.

"They'll be here as fast as they can make it," she said, dropping down on the doorsill beside me. "But it'll be an hour and a half at best."

Her return broke our strange mood and stranger confidences. We fell silent again and sat motionless —waiting—

All around us the life of the forest was going on. Birds twittered near by; flitting in and out from the eaves of the roof. A squirrel sat on the railing a few yards away, looking at us curiously out of shiny black eyes and scolding fretfully.

I tried to watch the small creatures, keep my mind occupied with them. But after a time they submerged into a great void, with the rest of the world, and I fell into a sort of trance, staring at nothing and thinking—nothing.

The noise of several cars turning into the driveway pulled me out of my daze; a whole crowd of men came swarming up the footpath.

The Inspector and Doc Tobie, the Coroner, were at the head, with Sergeant Hatch and Flynn at their heels. And behind them came what looked like a whole Clifford police force, photographers, fingerprint men and all, and—oh, joy!—Dad and Allan.

The next moment I was in Dad's arms, and he was stroking my hair, as he'd done once when I was a kid, murmuring gently: "Kay! My poor little Kay! Why didn't you confide in me? Why did you carry this burden alone?"

And Allan said, close to my ear: "I had to tell your father and Inspector Rockcliffe, darling. There was no other way—no explanation for your being out here".

It didn't matter. I merely nodded my understanding and held on to both of them—for protection and shelter.

But not for long. The Inspector's voice, heavy with sarcasm and authority, cut through my reprieve. "So you went to the Burton house for a last compact"! it said. "You didn't have the decency—or sense—to tell me the truth! Now look what your fool lying and secret-keeping has done! Cost a man his life. And he your husband too!"

He didn't give me the chance to answer, or defend myself; he was talking over my head in the same breath.

"Careful, Hatch! Pull Miss Burton' ves from under the body. Don't change the position—"

I heard Dad gasp: "Gala! For God's sake—Gala!"

Then he was beside Sergeant Hatch, helping him lift the unshod Gala, steadying her when she swayed on her one leg helplessly, picking her up and carrying her to the torn couch.

Inspector Rockcliffe's commands to his men, the Inspector turned his full wrath upon me.

"You too, Miss Burton! Telling me you went for a book Thursday night, 'stead of saying you went to the summer cousin. And the both of you—coming out here in the dead of night! Not together either, from what Mr. Reid told me. Who got here first? Who found him?"

"I did," Gala said in a surprisingly clear and quiet voice, the moment Dad had deposited her on the couch. Apparently the Inspector's last jibe had been having the same rationalizing effect on her as on me.

"And — he was alive when you arrived?"

"No. He was dead. He was lying where you found him—us—near the open door. With the lamp burning on the table behind him," Gala said, plainly fighting for poise. "I thought at first he was—only, but then I lifted his head into my lap and—Bruce died."

The Inspector grunted and cleared his throat. "Hmm, I see. Anything else?"

"I'm not sure. I left my home at 8 o'clock and came by the main road."

"Would make it around four-thirty", the Inspector figured. "And you say he was dead when you got there, you make it, Doc? How long's he been dead?" he called, turning and stalking away.

"Three, four hours. Not more'n four anyway," the Coroner said. And then the group around Bruce's body swallowed him and the others, as we were left mercifully alone for a while.

I sat down beside Gala and clasped her hand, and she smiled at me miserably and said: "If only we'd found out about each other sooner".

And Dad said: "I don't yet understand what it's all about, but if there's anything I can do? I want to help both Kay and you, Gala." His eyes were so expressive, a child couldn't help but trust him. He wanted to help. I, his only daughter, had become of secondary importance.

Shouts and yelled commands cut off our pretty gruping assurances, stopped me from making my confession to them. We all turned.

Four policemen were carrying Bruce's body in from the open porch room, and the rest of the uniformed men were clattering down the porch steps, dispersing outside and examining the ground for signs of the murderer's car. And chortled. The photographers were leaving. And at the same moment two plain-clothes men emerged from the inner room and began dusting the furniture for fingerprints.

All the routine of a murder investigation—

Then the Inspector was with us again.

"Mr. Burton was shot from a distance", he stated in a business-like manner. "They ain't no powder marks. And the gun was a small calibre, not more'n a thirty-two. Bullet's still in the head. Doc Tobie says, and so far as he can say before the autopsy, he was shot straight ahead. Looks like the murderer stood at the foot of the porch steps and shot Burton when he opened the door."

He straddled a chair and pulled it around to face the couch. "They'll be taking the body to town after a while. I'm expecting a stretcher. Got to wait 'till it comes. So I guess we might as well get through with your people now and here. Sorry I cannot use you, Miss Kay. Gala Gala the best he can". He glanced at Dad and me out of the corner of his eye and then decided: "You first, Miss Burton. Why you come here in the middle of the night?"

Gala's hand was asleep to come at that hour". Gala had herself completely in hand again.

"Did you know—so—that Miss Kay was coming too?"

"Yes. I knew Bruce wished to talk things over with both of us".

"His decision from me Miss Kay? That what you meant?"

"Among other things. Yes".

"Hmm. Why didn't you go together then?"

"Because Bruce wanted it this way".

The Inspector's fingers combed his hair. A gesture I had come to recognize as a sign of perplexity. "Seems like your cousin had a lot of queer notions, Miss Burton", he said.

"Bruce wasn't my cousin", Gala reminded him. "You, and everyone else in Clifford, believed that Uncle Ellis's adopted son—the son of his wife's first marriage. He was my brother only—by explanation for your being out here".

"Hmm. Your husband too?"

"Yes. Bruce was taking on my understanding and hold on to both of them—for protection and shelter.

But not for long. The Inspector's voice, heavy with sarcasm and authority, cut through my reprieve. "So you went to the Burton house for a last compact"! it said. "You didn't have the decency—or sense—to tell me the truth! Now look what your fool lying and secret-keeping has done! Cost a man his life. And he your husband too!"

He didn't give me the chance to answer, or defend myself; he was talking over my head in the same breath.

"Careful, Hatch! Pull Miss Burton' ves from under the body. Don't change the position—"

I heard Dad gasp: "Gala! For God's sake—Gala!"

Then he was beside Sergeant Hatch, helping him lift the unshod Gala, steadying her when she swayed on her one leg helplessly, picking her up and carrying her to the torn couch.

Inspector Rockcliffe's commands to his men, the Inspector turned his full wrath upon me.

"You too, Miss Burton! Telling me you went for a book Thursday night, 'stead of saying you went to the summer cousin. And the both of you—coming out here in the dead of night! Not together either, from what Mr. Reid told me. Who got here first? Who found him?"

"I did", Gala said in a surprisingly clear and quiet voice, the moment Dad had deposited her on the couch. Apparently the Inspector's last jibe had been having the same rationalizing effect on her as on me.

"And — he was alive when you arrived?"

"No. He was dead. He was lying where you found him—us—near the open door. With the lamp burning on the table behind him", Gala said, plainly fighting for poise. "I thought at first he was—only, but then I lifted his head into my lap and—Bruce died."

The Inspector grunted and cleared his throat. "Hmm, I see. Anything else?"

"I'm not sure. I left my home at 8 o'clock and came by the main road."

"Would make it around four-thirty", the Inspector figured. "And you say he was dead when you got there, you make it, Doc? How long's he been dead?" he called, turning and stalking away.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was starting to do th bridge problem and pop was looking at the headlines on the front page the sporting page, and I said: Hay pop, do you know how sounds are made? Do you know how they are different from waves hitting against your ears? Do you know what sound waves are, ma? I said.

I know who makes most of the sounds, whenever I want to concentrate, such as this very minute, I said, at present ma said, and I said, But it's true, ma. If a revolver starts to shoot all by itself in a empty house without anybody's ears there to stop the waves, then there wouldn't be the slightest sound, I said.

If you must talk, please talk sense, ma said, and pop said, He's quite correct, without the impact of sound waves on ear drums, nothing but silence results. A deaf man talking to himself in the middle of a desert would make no sound, he said, and ma said, I'm sure he'd make as much sound as you're making. In the first place revolvers dont shoot by themselves of certain qualities, the whole thing is impossible to begin with, she said.

But that is where you're wrong, I could go off by itself in an empty house, pop said, and ma said, Let's suppose a green cheese could jump over the moon—

But I can't, I'll suppose it, and in that case the cheese would have absolutely no effect if there was a nose present at the time either on the cheese or on the moon—himself is the result of the reception of certain qualities by the olfactory nerves, pop said, and ma said, Any cheese that can't perceive a incident has marvellous intuitive creatures far above the need of nerves, pop said, and ma said, Surely a more interesting place, he said.

TORONTO STOCK MARKET

Toronto, June 16 (CP)—The industrial and mining groups posted index gains last week today on the Toronto Stock Exchange and the western oils also showed slightly. Volume was fairly heavy at 490,000 shares for the first three hours.

The golds were also firm strong around noon. Pickle Crow firmed 3 cents to $2.32, Sladen and Hollinger 1-4 and Sylvanite, Monets, Lamaque, Teck, Stadacona and Beck-Mc-Madsen were stronger. Nickel featured the International Nickel rising two points to 32 in harmony with the stronger prices ruling on the New York Exchange. Hudson Bay gained 1-2.

Steel and building issues ruled higher and other industrial groups showed little change. Canada Packers and Canadian Bakeries were stronger foods. Canadian Celanese added 1 at 24 to sell at 30 7-8.

British-Dominion and Mid-Continent were slightly weaker, western oils and other issues held steady.

WALL STREET

New York, June 16 —(AP)— Buying enthusiasm continued at a high pitch in today's market, spearheading industrials and rail leaders ahead fractions to around two points, prices generally moved up to the highest for more than five years. Trading was exceptionally heavy, first hour dealings being a record breaker for the 1944 season.

Stocks in higher ground included Westinghouse, Dupont, Eastman Kodak, Chrysler, Willys-Overland, Goodrich, American Air Lines, Pan American Airways and Pullman.

Canadian issues were generally higher.

Consecon Boy Takes Part In Raid on Boulogne

By ALAN RANDAL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, June 16 (CP Cable) Heavy bombers of the Canadian group of the bomber command took part in yesterday's R.A.F. daylight attack on port installations at Boulogne, while a smaller force hammered railway targets at Lens.

It was announced three heavy bombers are missing from these operations.

Throughout yesterday RCAF. Typhoons, Mustangs and Spitfires operated in close support of Allied ground troops in the invasion armies' continuing ground Gaeb—on protective patrols and ground strafing, shooting up German road transport, and road communications.

Two Canadian planes were lost from these operations. Pilot of one is reported safe. One Canadian Typhoon also is missing.

Canadian fliers are reported to have shot down one enemy plane in one engagement.

The Boulogne assault was the first daylight attack carried out by the Canadian bomber since its formation nearly 18 months ago.

The giant bombers took off in the early morning and came back at their bases shortly after midnight after hammering the R-boat and R-boat pens. They flew under cover of fighter escort.

A break in the clouds gave the bomber crews an opportunity to see the results of their bombing attack and the breakwater, plainly.

Sqdn. Ldr. F. W. Sowrey, Hamilton, said he made three runs on the target.

There was a fair amount of flak which the crews reported looked dangerous by daylight than at night.

"The sky was lit up for miles around," said Sgt. Ernest Goodwin of Hamilton. "There was no moon or a load of gas must have been hit."

Sgt. K. C. Dickson, Consecon, Ont., said Spitfires were on hand to guard the target he saw no German fighters.

BRITISH REPULSE TWO STRONG ATTACKS NIGHT BOMBERS BLAST DUISBURG AND BERLIN

Attacks Reported Being 'Extremely Costly' to Enemy

American Thrust Drives Closer To Enemy's Last Link With Cherbourg

WEATHER STILL BAD

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 17 (CP) — British troops on the Allied bridgehead east of the Orne River repulsed two strong German counter-attacks and the American thrust across the Cherbourg Peninsula moved slowly closer to the enemy's last land link with Cherbourg, headlast land link with Cherbourg, headquarters reports said today.

Mastery of bad weather and rough seas hampered unloading of ships and gear operations and made it unlikely the Allies would attempt to launch a full-scale attack until the weather improves and they can use their air superiority to the full.

Today's fullest communique reported only slight activity along the 100-mile battle front. Either the German attacks east of the Orne River were described as heavy and "extremely costly" to the enemy.

These attacks were aimed at penetrating Allied positions at Breville and Escoville, respectively eight and six miles northeast of Caen.

Lowly Regarded Outsider Wins English Derby

Newmarket, England, June 17— (CP)— Ocean Swell, a lowly regarded outsider owned by Lord Rosebery, won England's fifth war time Derby today at odds of 28 to 1 in an exciting finish with Tehran and Happy Landing who finished second and third.

The Aga Khan's Tehran started as the favorite with Butcher Hutchinson's Happy Landing at 22-1. Major Dewar's Ocean Swell, Greeting Confidence, which started at 9-2, ran out of the money.

Ocean Swell, a bay colt by Blue Peter out of Jilt, was W. Nevett up, took the lead less than a half-mile from home in Britain's top race for three-year-olds, and stood off Tehran's blazing finish to win by a neck.

Happy Landing was also closing fast at the finish, showing by a head, time was 2:31.

Jockey Walter Nash.

Garden Path—winner of the 2,000 Guineas and the only filly in the field—was the pre-race favorite, failing quietest as low as 6-1 in calling over this week, but faltered in the stretch and finished 10th, just in front of Greeting Confidence.

Tehran with E. Smith aboard and Happy Landing ridden by R. A. Jones were lying fifth and sixth behind Ocean Swell coming into Garden Path when Ocean Swell moved into the lead. Tehran moved up on the horses in the stretch to stage a finishing drive to catch the winner, which brought a rolling roar of excitement from the crowd of more than 10,000.

Victory in this fifth war time Derby was the race normally is run at Epsom Downs—brought Lord Rosebery a purse of about £20,000.

Ocean Swell took it's place and Happy Landing returned a little better than 5-1 to show.

ALL TO RECEIVE PAY

North Rustico, P.E.I., June 17— (CP)—Fishermen from this north shore fishing village running their trawler eight miles off shore in the Gulf of St. Lawrence encountered a dog sled with raw hide harness drawing through the ice floes and believed the sled came down from the north on drift ice in the spring.

33 RACE HORSES DESTROYED

Detroit, June 17 —(AP)—Thirty-five race horses were destroyed and 33 others injured in a three-alarm fire swept through two large barns at the Detroit Race Course Grounds. About 100 horses were quartered there. Victims included Bell Sunset, seventh in this year's Kentucky Derby.

FIRST PHASE OVER

London, June 17 (CP-Reuters)— The invasion front in Normandy has entered one of the first major battles, assisted a Berlin military spokesman quoted today by the German Transocean Agency.

"The first phase in the bridgehead fighting now is definitely over," said the spokesman.

Germans Attempting to Evacuate Cherbourg Peninsula Says Pilot

A U.S. Flighter Base in England June 17 (AP) — An American fighter pilot said today he believed German troops are attempting to evacuate the Cherbourg Peninsula to escape the trap being closed around them by the American troops.

Lieut. James Barnhardt of Rutherford College, N.C., said he saw "thousands and thousands" moving southward over the narrowing strip between the advancing American and the west coast of the peninsula.

"I think they want to get out of there, but our troops are moving in as fast as hell," he said.

Lieut. Walter Thirnten, Highland, N.J., said the Germans were not moving any more equipment toward Caen.

"Fires which have been burning for days in Caen, Carentan and St. Lo have at last gone out, he reported.

KING GEORGE PAYS VISIT TO BEACHES ABOARD CRUISER

Confers C.B.E. on Maj.-Gen. R.F.L. Keller Leader of the Third Canadian Division

LUNCHES WITH OFFICERS

Somewhere in France, June 17— (CP)— The King spent the afternoon on these beaches, yesterday only 10 days after the Allied invasion of Western Europe opened.

He crossed the Channel on the cruiser H. M. C. Arethusa, lunched with General Montgomery, Allied ground commander, and before his return conferred the C.B.E. upon Maj.-Gen. R.F.L. Keller of Kelowna, B.C., commander of the Canadian 3rd Division.

When he stepped ashore on the beach head west of Courseulles, the King heard shells screaming overhead from the cruiser Mauritius, firing at a target 10 miles inland. It was the first time in this war the King had witnessed actual firing at enemy positions.

Accompanying His Majesty were Admiral Cunningham, First Sea Lord; Admiral Ramsay, Chief of Allied Naval Operations for the invasion; Air Chief Marshal Portal, Marshal of the R.A.F.; Lt.-Gen. Sir Hastings Ismay, Capt. Sir Harold Campbell of the Royal Navy, and Sir Alan Lascelles, the King's private secretary.

Landing from a "duck" — amphibious landing craft—the King, who was greeted by Montgomery, No ceremony was observed, as the landing craft continued to unload its cargo of men, munitions and stores.

No Ceremony.

Nor was the scene as the King slipped the C. B. E. ribbon over Keller's head one of ceremony. On a lawn shaded by a grove of trees, six officers paraded before the head. Montgomery called the parade to attention and His Majesty strolled, unescorted, to the front. flags, no Royal red carpet.

The British officers and two British N. C. O.'s also were decorated.

Eight Men Die From Drinking Methyl Alcohol

Saint John, N.B., June 17—(CP)— Death of five men in hospital today brought the toll of fatalities from drinking methyl alcohol here in the last two days to eight. A ninth man, in a precarious state, also have died from the same cause.

The sudden death of a shipment going overseas for the Canadian Red Cross, was said by coroners to have disappeared from a shed on the waterfront at West Saint John after yesterday. All the victims were stevedores except one, an Indian, who had brought in his boat and who died yesterday.

Eight men were known to have died from alcohol poisoning. Another man died yesterday, apparently from the same cause, but it has not been definitely established that alcohol was responsible for his death.

Several other men are admitted to hospital after drinking the liquor.

The condition of one of these was described as serious today.

Munro Reviews First 11 Days of Campaigning By Canadians in France

Ross Munro, Chief Canadian Press War Correspondent in the field, landed on Normandy beach to sweep beaches with the Canadians on D-Day, June 6, and has been in action as they fought their way slowly inland against bitter German opposition. Following is a review of 11 days' campaigning in France by Canada's invasion forces.

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadians In France, June 17 (CP Cable)—The Canadian 3rd infantry division—commanded by Maj.-Gen. F. F. I. Keller of Kelowna, B.C., with Canadian tanks followed up the gallant assault on the coast of Normandy by penetrating inland through more German anti-invasion defences, capturing a score of villages, repulsing a series of fierce German counter-attacks and finally consolidating positions directly in front of the defences of Caen, vital communications hub 10 miles inland from the Orne River.

This involved six days of hard fighting and in the last five days there has been a virtual standstill on this sector as the Germans went on the defensive and the Canadian prepared for the next big thrust in this operation. These Canadians, fighting their first battle, had long training in England, did everything expected of them and showed their battle particularly in the stern test on the beaches and in turning back heavy counter attacks from enemy armor and infantry in the inland battle-ground.

Infantry Brigade Outstanding.

The outstanding feat in this 11-day campaign has been the work of the seven infantry brigade with western tanks. It reached its objective, 10 miles inland, on D-Day and stuck there despite every enemy attempt to repulse the invaders. Courseulles, on the west flank of the division's front, and in several of the coastal defences on either side of the inlet at the mouth of the river Seulles.

These troops went through beach obstacles, land mines through barbed wire and fought their way into concrete emplacements and trench systems where the Germans fought to the end. Then came the tanks, guns and infantry and armor swarmed through the stone streets of Courseulles where elaborate German headquarters were cleaned out.

Then they leaped far more than an hour at Courseulles as infantry and tanks worked their way up to Market Square with machine-guns, rifles and grenades. The town is clouded with smoke from pre-landing bombardment and fires. Its shops and enemy naval fore agrawled on every street.

Fighting Is Bitter.

Destroyers shelled positions ahead of the Canadian advance and the Germans let go with mortars and artillery on the invaders. This Courseulles was occupied and a company branched off and captured Graye-sur-Mer, a mile to the west. The Westerners then broke into open country and raced forward on foot to take Banville and Ste. Croix, tiny villages, and went south three miles and fought through Reviers to reach the Main Bowing from the south joins the Seulles. The brigade controls the high ground on each side of the wooded Mue River valley.

Other Canadian towns were occupied, including Columbiers Bur Aisnelle and Lasalleur. From there the Westerners pushed on to cut the Caen-Bayeux road and took up positions on the slopes from which they beat off every-thing the Germans threw at them.

The stubborn resistance of these Canadians, British and Canadian troops were nothing short of magnificent. Several Canadian infantry units were overrun by enemy tanks but they went back at the Germans and drove them out of their positions. If any infantry formation was tested to the limit in the invasion, it was this Western brigade.

The Canadian infantry brigade, including a French-speaking regiment from Quebec, landed with tanks a few miles east of Courseulles on D-Day, June 6th.

Fighting their way through the street, they got into rolling country with excellent defensive positions. They found more German positions in the fields, especially around Villers-Bocage, six miles from the coast. There was heavy fighting.

Fields Mined

There were also German strong points every few miles and the fields were mined. Anti-tank guns, self-propelled guns and each had to be dealt with as the advance went on.

FINNS EVACUATING VIIPURI DUE TO RUSSIAN PRESSURE

Stockholm Says Red Army Employing Rocket Cannon for First Time

BRIDGES BLOWN UP

Stockholm, June 17 (AP)—Continued pressure on the Finnish port city of Viipuri toward which the Russians are driving with a great weight of men and equipment, has caused the Finnish dispatches reported today.

Refugees also are streaming from the Karelian towns under long-standing plans, dispatches said.

Finnish reports said a large scale evacuation was being made in the vicinity of Siiranmaki. For the first time in the Finnish-Russian war the Red Army is reported to be employing rocket cannon.

In an attempt to throw every available man into the struggle to stop the Russians, it was also reported by the Swedish newspaper Dagens Nyheter to have pressed all men between 17 and 50 from (Aland) Islands in the Gulf of Bothnia.

Seeking to Halt Reds.

Moscow, June 17 (AP)—The Finns are shoring up all the bridges on two highways leading to Viipuri from the west, front dispatches said today in halt the Red Army's gathering drive for the important communications city.

But Soviet capture of the city appeared inevitable. The rumble of Russian big guns already was echoing strongly in its streets.

"As the offensive develops the battles become more violent character," said Red Star correspondents Grigory Ivanov, Lidov and Ivanov.

ISLAND OF ELBA OCCUPIED BY FRENCH TROOPS

Allies Make Contact With Italian Partisans at Terano

DESTROY 70 PLANES

Rome, June 17. (AP)—French forces landed today on the island of Elba, 12 miles off the coast of Italy at Napoleon, and have secured it for the Allies, Allied headquarters announced tonight.

A special communique said a detachment of French troops had been landed by Maj.-Gen. Jean De Lattre de Tassigny had landed on the island's rocky island. It gave no details, but said the Italian enemy garrison showed no sign of making an immediate stand.

The communique said the "momentum of the Allied advance in Italy was maintained," and added that in the Adriatic sector Allied troops made contact with Italian partisans who held Teramo, near Terano.

The Allies were reported 12 miles north of Civitella and its airfield. The communique confirmed the taking of Grosseto by 5th Army troops, who also captured Arezzo in the front.

Allied planes destroyed 70 enemy planes yesterday, while 12 Allied heavy bombers and nine other Allied planes were missing. In all the Mediterranean Allied air force flew 2,300 sorties.

Five oil refineries in the Vienna area and one in Brailakwa, capital of the puppet government of Rumania, were hit, Turgoil in Yugoslavia also were attacked.

ROBOT PLANES STRIKE BLINDLY AT S. ENGLAND

One Made a Direct Hit on Nurses Home At a Hospital And A Number Killed

NEW DEFENCES

By JAMES F. KING
(Associated Press Staff Writer)

London, June 17 (AP) — Germany's new explosive robot planes, dispatched across the English Channel in weather that sharply reduced Allied air activity, struck blindly in parts of Southern England in intermittent attacks throughout night and morning hours today.

Several persons were killed and a number injured when one of the fire-spitting projectiles made a direct hit on a nurses' home at a hospital.

Rescuers said they thought four people for six hours in the flames before rescue crews could reach them, but when the four were released water in the cellar almost reached their necks.

During the night British planes, following in the path of American heavy bombers late yesterday struck the Pas-De-Calais coast—the region from which the robots are believed launched.

Try to Confuse Defenders.

Fast German night fighter-bombers also rumbled through the English skies, ducking in and out of the clouds in attempts to confuse the apparent attempt to confuse British defenses. Such reports as came in said anti-aircraft batteries plunged steadily upward, and a number of the pilotless craft were reported crashed.

Putting caution to one side curiosity, people of Southern England flocked into bomb shelters, most of which were jammed throughout the night.

Fighter pilots are expected to lead the attacks against the robot planes. Hits may not always explode the craft, for the pilots may elect to bring them down where they would do the least harm.

While everyone is speculating about the robots, this much seems to be agreed—that they have high speed and a bright red light tail, and flame from their exhaust. They run on a straight low course, and hum rhythmically like a motorcycle.

Mounting Morale

Morning newspapers asserted that if Hitler had hoped to disrupt British morale and production that he would be wide of the mark.

"The British people will not be intimidated by these attacks on the defenders of the major tasks ahead," declared the Daily Express in a press.

Each smoking missile that comes through the air over here is one piece of German output less, one piece of German steel or armies fighting for the liberation of Europe," the Express editorial said. "Any way our men in Normandy are fighting for them, too. Each one is a fact that once again British and British soldiers in the end this time we share some of the risks of an army on the offensive, an army marching to victory."

Steamship Watuka Sunk by U-Boat Off the Coast of Nova Scotia

Halifax, June 17 —(CP)— Resurgence of U-boat warfare in the Canadian Atlantic coast last March was revealed last night when authorities permitted publication of the sinking off the coast of Nova Scotia steamship Watuka just off Halifax harbor.

The 5-year-old vessel, one of the British ships along the Canadian coastline seaboard, went down March 22, with the loss of one man after it was struck by two torpedoes, according to crewmen, as they landed at Halifax with a cargo of coal from Louisburg, N.S.

Twenty-five others escaped, most of them piling into a leaking lifeboat that soon was awash and a little jollyboat which sank just after they had transferred survivors. Anticosti picked up the survivors an hour after the 1,631-ton Watuka had plunged under.

The explosions rocked the little collier, crew members said, as two torpedoes, ripped into the ship on the pre-dawn dark and the second blast broke the vessel in two. One of Watuka's own ammunition for her defensive gun, fired as she was struck by the torpedoes, according to crewmen, as she foundered. Halifax with a cargo of coal from Louisburg, N.S.

The Watuka was owned by Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation. She had been in the coal-carrying trade as a familiar figure along the east coast and at St. Lawrence river ports.

Nazi Installations In Pas De Calais Area Heavily Hit

Believed Pilotless Planes are Being Launched From This Sector

33 BOMBERS LOST

By AUSTIN BEALMAR
Associated Press War Correspondent

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 17 (AP)— About 1,008 RAF heavy bombers smashed Friday night at enemy installations in the Pas de Calais area of France, from where the Germans are believed to be launching the pilotless planes, while other British formations hammered rail centers at Duisburg and Berlin and targets in Berlin.

R.C.A.F. heavybombers flew with the R.A.F. night raiders, sharing in the attacks on a synthetic oil plant at Sterkrade in the Ruhr and on the Pas De Calais installations.

Thirty-three bombers were lost of the two were missing, the Air Ministry said.

The night blow against Pas De Calais came a few hours after United States heavy bombers in the first hours of daylight yesterday had poured these same installations.

Despite clear and starlit skies at that portion of the French coast nearest to England—an area hattered repeatedly before the invasion—the bombers kept their more serious robot planes hurtling across the channel last night in a weather pattern like that of yesterday and the previous night. Damage and casualties were caught in several places in England.

Weather Hampers Flyers.

Although miserable flying weather once more hampered the air support of the invasion armies yesterday, Supreme Headquarters said 1,500 sorties were flown by Allied air units—about 1,000 of them by American heavy bombers and fighters to escort in the twilight smash at the Pas De Calais area.

The night attack on Berlin was made by Mosquitos, the plywood bombers, Lancasters and Halifaxes, continued the Allied campaign Friday at dry-range. Mosquito bombers have been dumping tons of explosives on the Nazi capital's synthetic oil plant at Sterkrade, about five miles north of Duisburg. A new attack on Berlin with the R.A.F. has been over Germany in strength.

The fleet of American heavy bombers also hit three Nazi airfields in the area of Paris and Amiens, 30 miles northeast of Paris to Calais. One bomber was lost in escorting fighters failed to return. One German plane was shot down.

Berlin, where the residents are being told to expect the full fury of the "avenging" Allied raids with their new pilotless planes, was attacked by swift twin-engined Mosquitos.

Kohima-Imphal Road Cleared In Matter of Weeks

Kandy, Ceylon, June 17 — (CP)— A headquarters spokesman in reviewing operations in southern India's east border region predicted today that Japanese would be cleared from the Kohima-Imphal road in a matter of weeks and that the Allies in a subsequent action would throw the enemy back east of the Chindwin river.

The situation in the Imphal plain area was described as completely satisfactory. The air supply of Allied forces there is steady.

Many Japanese battalions were said to have been cut down to one-third their normal strength in recent fighting.

Heavy reinforcements were observed south of Bishenpur, 18 miles southwest of Imphal, where a new attack campaign is described as likely to throw the Japanese southward.

The Japanese are reinforcing their garrison at Akyab-Mayu-Mayhtna area in North Burma hit in doing so they have had to walk as the railway is not usable.

American Army Had 3,283 Killed Opening Invasion

With American Forces in France, June 17 (AP) — The American army had 3,283 killed and 12,000 wounded in opening the western front in Normandy, Lt.-Gen. Bradley, U.S. field commander, said today.

The total of 15,283 casualties was for the first 11 days of the campaign, he included reports up to midnight last night, Bradley said.

He paid high tribute to the courage of the soldiers in establishing a beachhead on the European continent.

Bradley said casualties on the beachhead, where the American 1st. Division and elements of the 29th Division landed, had run higher than anticipated, but that casualties in the Peninsula area to the west had been lower than anticipated.

tank cars, an armored car, a gun emplacement, a flak tower and a power transmitter, yesterday.

R. A. F. bomber crews said opposition to the Ruhr area last night was as strong as ever.

The Nazi fighters dropped what appeared to be a new type of flare over the path of the British bombers, and numerous combats ensued.

Several Flares Seen.

One Halifax pilot said the flares used by the enemy fighters burst shortly high in the yellow light, which lasted five or six seconds.

"Then it dropped about 1,000 feet," he said. "Then one more burst into an intense yellow light which again lasted for several seconds. After that I started falling once more and finally glowed orange and red before falling still lower."

Other pilots said they saw similar flares.

A dozen of these during the night.

The Flacher Tropsch Synthetic Oil plant at Wesseling, in the Ruhr and Rhineland, has a capacity of almost 138,000 tons a year. About half of the enemy's oil comes from synthetic plants, many of which have been damaged severely in recent attacks launched from Britain and Italy.

Berlin, where the residents are being told to expect the full fury and "avenging" Allied raids with their new pilotless planes, was attacked by swift twin-engined Mosquitos.

CITY AND DISTRICT NEWS

HAYING SEASON OPENS IN THURLOW

First report that the current hay-ing season has begun was received from Thurlow Township when it was learned that Mrs. Reuben Mitchell, 4th Concession, had mowed a field of alfalfa. It cannot be re-garded as authentic beginning of the haying harvest, however, as the field was originally intended for pasture. The field was mowed when the growth was the better of the cows. Mowing of alfalfa has not become general although it is now in the blossoming stage.

The hay crop in the Belleville area generally speaking will be well below the bumper crop harvested last year. Old meadows were bad-ly winter killed, with only new meadows showing any promise.

LT. FRANK CLARKE HAD CLOSE CALL ON ITALIAN FRONT

Sniper's Bullet Pierced Head Near Ear During Action at Casa Berardi

HOME ON LEAVE

Tells Exciting Experiences of Fighting Men in Italy

One-tenth of an inch, not much to measure with measurements go, but it proved the margin between life and death for Lieut. Frank Clarke, son of Dr. and Mrs. M. J. Clarke, Bridge street, Trenton, who arrived home from overseas unexpectedly Thursday night.

Modest to a degree, the youthful veteran of North African and Italian battlefields, was extremely re-luctant about talking of his experi-ences. The main thing he'd enjoyed, and this was echoed by Mrs. Clarke, "was coming back to my home." They live at 38 Sinclair Street.

A long scar, which stretches from behind one ear across his neck to the other, is mute evidence of one of the narrowest escapes from death thus far recorded in this war.

How It Happened.

The tall young armored corps officer, with a group of 200-odd Sherman tanks, mounting 75-milli-metre guns, was in the vanguard along the rough terrain during the fight for Casa Berardi.

Lunging ahead, the sniper-in-fested country, one of the big boys' favorite pastimes, Clarke immediately gave orders to go to cover assistance. A shot appeared to be opened the top of his tank tur-ret, the bullet head through the opening and watched progress of the extrication manoeuvres.

Behind him, on a Nazi sniper hurled. Lieut. Clarke's head was a jagged hole. The bullet rang out and the Canadian officer's head jerked from a regimental aid post. From this point he was taken to the British General Hos-pital, later being flown by air transport to Sicily. From there he was transported to Canada, where he was hospitalized for nearly six months, undergoing several opera-tions.

He has seen further action in the Orione sector, and on one occasion his troop won a platoon of infantry won a marked victory over heavy enemy formations.

But, from the information stopp-ed. He is typical of the real Can-adian fighting man, who has done his bit and has come back to enjoy some of the fruits of his hard fighting for, and not to publicize the things he has done.

Lieut. Clarke is well known in Belleville and prior to the war was employed with the hydro. He also earned his second lieutenant's commission with the Argyll Light Infantry, later graduating from the Brockville O. T. C. He enlisted in May, 1942 and December of the same year saw him overseas. . He left for Africa in 1943.

A reinforcement officer, he was sent with a reinforcing unit to North Africa in July 1943 remain-ing there until October, landing in Sicily, he was attached to the Cui-nas Regiment, a tank unit origi-nating from Oshawa.

"The Nazis, he said, had adopted a "cleared-area" policy in Italy. The peasants were poorly fed. Their cattle were driven ahead. No fresh vegetables were available, generally speaking, and for one to had money certain things were procurable.

Food and cigarettes among the fighting forces were plentiful. But, he added, the food was all canned stuff, and some fresh vegetables or fruit would have been welcome. Canadian cigarettes arrived at re-gular intervals and were always welcomed by the troops.

A Trenton boy, Lance Corporal Chester Leonard, on duty with the artillery section, was a member of Lieut. Clarke's troop.

One of the happiest women in the city was Mrs. Clarke, who knew nothing of her husband's return until she received a phone message from him on his arrival at Kings-ton.

Despite Rheumatism John Barnhart Builds Fifteen Rowboats in Year

Wife at 77 Keeps Busy Knitting 24 Quilts by Hand in Year

17 CHILDREN

Partial physical incapacitation, aftermath of a life well lived, does not quench the spirit of John Barn-hart, octogenarian of John Barnhart, elder-ly Deseronto resident, and the latch string is out.

Mr. Barnhart, who now hobbles around on two canes, does not let his physical ards stump him. Dur-ing the past year he has built fifteen rowboats, and is now busily engaged in building another.

Proof of this is seen in the fact that over a period of a year, fifteen flat-bottomed rowboats, product of his skilled hands, have rolled off the chocks at his modest boat-building "plant" in Deseronto. And he built them alone.

Mrs. Barnhart, grey-haired, and bright-eyed, equals her gentleman-ly mate in busy industry. Without bene-fit of a boat-building machine, lady, besides doing the ordinary day-in, day-out duties of house-keeping, has found time in 1943 to quilt by hand 24 quilts. And this year she has the record time in the record for the year previous.

She is the former Annie Moses, descendant of a proud Mohawk chief, and was born on the Tyen-dinaga Reservation, where she live-ed on a farm all her life until move-ing to Deseronto a short time ago.

Early risers, the couple look for-ward to the day activities. For instance some time ago Mr. Barn-hart, almost at the crack of dawn, was busy with pencil and drawing board, developing the plans for a barge he was to be built by a neigh-bor, one P. J. Brant. Later, he helped with the launching of that structure.

Farmers, practically all their lives, Mr. and Mrs. Barnhart are happy in their village environment, and believers in the fact that activ-ity is an important contributing factor to longevity.

City Will Observe Dominion Day Monday, July 3

By a 90 per cent vote, the Retail Merchants' Division of the Belle-ville Chamber of Commerce Friday night appointed a motion to observe Dominion Day on Monday, July 3 instead of Saturday, July 1st ca-lendar date of the holiday.

The motion, actually was an am-endment to an original motion that the holiday be observed on Sat-day.

The special meeting, called for the purpose of making the holiday date decision attracted the largest attendance of members in years.

It was pointed out that Peter-boro and a handful of town and cities of Ontario are observing Monday, July 3 instead of Satur-day.

The majority of members felt that Saturday is the day when far-mers and gardeners market their produce and fruits and it would be difficult to induce them to change to Monday and after their week-end.

In addition, it was argued, the Monday observance makes a more satisfactory weekend for those in-tending to holiday in other parts.

President James Calloway, was in the chair, with Mr. J. O. Hertly, sec-retary.

Rehabilitation of Service Personnel Held Responsibility Of Every Member of Commons

Pensions Minister Says Government Ready to Accept Any Suggestion

DEBATE ENDED

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, June 17 —(CP)— Com-mons members were unanimous that the duty of preparing for the post-war rehabilitation of service-men and women of every rank and every member of every service.

This responsibility was placed on the shoulders of all by Pensions Minister Mackenzie, who said the government would be receiving any reasonable and constructive criticism in the matter of legislation, establishment and rehabilitation programs.

Mr. Mackenzie spoke after sec-ond reading was given a bill estab-lishing a veterans' welfare depart-ment to handle all matters con-nected with rehabilitation. The reading ended a three-day debate on the bill which will now go into clause by clause study of the measure.

Toward the close of the debate, Defence Minister Ralston said the government had set up a depart-ment in members of the forces could not do so in the country was not going to be an easy task, but that it had to be done to provide all citizens did their part.

And, he added, nothing less than the best for those who serve in the Dominion's armed forces government and this parliament and for the Canadian people to give to the men and women when they come back," he said.

The trend of discussion during the debate was indicated by remarks when George Cruickshank, (L-Fraser Valley) said he could find no record of F. P. Poulliot (L-Tun-micoustas) having served in the last war or since the present war.

Mr. Cruickshank said he looked in the Dominion Parliamentary Re-cord after Mr. Poulliot referred to himself as a veteran.

Mr. Poulliot said Thursday night that during an earlier debate in the Commons he had been referred to as the Penguin of Vancouver.")

Mr. Cruickshank said Pte. Lt. Sinclair had volunteered several times for overseas with the A.F. but had been rejected and had ac-cepted a post as administrative of-ficer. He had served in the Near East, British, in the Middle East, in Italy and in the Ideal Age.

In 1914, Mr. Poulliot was 24 years old, the ideal age for service as a fighting man, he had volunteered as a veteran of the last war. In this war Mr. Poulliot had done nothing but represent the farmers' and their in-ters from joining the services.

"This may be fight-in so our-agreously against civil servants and against members of the armed forces doesn't know anything about a silt trench, sleeping slights on the battlefields, or anything about a battlefield," said Mr. Poulliot.

Mr. Poulliot spoke for the farmers always had his eye on the election battleground of Tunmicouata County, civilian life.

"I think I am speaking for all members of the House when I say I deem the fact that any member should object to anyone else's en-calling hon a penguin," said Mr. Cruickshank.

He said he had informed Mr. Poulliot by letter that he was going to refer to him in the Commons.

Criticizes Editorial

It was unfortunate for Quebec province that Mr. Poulliot appeared to be that province's spokesman, Mr. Cruickshank said. He believe had made a great contribution in this war and in the last war.

Before the veterans' affairs de-bate was resumed, Speaker Fran-cis Cher Obson read a statement in which he criticized a cartoon and an item in the Toronto Globe and Mail regarding the Dominion Gov-ernment's wartime secrecy censor-ship order. He said the editorial, which yesterday, represented the Federal government as being re-sponsible for the fact that the mor-tality of spirits authorized in On-tario was 13 ounces and in Quebec 90 ounces.

Col. Ohbson added:

"If the Federal government has nothing whatever to do with decid-ing what the ration shall be in each province, each province is entitled to receive 70 per cent of the quan-tity of spirits released for the year which ended Oct. 31, 1942; in other words, each province con-ceives exactly the same proportion of the quantity consumed in the base year."

Reference to Allowances.

Col. Ohbson expressed hope, that an announcement would be made that rehabilitation would not consist of clothing allowance for members of the forces.

Mr. Mackenzie said his depart-ment has had some experience in assisting men to be discharged from service in this war. About 136,000 have been assisted in this way. Out of the number some 13,215 have required assistance. The liab-ility of the pensions amounted to $6,780,593 as at the end of April 30, 1944.

Numerous suggestions were heard in the debate, which Mr. Mackin-kenzie spoke.

Viewed as those advancing sugges-tions was Rodney Adamson (PC—Dufferin-Simcoe) who said that veterans of this war are placed on farms they should be given train-ing before. Also sudden change from army life to the quiet, lonely life on the farm.

Responsibility a Debt.

King Hazen (PS—St. John-Albert) said Canada's responsi-bility to her returned men was a debt which should not be before gifts such as a $77,000,000 contri-bution to the United Nations re-lief and rehabilitation administra-tion, was made.

J. H. Kinley (L—Queens-Lunen-burg) urged that plans for taking care of returned men be made to clude provision for men of the merchant marine.

Tom Reid (L—New Westminis-ter) said no interest should be charged on loans to service men who wish to go back on farms after the war. If the men are put on interest-free property they would be able to in ten years their debt would not increase Many veterans of the last war had failed to make a success of farming because of the interest charges on loans from the government.

F. D. Shaw (SC—Red Deer) said the government should be prepared to guarantee full pay and allow-ances to service men and women until they could be restablished in Small Quantity Berries Offered

Substantiating early season re-ports that this season's crop of berries will be below normal, only a very small quantity of strawberries was offered on the local produce market Saturday despite the fact that they appeared for the first time around two weeks ago. Only a few farmers had them in to offer with several asking the ceiling price of 42 cents while the majority sold for 40 cents the quart box. By ten-thirty prac-tically all had been sold.

Potatoes eased again slightly in price with farmers generally sak-ing $1.50 per bag, although they could be had at $1 per bushel. On-ions and radishes were freely offer-ed, the former at ten cents and the latter at a dozen bunches for 10 cents. Asparagus was quoted at ten cents per bunch and rhubarb at five cents and 15 cents the bunch. One farm-er quoted peas in the pod at 25 cents.

On the inside market eggs held at 35 cents for first grade although a few farmers quoted prices slight-ly under that figure. Well-finished fowl could be had at 35 cents the pound while broilers were offered at from 45 to 50 cents the pound.

Whitefish dropped to 35 cents the pound while pike could be had quoted at last week's figure of 45 cents.

An almost record number of farmers offered their produce for sale with twenty-two different rigs having anywhere up to a dozen young people in them. Some farmers quoted rigged from $7 to $9 each.

EARL WOODLEY SHOWN IN G. & M. PICTURE

Photographic record of rescued Canadian seamen, who were landed after their small freighter was sunk in the Gulf of Mexico, appeared in last week's issue of Globe and Mail. Among those pictured is that of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Woodley, Ridley Avenue, appearing prominently in the photograph.

Learning of the incident only through the picture appearing, Mrs. Woodley immediately communicat-ed by telegram with the hospital to which the rescued seamen were taken at Corpus Christi, but head received no word from his son. By this it is presumed that he had left hospital and is either back at his home or stationed aboard another ship. The Globe and Mail pic-ture Earl Woodley is the seaman with his arm in bandages, Marine appearing on his sweater.

MUNRO

A large part of St. Aubin was bypassed on assault and there was fighting in the streets for nearly two days after the landing.

The easterners went through Vil-leville and swung southwest to Caen, only four miles from the coast. The infantry fought thru' woods on the outskirts of the town and finally drove the Germans from the town itself and opened a way along the road to Caen.

A reserve brigade of the divi-sion, an all-Canadian formation, came ashore about noon on D-Day at Berniercs where the beach was found to be lower, loaded and in satisfac-tory riding on tanks and on bicycles and forward to Anisy le Seac. Here where is passed through the eastern brigade and drove ahead to within the Caen road through Beaty to the area around Villers Les Oyeres, about five miles northeast of Caen.

As they got into this farmland area, Canadian tanks and in-fantry came out to meet them in strength. On the third day ashore a column of Canadian tanks and infantry bumped into a German tank force near Authie, three miles northwest of the outskirts of Caen. The Germans had a tank superior-ity, which in tank losses were considerable on both sides. The Germans withdrew first and then the Canadians fell back to better positions on the slopes.

Fighting Like Lions.

For the next few days and nights German battle groups of armor and infantry with mobile 88-gun artil-lery bashed at the 3rd Division all along the front and also hit at a British division on the flank. But the enemy failed to break the line although it was touch and go sev-eral times.

The division had not much trans-port with it on the assault but Kill-am and Priestman armored cars went about the front, parrying German thrusts with mobile 88-gun artil-lery and helped by the initiative of the strength of the formation built up.

Canadian artillery fired tons of shells into enemy tank and infantry and tanks and tough tank crews ranged along the front. On the left flank Canadian engineers showed courage and skill clearing beach ob-stacles under fire and enabling land-ing craft to come in the wake of assault troops and tanks.

Every unit in the division and all its tanks were in action in those first days and nights and the Cana-dian Canadian force was engaged at Caen.

That first week of fighting and consolidation, the soldiers attack that might break through was the most hectic I have ever witnessed. Enemy shells fell on the beach by day-light and night and attacks were launched by the division. Behind forward positions sniper bands were at work in woods and towns clear back to the beach-es. Few roads were ready safe to use and the enemy fliers also made their runs to the front in armored cars loaded with ammunition.

But the first 11 days are over and the Canadians are ready for the next move as Montgomery faces Rommel.

A Weekly Column Devoted to the Activities of the Members of the Armed Services at Home and Abroad

OFFICIAL WORD of the promotion of Major B. C. Sisler, who has been second-in-command of the unit, to the rank of Lieut.-Colonel and commanding officer of the Argyll Light Infantry (Tank) came this week. Interviewed by this column following the announcement, Col. Sisler stated that the Argylls, bearers of a proud military record for decades, is strictly a city and district unit.

"The officers and personnel are the regiment, but the unit itself belongs to the residents of Belleville and its environs. Personally I think the residents of the city should take more than a passing interest in its reserve units and consider them as integral parts of the life of the community.

"The regiment, under various commanding officers, all of whom have been efficient soldiers, has contributed a great deal to the country's war effort in contribution of man power. A large number of officers and men who received their early training in the ranks of this unit are now upholding the best of its traditions overseas, and this city should well be proud of them.

"The regiment as a whole," the new C.O. went on, "has also held a high position in militia regiments of the country and especially in reserve army circles. While recruiting has dropped off considerably since the threat of invasion on our shores has diminished, I would like to see continued interest taken in the regiment by all classes of male residents. Military training does not hurt anyone, and the Argylls offer something out of the ordinary long training lines.

"Personally, I would like to see a large number of men attend the summer camps where everything is being done to assure all ranks of the ultimate in training and comfort. It is not an arduous two weeks, and all those who attend will benefit not only from a training standpoint, but from two weeks of healthy outdoor exercise as well."

THERE WERE plenty of red faces when the galloping gunners of the 34th. Field Battery returned from their outdoor manouevres last Sunday. Augmented by personnel of the 47th. Field Battery, Napanee, the athletes of the 25-pounders journeyed down Point Anne way where they went into action in four different positions under weather conditions that were ideal. In fact the gunners came back with plenty of sunburn, sandwiches and an additional knowledge of actual conditions in the field. Signallers laid their cable, set up field telephones while the gunners placed the guns in battle positions. Officers of the battery alternated in duties at the command post, gun positions and forward observation posts. Bren guns and anti-tank rifles were placed in strategic positions to guard against surprise attacks by imaginery infantry patrols. Altogether it was a successful day from every point of view. The scheme was held under the supervision of Major E. G. Jones, regimental training officer, and Captain S. A. Sword, officer commanding the unit.

OPEN LETTER TO PHIL DODDS —Picton Gazette: "Remember Chippy O'Brien and the good old days at Picton Collegiate. Well, pal, Chippy is a major overseas now and by a strong quirk of coincidence his captain and now technical quartermaster is non other than Jack Yanover. Somewhere in offing, I imagine, is the irrepressible Ron Church, and that now famous old country hockey league should get a real re-hashing if and when the trio meets."—G.H.C.

THE GANG IN ITALY apparently have been getting plenty of mutton, ram sheep and lamb. In fact so much that Charley King cuts a doggerel rug with the inevitable army grouse. Here tis:

A Soldier's Lament

In England we did not complain
About the ham and spam,
It was our diet, in the main,
Along with bread and jam.
The food we ate in England,
Was always a surprise,
But here in Sunny Italy
The WOOL gets in our eyes.
From Monday until Sunday,
We feast upon the lamb.
A-hoping there'll be one day
We can eat a slice of ham.
On Monday we have mutton stew,
On Tuesday it's lamb fry's,
On Wednesday we're lambasted
With a dish of mutton pies.
By Thursday we feel sheepish
And we're not a bit surprised
To find a plate of spare ribs
Quite spare and undersized.
On Friday we rejoice a bit
When cookie serves us fish;
God bless the wicked sinners
For our only other dish.
Come Saturday, it's lamb again
And as an extra treat,
On Sunday we have mutton chops—
If we can find the meat.

No one wants to be a glutton
On a daily course of mutton.

TANNED A GOLDEN brown and looking as fit as the proverbial fiddle, Lieut. Godfrey Scott, formerly a pal of the fourth estate and now with the Hasty Pees at Camp Borden, was in town this week. Scotty has been in Camp Borden for some time prior to being on the staff of the Peterborough Training Centre. Incidentally he has transferred his military affections to a Machine Gun outfit and there is a more than passing possibility that the former deadline beater, and typewriter puncher may be viewing the war from England in the near future. Good hunting pal, and plenty of scoops.

A MEMBER of another Belleville fighting family was in town too, to say goodbye to his parents, relatives and friends, Lieut. John Stephenson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Stephenson, 105 Great St. James St. who went overseas in 1940 and came back for his commission 18 months ago, is perhaps by this time on the briny with the British Infantry as his goal. Jack came back as a sergeant in 1942 after serving with the First Canadians. He graduated in artillery at Petawawa and then took his infantry course at Brockville. He was sent to Halifax as an ack-ack instructor where he served for nine month. The job was boring and unexciting. Then came a call for Canadian officers to volunteer for service with British infantry regiments of the line. John snatched at the opportunity and you know the rest. His brother, Flying Officer Bill Stephenson is a prisoner of war in Germany.

VIA THE MAIL-BAG: A card from Pilot Officer Teddy Russell, formerly of the staff of this newspaper, who has been furloughing along the green byways of Old England. Ted was holidaying in Carnarvon, Wales, and sends his best to all his friends, including the femmes.

A line from Jack Foster in Italy who relates that "we are now hanging our washing on the Gustav and Hitler lines. This is nothing new as the Jerries used to do it, but in their case it was mostly underwear."

AC.1 DANNY REVILL, popular young R.A.F. ground crewman who has spent the past two years in Canada, and who has made many friends in the district, leaves Sunday for an eastern port en route to his home. He has seen service in Carberry, Man., Moose Jaw, Sask., Victoria Island, B.C., and Picton, Ont. His home is in Chelsea, London, England, and although Danny loves the old home, he says Canada is the spot for him after the war. He will go in service in England with aircraft control, ground crew, but his love is that part of the RAF which accompanies the army to invaded ground and consolidate captured airfields. In saying goodbye, Danny expressed his appreciation to his many Belleville friends, especially the members of the Army and Navy Veterans Association, here, for their wholehearted hospitality.

MAJOR JAMES McGRATH, H.Q. 33rd. Brigade Group; Captain Frank Frape, G.S.O.2; Lieut. "Sandy" Craig, H. and P.E. Regt., and a number of non-commissioned instructors supervised the practical examinations of Argyy non-coms at the Armouries Wednesday night. The candidates included Sergts. Fisher, Butler, Ketcheson, Roblin; Corporals Garrett, Pape, Darlington, Shepherd, Perschick and Lance Corporals Potter and Turner.

MEMORIES of foot-drill, regimental dances, tramping down windrows of soft snow and the fine hospitality of Lieut.-Col. Franklin, commanding the S. D. and G. Highlanders and Lieut. Col. Rudy La-Rose, Cornwall Training Centre commandant, were revived here yesterday when the smiling face of Lt. Doug. Kalbfleisch, 4th. Recce Regt., Ottawa, hove into sight. Doug was a member of a class of 20 adjutants who took an admin. course at Cornwall in February and came out with flying colors. He was formerly attached to the Argylls here as training officer and is now teaching the Ottawa troops the mysteries of reconnaissance training. He has been in the city for two days and besides renewing his many acquaintances has been instructing ten Argyll officers who journeyed to Kingston today where they wil ltake practical examinations. Three officers of the 34th. Field Battery will also make the trip.

RESERVE UNITS of the city are readying themselves for the annual summer camp training which takes place next month. Both units especially the 34th. Battery, are urgently in need of that very essential part of a military establishment, the cook. The battery has vacancies for two civilian cooks who will be paid at the rate of four dollars per day for a period of seventeen days. The Argylls will train at Connaught Ranges while the gunners will journey to the artillery ranges at Petawawa. And incidentally, due to the inroads made by enlistments in the active forces, and some members who find it impossible to go to camp, both units need recruits. Men and young men wishing to join these reserve forces should apply at the orderly rooms situated in the Armouries here.

LIEUT. McPHEE, 44th. (R) Field Regiment quartermaster, visited the local gunners here on Wednesday and explained plans now being laid down for their eating comfort at summer camp. He stressed the point that the utmost would be done to secure expert cooks and extra messing units for all concerned. The discomfort caused last year at Petawawa would definitely be eliminated, and all officers of the regiment from the colonel down are concentrating pre-camp efforts on this important phase of camp life. Plenty of rations have been guaranteed, and with the acquistion of good cooks and extras, this year's camp insofar as the various mess-halls are concerned, should be one of the best in years.

SNAP SHOTS — Gunner Frank Kikes received his governmental invitation this week and has joined the Navy. .. Major Sam Irvine, Camp Borden, reminisced a few days here last week. .. Instructors of the Argylls have returned from an A. and T. Staff Course in Ottawa. .. According to reports they had a Hull of a time. .. A gullible gunner, the butt of a unit gag, paraded before his O.C. and asked for a "dishonorable discharge" .. Letter from L.S. Joe Voison says he is in an eastern port, and getting "itchy feet." Joe is apparently awaiting a ship and is anxious for the tang of salt air. .. Lieut. Frank Clarke, well known Belleville boy and veteran of the North African and Italian war theatres, arrived home this week after being seriously wounded. .. His story appears on Page 7. .. Corporal Lois Pilkington, CWAC, recruiting non-com here, is on duty with a mobile recruiting unit thravelling through Ontario and Quebec. Late advices brings the news that the unit was in Pembroke and was proceeding to Quebec City. .. Private Florence Hanny, also of the CWAC staff here, has been returned to duty at Kingston?

THE LASSIES of the Canadian Women's Service Force here, under Major Marion Harden, threw an "appreciation" party for the men of the Argyll Light Infantry last night. The gals did themselves proud, what with dancing, eats and general fun. More about that next week. In the meantime, they are not forgetting their proteges of that ack-ack battery in Italy. Wednesday night they packed boxes containing comforts besides large number of softballs. Letters of appreciation from the gunners continue to come in.

Saving Lives of Wounded

The story of a great achievement has been written and will continue to be written on the battlefields of France and elsewhere by modern surgery, medical care and the efficiency of the medical services. Results that are amazing are being achieved. The statement was made late Friday by a senior United States medical officer on arrival back in England from Normandy that "less than one per cent of the wounded" reaching medical installations die subsequently. In the last war the figure was 11 per cent." In other words the lives of more than ninety-nine out of every hundred of the wounded in France are saved. In the ten days since the opening of the Normandy front, medical services had reached such a peak of efficiency that men wounded in France in the morning are back in the general hospital in Britain by about nine o'clock that night. Evacuation hospitals with nurses were set up within five miles of the fighting lines four days after the beginning of the invasion and were doing major surgery within two hours.

There is extensive use of penicillin and sulfa drugs in many transfusions of plasma and whole blood, which have been delivered by both ship and air. A new anaesthetic is in use, sodium pentathal, which is administered intravenously in an operation which is more quick in its action and more pleasant than ether, but is not feasible where abdominal relaxation is required.

There is a great humanitarian impulse at large in the world today. This accords with the desire of every one that the men who are wounded in battle be given treatment and care at the earliest possible moment. It is an intense satisfaction to relatives and friends and all the people that this great modern agency of healing and life saving by the medical services, by the Red Cross and through the use of blood donations is at work to repair the wounds of war with so great success.

Helping to Harvest Crops

This year the Ontario crops are expected to be very heavy and with the shortage of help on the farms the appeal has been made for volunteer help to go to the farms the land and assist the farmers to harvest the crops. The farmers of Canada have performed a great service in expanding their production in spite of the fact that little is help available.

What volunteer help has been able to do in the past two years is well known. In 1942 there were sufficient volunteer helpers to save harvest and many of the root and orchard crops in the face of a reduction of twenty-five per cent in competent farm manpower. In 1943 with still further depletion in farm manpower, and therefore doubly important, yield was saved under most difficult harvesting conditions of weather which required the crop to be harvested in the fields in the fall.

The present year is an important one and the province is confronted with what may be the most crucial situation of any of the war years. With the possible exception of wheat, the so-called prairie surpluses of food products have all disappeared and difficulty is being experienced in maintaining even moderate stockpiles of commodities essential to wartime requirements.

The present need is therefore for increased production of dairy products. There is needed all the coarse grains and other forms of fodder, necessary to maintain dairy herds at high production levels that can be produced this year. The shortage of coarse grains caused by the smaller yield in 1943 resulted in curtailing of herds and in decreased milk production. Besides milk consumption by Canadians has increased. Therefore it is vital it is necessary to see that every acre of all Ontario farms produce the maximum. The farmers have planted every foot of land each crop indications point to a bumper yield. This year's crops can replenish most of the depleted stockpiles provided Ontario citizens in urban centres give assistance necessary to harvest and save the crops. There is world the most acute help shortage is on record on the farms of the province.

In the question of harvesting crops as in every other form of effort the mind is for production. As conditions are better on the battlefronts there is a sort of complacency, but really all the more is the need for people to hear the call to volunteer help and offer their labor.

The opportunity is at hand to help Canada at the front and at home by helping to save and harvest the entire crops which will prove of inestimable value to the Dominion in this year of opportunity.

Now is the time to prepare to help the farmer gather in the wealth of the field for the good of the Allied cause.

The Work of the War Artists

(Montreal Gazette)

One of Canada's post-war needs will be the possession of a vivid and authentic record of these present war years. As for the written historical record, this no doubt may be best prepared after the war is finished, and after the evidence has been collected and examined with the advantages of perspective. But there is another form of war record that must be made now, if it is to be made with vigorous accuracy. This is the record by the war artist—a record that must be set down on the scene at the time.

And this pictorial record is probably the most direct and comprehensive form record that comes nearest to preserving all the atmosphere and moods of war. There is need for glimpses of action and battle. But beyond these, there is need to record all the varied activities that go to make up military life. As in the work now being done by British war artists, there should be pictures of camps and training, and battle areas and bases, and of the intricate functions of shipping and supply. Above all there should be a faithful and perceptive presentation of the human types of the Canadians who have left their civilian life to take up arms against a sea of troubles.

Canada already has some of its artists in the field. But the Government and the national gallery have taken a needed step to place this work upon a wider and better organized basis. A committee, headed by Rt. Hon. Vincent Massey, has been set up to select additional artists and to direct their services. The work of these artists will become the permanent possession of the Canadian people. More deeply, only their work will make a permanent possession of the crowded impressions of these unprecedented days.

Japanese Cruelty

(Under 17TH. 1914)

Nuns were forced to bow to the rising sun, when their Japanese captors decided to impress on the sisters that their Christian faith had not prevented them from being taken prisoners. When 67-year-old Sister Christopher failed to obey, a Japanese soldier struck her with a stick.

That is the enemy against which the Allies are fighting. The Germans have the distinguished distinction of being the only same desire to impress the people that totalitarianism is greater than Christianity.

At base, it is an inferiority complex that prompts the pagan Nazis and Japanese to scoff at the Christian teachings. In their inner minds, the Nazis and the Japs realize they are not as refined or as accomplished as the Christians, and they overcome their inferiority by a superficial show of what they believe is the superiority of force.

Best Blood Must Flow

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

It is in order, that all physically qualified Canadians on the home front resolve to become regular blood donors, returning to the service stations where they are needed just as our fighters rally again and again to the challenge of battle. The best blood of Canada is in the fight, and the remaining best blood must continue to flow from Canada in a life saving stream.

The ohly benefit of flattery is that by hearing what we have not, we may be instructed what we ought to be.—Swift.

SECRET COURAGE

Confucius, so historians say,
So tried to live from day to day
He'd square with rule and code and law,
Though nothing but his "ceiling" saw.

On him in silence looking down,
He feared to have his ceiling frown,
Believing, though in secret hid;
He would be judged for all he did.

"Do nothing," so Confucius spake,
"A blush upon your cheek to make.
The deed upon your soul will be,
Though nothing but your ceiling see."

No strength, Confucius thought, so strong
As keeping self from secret wrong,
Serving the moral code and law,
As if the chamber ceiling saw.

Yesterday there was a large turnout of the military at the Drake's Park when the 15th. Battalion A.L.I. was presented with the new colors, the due and solemn formality, the colors being the result of the efforts of the Soldiers' Wives League. There was a large crowd of people present from the city and vicinity. The colors were consecrated by the Rev. G. R. Beamish, Rector of St. Thomas' Church, the acting Chaplain of the Regiment. At the close of the ceremony Major Harnsar advanced and received the King's Color from Mrs. Hall-Well and Lieut. Hayes received the Regimental Color from Mrs. Ponton. At this point Col. Thinks Pilotless Plane Powered By Rocket Device

By C. B. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, June 17 (CP)—desperate to destroy Britain the British home front was suggested here as the explosive behind the mysterious flying explosives which have descended upon Southern England.

This opinion was expressed by an official officer, expert in air fights, who said the bases from which these projectiles are launched have been under intensive Allied bombings for a year.

This expert, who cannot be quoted or identified, said it was believed the new German weapon was one that was not radio controlled but was rocket or jet propelled on a pre-set course, timed to fly a certain distance and then drop, exploding on contact.

The tiny, explosive laden planes were believed to have a speed of 250 miles an hour and a comparatively low ceiling, possibly 8,000 feet.

The fact that they had not been used against Russia was taken as against England, probably London, was significant. If they were a deliberate and presumed defendable offensive weapon they would have been directed against the invading forces.

OWES BACK RENT

London, June 17. — (CP)—Cpl. Howard Pischer, New York, has run into a "tenant" from Israel, Germany, who owes him a lot of back rent. In his job as an interpreter Pischer was interviewing a wounded prisoner being brought back to England when the Nazi had moved into the home Pischer vacated in Berlin in 1933 to escape a Hitler purge.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

Canada was not called a Dominion until the time of confederation. The name was not an idea of one of the founding fathers who was inspired by a verse in the Psalms; "He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth." It was appropriate to call Canada a Dominion! Did it not stretch from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from the St. Lawrence River to the North Pole? Was it not a fresh appeal that the name was suitable, and so our vast country has been officially designated the Dominion of Canada ever since.

The term "dominion" has since been applied to other sovereign states in the British Empire, loyal to the King, but charter self-governing and capable of declaring war or not as they prefer, instead of being automatically at war whenever Great Britain is. The same status also has been given to Canada at the end of the Great War in 1918 was granted to Australia, New Zealand, South Africa and Newfoundland, but then Newfoundland has reverted to a Crown Colony, and Eire has achieved Dominion status.

For almost a generation after Confederation in 1867, progress was slow and disappointing. This period, a Canadian leader has said: "We were like a man trying to walk without having anything in traffic for them to carry; building canals and railways that were unnecessary; evolved from the imagination. The population was not increasing. Thousands, millions, was built before there was any other basis. It was in 1881 the Canadian Pacific Railway was launched upon its three thousand miles extent and although there was a period of freight or a passenger to be carried, nevertheless, during the years we were laying out the bounds of empire which encompassed a population; we were surveying millions of acres of land without settlers and we had to attract settlers in sight....." But the Dominion has grown, and the Pacific great achievements to its credit and a rosy future.

Torture Victim Thought She Was To Be Killed

Fort Frances, Ont., June 17 (CP)—Mrs. Viola Jamieson, 46, of Plantagenet, Ontario, suffered a terrible experience last Saturday when three robbers wrapped her in a blanket and placed her alone in a dark room.

She is in hospital here suffering from bruises on her face and hands and arms as the result of torture which Provincial Police is so grim cast of Fort Frances.

Mrs. Jamieson said she found the three men in her cottage earlier she return from a nearby lake. They bound her wrists behind her, ing one of them threw a blanket, and placed her and one in the car. "Don't holler."

"Another man grabbed me and took my two sons out to the roothouse where previously I had been taken. He told me to 'say your prayers up.'"

Mrs. Jamieson said the men burned her with lighted papers, beat her, choked her with a handkerchief, and started to strangle her so she would tell them where more money was hidden.

"When it didn't do them any good, they put me back in the root-house where previously I had been taken. They turned on the gas and shut off my chest, right arm, and right leg were paralyzed.

"I can't say how long it lasted. It was terrible. Then one of them said he was going to end it all.

"I told them there were some bonds in the house and they said they wanted cash. They still held me on the floor and one of them said: 'We'll see how much water you can drink.'"

Mrs. Jamieson said she thought they were going to drown her, but then a "friend" from Israel, Germany, who owes him a lot of back rent. In his job as an interpreter Pischer was interviewing a wounded prisoner being brought back to England when the Nazi had moved into the home Pischer vacated in Berlin in 1933 to escape a Hitler purge.

A Barrel of Papagaios

By Roland Hall Sharp
(The Christian Science Monitor's Latin-American specialist who recently spent several months in the Southern Hemisphere.)

The proverbial barrel of monkeys never has come under our observation. We often have seen a barrel of parrots. In this instance they are called "papagaios," for they are Brazilian birds from the Valley of the Sao Francisco River.

With dawn of the first day out on our stern-wheel river steamer, the papagaios roused us with their raucous laughter and chuckles and snatches of song that opened the door on a decidedly holiday mood. There were about eighty of them, not in a barrel, but in a cubical wire cage four feet on each side. They were just astern of my stateroom, across the narrow topside deck of a river boat that was lashed along-side our boat.

That there was real talent among the papagaios became evident at once. They spoke "Portugee" with deft, sometimes light laughs and were particularly effective. Some were quick and unhesitating at getting on a front in society. Others became more reserved as afternoon passed. The range ran from prim propriety to gusty and robust humor.

Diminutive Jabberers

For almost a generation after Confederation in 1867, progress was slow and disappointing. This period, a Canadian leader has said: "We were like a man trying to walk without having anything in traffic for them to carry; building canals and railways that were unnecessary; evolved from the imagination. The population was not increasing. Thousands, millions, was built before there was any other basis. It was in 1881 the Canadian Pacific Railway was launched upon its three thousand miles extent and although there was a period of freight or a passenger to be carried, nevertheless, during the years we were laying out the bounds of empire which encompassed a population; we were surveying millions of acres of land without settlers and we had to attract settlers in sight....." But the Dominion has grown, and the Pacific great achievements to its credit and a rosy future.

Across the front of the cage near the top sat nine of the birds in solemn and imposing papagaios on a red perch which that stout cord supported. Although the perch occasionally rubbed the way its ends was judiciously disbarred with filing dignity. While the rest of the birds postured and preened, cursed and clambered around or hung for long periods by their beaks to relieve the boredom of travel, these nine with age demeanor worthy of a Supreme Bench.

A constant preoccupation of many papagaios was to get out of the cage through patched-up places in the wire, or through holes more dubiously cut through the wood frame by persistent beaks. Many times a day emerged and would roam about the deck.

They made no effort to go farther afield and of course their wings were clipped. The escapees evidently enjoyed the attention they got from those inside, for the rest were constantly clamoring for how they did it.

One day a papagaio escaped before breakfast. When the steward tried to catch him, the bird flopped overboard with beating wings but kept afloat. It was touch and go for a while, but the boat was passing an island instead of being in the broad open expanse of the river. Pay ashore he neared shore, almost out of sight, but his wings were beating valiantly, and soon made it.

A mid-voyage the whole cage was swept overboard by a low tree limb as we passed close to shore. The cage fell several feet but caught on the stern of the launch and was saved from the water. Every vocal adjective in the combined vocabularies of the birds was applied to birds just caught and offered for sale along the river bank. Some of the inmates of the papagaio domesticates so thoroughly that the interior life of the cage often takes almost complete charge in captivity.

* * *

The coloring of the birds blended perfectly with the foliage thru' which we passed. Their predominating color was a bluish-red tone in varying shades of the remarkably vivid Brazilian forest. Their yellow trimming went with a flowering that in some cases was a deep crimson on the shoulder of their wings caught up the hues of vine tendrils and leaves in turn.

Moods of the papagaios varied from quiet meditation and boredom to almost complete silence. They were interested spectators of trees lying to the occasion with any excitement such as the appearance of a few Brazilian alligators, slithering off sunny banks into the tan waters.

On the night we reach Piraporo, railroad for the trip to Rio de Janeiro, that one unforgettable song came rollicking from somewhere below decks. There the barrel of papagaios, washed and slept for the night carried on. The song seemed to say that captivity, however distasteful it may be, carries with good humor and turned, as far as possible, into a carnival.

Ritual of Prairie Chicken

By ANDREW GRAHAM
(In the Regina Leader-Post)

If you were lucky enough to see the dance of the prairie chicken in the spring, it will provide new ideas on traditional rituals.

The chicken, a game bird, a sort of holy of holies, where the chickens hold their Spring carnival. Why they call it a carnival, I don't know, after a year, is beyond my shallow understanding.

All I know is, there is such a place; some of the male chickens or chickens' ancestors laid a magic circle in modern times and then invited them to perform the same rites, and place their feet in the magic circle that the old birds used. Spring reunion.

The chosen site or days must be marked in nature's calendar, and they urge more and more the failing of the sap; for the signal, to an outsider, is an interminable booming which has the complexity of the beat of a heart, in Spring.

When you look down on the feathered dancers, you see the components showing that the B vitamins, notably B-1, nicotinic acid and riboflavin, prevent or minimize shock, and the lack of which wounded soldiers suffer.

instead of a tribal dance.

The ring, whose diameter is 20 or 30 feet wide, is formed by a single file of circling birds; their heads are thrown back and their wings partly stretched and curving forward. As they circle, the ring, they make three or four short jumps, and utter a booming sound. Every once in a while a bird dares into the centre, to be followed by another and another, as if chases it back into the ring.

Then the rhythmic stamping of the Redman's dance copied from the birds, but it's not the reverse; the chicken must have come first, unless man is ready to admit he is only a copier. The customs are shaped with reason, but this reason is not the conscious motive whose reason is Spring.

The wild and unorthodox of the dance is a mystery to me, but the mystery is deepened for me as I watch the peaceful ceremony and listen to these drums of creation. I think of nature's ways and wonder their purpose was as peaceful as this.

New Medical Advances Reported to Association

Chicago, June 17 — (AP) — New medical advances, reported Friday to the American Medical Association Convention:

Blocking the four types of wounds to a stoppage in a few seconds by Red Cross plasma plus thrombin, a substance extracted from cattle blood. It does this in small wounds, in surgery where there is no access to the surgical removal of breasts and in skin grafts, reported by Drs. Lawrence Forrest Young and Benedict V. Pavata, Rochester, Minn.

Sorbic acid to check the extensive burns gets into the brain, liver and body fat and other tissues, and the shock that results from these infiltrations. Dr. Irvine H. Page, of the Naval Medical Research Institute, Bethesda, Md.

Penicillin was reported by several physicians as good and occasionally spectacular in treating gonorrhea; as the most effective medicine available in the kind of cases and infections and which endanger life; and as a probable life saver from fertile cells or infection in the abdominal cavity.

Dr. William M. Govier, Winnipeg, Manitoba, and Dr. Solomon Salan, N. C., reported dog experiments showing that the B vitamins

KING JAMES BIBLE

The actual work was begun in 1607 and completed in 1610.

It was published in 1611, four years after the Pilgrims had settled five years before Shakespeare's death and 11 years before the Pilgrims landed in Plymouth.

The new work was dedicated to King James and "appointed to be read in churches." Although there was a revised version in 1885, today it is the official version of the Anglican Church and the most popularized earlier English versions, and came to be known as the Authorized Version.

It has continued to hold its own against the some 250 versions that have been published in England since 1881.

The revisers worked in three groups, one at Oxford, one at Cambridge and one at Westminster. These groups were further subdivided to act as checks and counterchecks on one another. Every part of the Bible was gone over at least 14 times and the whole thing was then reviewed by Dr. Myles Smith.

Trenton Boy Weds English Girl in Italy

Canadian bombers and fighters roar through sunny Italian skies, and riding their wings like a tank cherubic little chap with the curly and arrow, who has "ringed" more Germans personnel in his sights in this war than any other.

It was a model-husband Cupid that "brought down" Flight Lieutenant A. A. Vanderhoof, son of Albert Vanderhoof, Trenton, and W.A.A.F. Muriel Pegg, comely British service girl in Leicester, England, in these addresses "Somewhere in Italy", and provided a wedding setting that outdid the wildest imagination of the best romance story writer.

The place: a little ruined Italian church tucked away in the Roman hills, the cathedral, a broad expanse of cloud-flecked blue for the wedding canopy, the distant cacophony of gunfire; the choir, a dust-stained group of airmen.

The boys did a swell job for the young couple, and "fixed" their ruins in some semblance of normalcy and covered it with flowers.

After the "army-air force co-operation" service was over, the officers' mess was a scene of a ray party. Where they got the food is a military secret, but say there were three wedding cakes; all sorts of other delicacies, and the champagne which wasn't sparkling apple juice.

The quote the words of the bride, in a letter to her friend, Gunner, R.S.M. "Belleville". "The wedding was the talk of the little village. We had to walk to the church, 1.30 p.m., but where we went and how we travelled, cannot tell. The Italians we visited were beautiful and we had a heavenly time."

QUINTE W.I.

The Quinte W.I. held its monthly meeting at the home of Mrs. Bert Ross, Bloomfield, on June 13, with an attendance of thirty including several visitors.

The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. Ross.

The minutes of May meeting were read by the Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. G. Bradshaw, and approved. Report of district annual was also given.

Mrs. A. Pott read the W.I. Creed and Mrs. A. Greatrix gave a talk on having "Your House in Order."

Mrs. Mikel gave a very educational address on the work of the Red Cross, from its formation at Geneva, Switzerland, to the formation of Belleville Red Cross in 1918 and of the great work which has been carried on in peace time and once again in the Second World War. Mrs. Mikel has received a large box of Red Cross Cross articles which she displayed, which she demonstrated to all. These goods, including bed-jackets, children's clothing, jackets, mitts. Much interest was shown when the box for the prisoners-of-war was shown. In closing she urged that the Red Cross work must not stop when the war is over, as there is always great need.

Mrs. F. Parrott moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mrs. Mikel for her address and demonstration. Appreciation was voiced in that a better understanding of the Red Cross work and its full scope, a deeper interest would be shown than formerly, in the work which is carried on by members. Mrs. Mikel. Several visitors were invited to join.

The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem and Grace.

Mrs. MacDonald and conveners served lunch and all enjoyed a social hour. While many of the members were unable to be present, their gifts will repaid when they listened to the splendid address and Red Cross work and to the different goods ready for shipment overseas.

Another pleasing treat of the afternoon was a solo by Mrs. Donald's flower garden, which was certainly a delight to behold and which proved to be a source of pride and joy to her.

WEDDINGS

REID—PROUTT

A very pretty wedding was held at the home of Mrs. Reid at 2 o'clock in the afternoon at St. Andrew's Anglican Church, Cobourg, by Rev. F. Preston, when Miss Jean Proutt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Proutt, was united in marriage to Mr. Albert Reid, son of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Reid.

Wedding music was played by a cousin of the bride, Miss Una Whitlow.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father, looking very lovely in a street length gown of forget-me-not blue sheer with shell accessories, and corsage bouquet of red roses.

The bride's sister, Ina, acted as bridesmaid and looked charming in pale blue sheer with shell accessories and corsage of pink carnations. The groom was assisted by his brother, Austin Reid.

The church was beautifully decorated with ferns, irises and roses, while streamers of pink and white marked each channel arch in the centre of which was a large white bell.

Following the ceremony, the guests went to the Hall, Cobourg, where a sumptuous dinner was served. The tables were set in the form of a cross and decorations were carried out in the dining room, the table centre and the bride's cake decorated the centre.

Numerous and beautiful gifts were received by the young couple.

The bridesmaid was a flower maid, was a hand-painted brooch; the groom, a necktie; the soloist, R.S., a Belleville". "The wedding was the talk of the little village. Using Henna on Hair

Lynn Bari has lovely reddish brown hair.

By HELEN FOLLETT

WE DON'T hear much about henna these days—there was a time when it was a beauty sensation—but it is still being used to a certain extent to create auburn glints in dark hair. Beauticians who specialize in dyeing some of their employ it as a carrying agent for certain chemicals: the so-called modern method, but not a carrying agents of that character.

If you like experimenting with henna one often saw heads like that, with a necklace of tennis pink or orange in spots. It is surprising that women took such chances with their hair. To color pepper and salt is the requirement of a skilful, yet these amateurs attempted it. Henna would redden dark hair, put a canary glow on white shafts. The only way to get the desired result is to seek the services of an experienced operator who would give conditioning treatments, then apply different dye.

Hot Henna Pack.

When the hot henna pack is used it must be applied, strand by strand, very quickly so that the period that it remains on the head is the same over the entire area. This can accomplish this only by working with a partner, in fact she can't apply it to the back of her head properly at all. The pack must be watched, so that it can be removed when the right shade appears.

The process must be repeated frequently, as the hair grows out in its virgin color at the rate of half an inches a year.

Henna Rinse.

A henna rinse is a different treatment. The leaves are steeped in boiling water for a few minutes —usually a handful to a quart of water—and used to shampoo the hair an hour, then strained. The liquid must be sponged through the head while the hair is still wet from the shampoo. There is no decided change in color, merely a reddish glint is produced.

Beauty shops offer all manner of rinses these days to please the customer who does not exactly fancy the shade of her hair.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

In Spite of Ever thing, the Shy Girl Is Still With Us.

"What's become of the shy girl?" is an inquiry which comes to this department pretty regularly. This question is put exclusively by bachelors. Of course, they seem to have lost interest in the shy girl, but the bachelor is still curious about the type. The unattached male has a feeling that if and when he settles down he'd like to find a girl who does more or more than he does.

Older men in the services, those between 26 and 30, when they begin to think of wives, like the less sophisticated types. They probably don't like the wise and heart reckoning, three-quarter length girls who are trying to get around with seed pearls and carried a bouquet of orchids at their parties. Miss Mary Fleming was her sister's maid of honor and Miss Isabelle Fleming, another sister, was frocked in white chiffon with dainty floral head-dress of pastel tulle in pink, pink and blue shades. The maid of honor's gown was of pink chiffon made and the bridesmaid a dainty old-fashioned nosegay. The bridesmaid had two attendants, Wilfrid S. Curry and Dennis Foley, the former being brother of the bride, and James Flemington.

The wedding breakfast was held at the Baltimore Hotel. Father Mather acted as toastmaster. Mr. Fleming proposed a toast to the bride and groom and to the guests in friend. The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, 38 Havelock Street, where Mrs. Fleming received the guests in flowered blue chiffon with red rose corsage and accessories in white. The spacious living rooms were trimmed in pink and white with a profusion of spring flowers and ferns. The bride's three-layer wedding cake was surmounted by a small cut glass flower basket and orange blossoms.

Later the happy couple left on a motor trip to points west, the bride travelling in a beige tweed suit with brown accessories.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Fox and Miss Kay Wood of Colborne, and Wilfred S. Curry, Dennis Foley, Frank Roole and Gerald Carrick, friends of the groom from the R.A.F. camp at Picton.

Congratulatory cables were received from overseas.

HEAD—STORMS

In the Uxbridge District Parsonage, Picton, on Saturday, June tenth, Miss Ann Storms, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Storms, Rochford's, was united in marriage to Pte. Albert Head, R.C.A.M.C., son of Mrs. Stephen Head, of Greenbush. Rev. Cecil Speight officiated.

The bride looked very lovely gowned in a floor length frock of gold silk jersey with golden-tan accessories and corsage of cream-white roses, baby's breath and fern. Miss Hilda Storms was the sister's bridesmaid in a gown of Queen's blue crepe, large baku tan hat, and corsage of pink roses, baby's breath and fern. Mr. Clifford Head acted as best man.

A reception was held at the bride's home at Bongards. Her mother received the guests in a blue and white printed silk dress, blue coat with white accessories and corsage of pink roses. She was assisted by the groom's mother, Mrs. Head, in a black crepe dress, black hat and yellow rose corsage.

A buffet luncheon was served to about thirty guests by the ladies, Helen Storms, Betty Lumley and Mrs. Gordon Head, and assisted by Ungar and Walter Bowerman.

After the ceremony cutting the three-layer wedding cake, a toast was proposed to the bride by the groom's uncle, Mr. Gordon Head, he was ably responded to by the groom.

The groom's gift to the bride was a sterling silver cream set, to the bridesmaid a silver and black compact and to the groomsman a tie and collar pin.

For travelling to Toronto, the bride donned a brown tweed suit, light tweed coat and tan accessories. They will reside in Greenbush.

Q. A. Association Takes Occasion to Honor Grad. of School

MRS. BARCLAY PRESIDES

The June meeting of the Queen Alexandra Home and School Association took place at the Picton auditorium on Tuesday afternoon with the Pres. Mrs. Jas. Barclay in the chair.

After the singing of O Canada, Mrs. Barclay announced that this was a very special occasion it not only being the eighth birthday of the Home and School but also the party in honor of the graduating and leaving parents.

A chorus composed of members of the graduating class sang two numbers which were very well received, namely "Sweet and Low" by Miss Phyllis May, Lenore Gray piano player, and "Drink Drink Drink" on her guitar. This was followed by Mrs. McGillivray and Lou Campbell yuled "Swallow." Then two talented young pianists, Mary Ann Sine and Lenore Gray, man played a spirited duet number.

Mr. Anderson, Principal of the Picton High School, was the first to address the graduating class. He began by telling them that they were about to make the second phase of their education and they were entering upon a course more important than they would forget the day they left school. It was towards an education—the first day at High School.

No one teacher could be given full credit for the success that they went on the Principal, but they have all shared equally in the responsibility. Co-operation. Contrary to the popular belief that education is a "one man" affair, it continued, there are some things that can be taught only by the use of these things and use them wherever they may be. Pupils should not be inclined to think as so many people do that education is a matter of schooling that your education is complete—but that it is only beginning. Education is a continuous process that never be done. We should all continue to learn as long as we live.

In conclusion Mr. Anderson went on to say, we have had a very successful course to make the most of your opportunities. Some of you have done well, others not, and some have not. This time make up your minds to do better than you ever have before.

Presented With Gift.

Mary Ann Emery on behalf of the graduating class presented Mrs. Platt with a gift after reading a humorous address. Mrs. Platt was taken by surprise thanked his former scholars and told them how pleased he was to receive it and wished them all the best in their new sphere.

John Francis on behalf of the students presented Mr. Platt with a fine party tendered them and also thanked Mr. Anderson for his assistance and help throughout the past year.

The Rev. Cecil Speight introduced the guest speaker of the afternoon Principal Ross Hall of Belleville Institute and Vocational School.

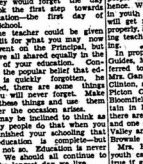
Mr. Hall's address congratulating the graduates on the point of education they had now completed, Mount Pleasant, Minto, Wellmans, Marmora, Picton and Stirling.

The meeting closed by singing the National Anthem and Grace.

Mrs. Donald's Invocation and Scripture Lesson gave inspiration to the regular business meeting of the Union.

Mrs. Parley's report of the last meeting was interesting and Miss Reeve's treasurer's report was most encouraging. The group leaders gave reports of the convening days.

A vote of appreciation was voiced to the Ladies' Auxiliary for excellent management of the preparation and serving of the convention dinner.



An interesting event closed the afternoon when Miss Reeve presented the Life Membership pin to be bestowed upon Mrs. Donald, the president, a gift to her from the Union.

EARL WHITEHILL BACK ON MOUND IN INT. LEAGUE

Former Major League Star Stops Rally Allowing the Bisons to Win

TORONTO DEFEATED

(By The Associated Press.)

Earl Whitehill, the old major league pitcher is back on the mound, hurling for Buffalo of the International League.

The former Detroit, Tiger, and Cub star relieved pitcher Jack Tising in the fifth and halted a Newark rally by disposing of the last two batters to insure the Bisons of a clean sweep of a twin bill last night, 4-0 and 4-3.

The double victory enabled Buffalo to regain first place in the standings.

Rochester tumbled Jersey City out of first into third place by taking a close game, 5-4, the winning run coming in the ninth.

Baltimore came behind to defeat Toronto, 5-4, and move to within half a game behind Buffalo. A homer by Felix Mackevicz tied the score in the seventh, and an error, a hit, a walk and a long fly by Bowie Moss scored the winning run in the eighth.

Jean Pierre Roy, recently acquired from Rochester, suffered a two-hitter to defeat the Syracuse Chiefs, 4-1. Elmer Harris hit the Royals' attack with two doubles and drove in a run, besides scoring another.

Former Boxing Champion Named Special Referee

Jack Sharkey, Ex-World's Heavyweight Champion, to be Third Man in Ring for Grudge Fight

GARIBALDI - KATAN

"We don't have to tolerate rough and tumble wrestlers manhandling referees as was the case at the Hume Arena Wednesday night. If the wrestlers want to get tough I'll bring in referees, who will make such men as Katan and Dunlop adhere to the rules and regulations," stated Promoter Frank Tunney as he announced he had engaged Jack Sharkey, former heavyweight boxing champion of the world to referee a return bout between Katan and Al Dunlop at the Hume Arena next Wednesday night.

"It was by public demand I engaged Sharkey for this important return bout. Belleville fans were quite satisfied that Referee Whittling Katan down and leaving him in "a bad way," prompted Tunney as he intimated Garibaldi's efforts to defend Norman Katan would be given every opportunity in their next meeting with Dunlop as the referee.

"Twice before I had to bring in Sharkey all of the way from Boston to quell such one-sided riots as Katan as Belleville fans will well recall. Come Sharkey next Wednesday punch on Jerry Monahan's jaw, basket grappler went down like a fallen tree. Undaunted Sharkey a free hand with ruffians like Katan and Dunlop as this should be the show the fans want," promised Tunney.

With Dunlop meeting Vern Baxter in another return and grudge fight and a Garibaldi-Katan go the show next week's ring battles at the Hume Arena look for real let-splitting crowds.

Toronto, June 17 — (CP) — From all accounts the "gowfers" are having one of the most successful seasons for a long time, and the old Scottish game is enjoying a sizeable boom. All over the country golf clubs are turning to the game who would never have approached the links before the war.

Hez Gilchrist Record) McInnes points out that the war-caused labor shortage that gave good-paying jobs to plenty of youngsters also helped out tremendously to popularize the game. Formerly golf was a rich man's pastime, and the common herd couldn't get enough time off from work or the expensive equipment and pay club fees.

Nowadays the old members can't even get near the greens for all the youngsters swarming the links. And in the tournaments the newer members are beginning to give some very mean stuff the last year or so.

McInnes predicts that golf will have gained more ground comparatively by 1945 over sports when the war ends, and that's a fairly safe assumption considering the sixfoot masquerading in the big leagues as hockey and baseball players these days.

Boxla Kapsuf?

Report around Montreal is that senior lacrosse will be highly conspicuous by its absence this year, through no fault of boola supporters. The senior league had all details worked out for the season, each club was given a $100 grant by the Quebec Lacrosse Association, and everything was all set to go May 26. Then it was discovered the Lachine Rapids would be available until July 11, so the league decided to wait. Now it turns out the arena has been taken over by a movie company, so that put the kibosh on everything.

Incidentally

Tom White, smooth soldier pitcher with Orillia, Ontario baseball team, is putting a little too much on the ball for the boys these days. Tom pitched a no-hit game this summer, and then came through with a one-hitter in Wednesday's other day. One opposing batter got a single, but no other man reached first base all day . . . Contributor is writing a great comeback story on Lawrence race horse Carbon Copy, quite a star several years ago, but then slumped and they said he was all through. This year he came back in his own and the other three starts regularly to boost his winnings to $14,000, a good figure for those small western purses.

Nelson finished the course in 69 for the second day in succession and Harold (Jug) McSpaden was another player to best par as he came in with the respected 68 to give him a 139 total for third place. Craig Wood was well back in the race with 146, two over par.

RED SOX'S STREAK STOPPED AT NINE BY WASHINGTON

Victory Vaults Senators Into First Division Ahead of Yankees

BROOKLYN WINS

By JOE REICHLER
Associated Press Sport Writer

Boston's nine-game winning streak which had lifted the Red Sox from sixth place to within a half game of the American League lead, was halted abruptly by Buddy Lewallyn, Washington's left-and-out right-hander, last night.

Cardinal blanked the Sox 4-0 with five hits in pitching his first complete game of the season. Blair Stone drove in the first two Senator runs in the opening inning with a single to raise his league leadership to 36. George Case stole home to add two more tallies for the lead in that department with 13 each. Washington's victory vaulted them into the first division, one percentage point ahead of the New York Yankees.

The league-leading St. Louis Browns scored a decisive 14-1 victory over the Detroit Tigers. Milt Byrnes and Mark Christman each drove in three runs.

The Yankees started a long home stand with a victory over the tail-end Philadelphia Athletics 5-1. A five-run sixth inning enabled Hank Borowy to hang up his eighth win of the year.

Fireman Gordon Mallberger received credit for the relief win when he fanned Manager Lou Finney, batting for Bill Dill and two out, to give the Chicago White Sox a 3-1 win over the Cleveland Indians.

Brooklyn took a close one from the Philadelphia Phillies 5-4 with the aid of a four-run outburst in the fifth inning.

The Cincinnati Reds clubbed four Chicago pitchers for 11 hits, including homers by Frank McCormick and Eric Tipton, to defeat the Cubs, 10-5.

'Mike' Whalen Names All-Star Team Running String to Four

Continuing the selection of all-star softball teams taken from the personnel of the Belleville and District softball association since the time of inauguration has brought a fourth selection within three weeks. The latest was submitted by a player, as a matter of fact an outfielder, and is none other than "Mike" Whalen, veteran second baseman with the Point Anne "Cementmen."

In making his selections, however, "Mike" points out he has endeavored to couple hitting and fielding ability in each and every position rather than centering upon either defensive or offensive players only. Mr. Whalen's selections are not too afar from those of his predecessors, Red" Townsend, "Shonny" Green, and Harold Hawkins.

Just for the records here are Mike's teams:

First Team		Second Team
Johnnie Bawden	Pitcher	Stan Loftman
Connie Harris	Catcher	Jim Hickey
Murney Green	1st Base	Alf Rowbotham
Art Ole	2nd Base	Frank O'Neill
Merkle Henn	3rd Base	Art Whitehead
Harold Reid	Shortstop	Tony Meraw
Mickey Ryan	Left Field	Chuck Montague
Jim Sarriage	Centre Field	Stan Amo
Everett Dickey	Right Field	Phil Lait
Clarence Tuttle	Utility	"Ki" Kiser
"Red" Townsend	Coach	Jim Sarriage
		Frank Sedore

There you have "Mike" Whalen's all-time, all-star baseball teams selected from the players who have participated in the league in Belleville for ten years. This time a coach was added, for no good reason at all, but it adds to the interest. Any more selections before the curtain rings down?

BELL SARGENTS RALLY TO BEAT DEACON LASSIES

Score Five Runs in Last Two Innings to Score 7-3 Victory

SMART FIELDING

Trailing by two runs in the latter innings the Sargent girls rallied to score five runs in the last two frames to beat Deacons by a score of 7 to 3 in Ladies' Softball fixture at the Armouries town last evening.

Deacons garnered a two-run lead in the initial frame by virtue of three walks coupled with infield miscues. The Sargent ladies bounced back in the third with a single counter with hits by Martinoff and Benn. In the same frame the Deacon crowd retained their margin after R. Scott came through with a timely hit to score a run.

In the fourth frame the Sargents went well in front by scoring two runs on the strength of successive hits by Clarke, Reddick and Martinoff. After the third inning in order in the sixth the Sargent lassies again went on the offensive to score three runs on hits by Leaman, Allison, Doolittle and an error by Fowler for the last two runners as Deacons in the last frame let one batter reach first.

Martinoff and Clarke banged out three hits each for the victors while Allison garnered a brace of singles. Pearl Tuttle was the only Deacon batter to collect more than one safely.

Sargents ..... 001 102 3—7 runs
Deacons ..... 201 000 0—3 runs

And Why Not!

The way the radio lads keep repeating themselves is an amazing study of human speech. How they can say the same thing over and over again by using different words has got me stopped.

It would be refreshing if one of them quit pretending to be excited and just came out quietly with the crack, "Well, here we are again with the same old thing. We gave you 12 hours ago."

More Selections

The latest to pop up with an all-time, all-star softball team selected from the Belleville area mushrollers since 'way back when is none other than Mike Whalen, star second baseman with the Point Anne "Cementmen." However, Mike goes one step further and names a coach as well as utility players and what-have-you. Incidentally when Red Townsend started this all-time, all-star business he named two coaches. However, along came Sonny Green and Harold Bawden to add utility players and now Mike goes one better and adds a coach. What's next?

At any rate we see in Mike's selections that Red Townsend Merav as his second choice for the hot corner position, no doubt taking it for his basis the seasons Tony played third base for the Point Anne "Cementmen." At that the same Merav was used to cover more ground around third each time most by we can recall. However, it is a puzzle how Mike placed Clarence Tuttle as his utility player. Usually the utility player named is a man who can play two only be used as a pinch hitter, but most any place on the team in an emergency.

Elsewhere in today's issue are Mike Whalen's selections selected for an all-time all-star team — do we hear any more?

Miller Keeps Rolling

Eddie Miller, fancy shortstop of the Cincinnati Reds, who set a fielding record for his position in 1942, making only 13 errors in 748 chances for a percentage of .983, seems destined for another record breaking season this year. Up to a couple of weeks ago Miller had booted but one ball in a game while handling something like 219 chances. As a rule shortstops are charged with more errors than any other infielder.

Leather-pushers at it.

Boxing is one of the principal sports encouraged by the sports officers in the various units of the armed forces, for no other reason than it teaches men to defend themselves in time of need. Also it makes a good form of entertainment as was definitely proven over at the Mountain View air station Tuesday night when Sergt. A. H. Cowling presented a galaxy of air force and civilian boxers headed by none other than Sergt. Bagnalo, heralded Toronto lightweight. Incidentally five Toronto civilian boxers paid their own expenses to Mountain View to entertain the show. All of which reminds us that Al Dunlop, the podgy wrestler from Kingston, Ontario one night a week wrestling grails at some armed service camp, usually Camp Borden.

Speaking of boxing P/O Charlie Box, Trenton R.C.A.F. sports officer, is linking up a gala show for next week that will feature a bout between Sergt. McPeake, Air Force heavyweight titleholder, and Vern Green, Canadian Army heavyweight colored champion.

Welcome back.

About a year ago Promoter Frank Tunney imported Jack Sharkey, the former heavyweight boxing champion of the world, to handle an important wrestling bout at the Hume Arena. At that time Sharkey proved to all and sundry that he was once the king-pin of the heavyweight boxers and he landed Big Sunday punch on Jerry Monahan's chin to no uncertain manner floor-ed Monahan like a beef. Tunney is bringing Sharkey back to take care of such self-styled ring ruffians as Al Dunlop and John Katan. However, what the fans desire is fair play for the Garibaldi-Katan bout as it is fast becoming the strongest of the "fighting Garibaldi's" is too smart and agile for the average Katan. This one should be interesting with Sharkey on hand to run affairs.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 407

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

No, indeed. There is nothing subtle about Horse Sense method of bridge bidding. The meaning of every bid is frankly stated. Nothing is left to the imagination.

Bids may start high or low. But the basic rules are all found in the series for opening bids of one and their responses. Although they cover a myriad of situations, they can be summed up briefly.

A better than average suit is biddable. Support is queen and two more, or any four. With equal-length suits, first bid the higher rank; with different length suits, first bid the longer.

A no-trump trick is a high card. A suit trick is a high card or a short card. An opening of one no-trump shows five high cards, two sure tricks. An opening one in a suit shows five suit tricks, four high cards, two sure tricks.

With not more than two tricks, responded passes. With more, he bids and follows the color of choice in T-N-N; takeout, assist, no-trump.

A takeout to a new suit is forcing for one round. A one-jump shows enough for a game and is forcing to game. If the one-jump is on the first round it also promises two sure tricks.

When a player sees (1) 12 tricks, and (2) knows what's trump, and (3) holds two aces and a king or better, he bids four no-trump. That's the signal for asking partner how many aces and kings he has.

In response five clubs shows no aces; five diamonds, one ace and no kings; each higher denomination at five shows another king with the ace. Six clubs shows two aces; each higher denomination shows another king with the two aces.

If a responder is known to have no aces, five no-trump is the signal for asking how many kings he has. In response, six clubs shows no kings; each higher denominations shows another king.

These are the basic rules for sound bridge. Try out some of them on this pair of partnership hands:

SOUTH
♠K Q 7
♥A Q 8 5 4
♦K J 8 4
♣A 2

NORTH
♠A 4
♥K 8 6 3 2
♦A 3 2
♣9 6 4 2

South opens with one heart. North makes a one-jump assist to three hearts, promising game help and two sure tricks. South then bids four no-trump, the ace-and-king asking signal.

North responds with six clubs, the signal for showing two aces and one king. With that information, south signs off at seven hearts.

Next you should be ready for opening bids of more than one. Ready or not, they are my next subjects. Reserve a front seat.

AT THE McCARTHY — Kirby Grant, Harriet Hilliard and Eddie Quillan share many hectic—and hilarious—situations in "Ill, Good Lookin," now at the McCarthy Theatre.

and Rick Vallin, in the leading male roles, completes a romantic triangle which is the source of much of the picture's interest. Supporting roles are played by Lois Albertin, Mildred Harris, Ralph Hodges, George O'Hanlon, Kenneth Harlan, Bobe Fuge and many other popular screen players.

"Nearly Eighteen," which combines dramatic sequences with swingy songs in a novel manner, was directed by Arthur Dreifuss under the production supervision of Lindsley Parsons. George Sayre wrote the screenplay from an original story by Margaret Englander.

The movie-defying service of the National Film Board is admirably exemplified in this month's edition of the "Canada Carries On" series. It tells the background story of the invasion. With the power of the screen, it depicts what must be taking place on the beaches of France, something that everyone is anxious to learn. It analyzes the technical and tactical problems that had to be solved before this historic operation was launched and it should thus be helpful in assuring the individual co-operation of everyone in the production ranks. The film was made in co-operation with the army film units of the United Nations and held ready for release to all Canadian theatres following the opening of the invasion.

"DESERT SONG" In Color

In what promises to be one of the most spectacular films of the year, Dennis Morgan and Irene Manning, appearing together for the first time, are starred in Warner Bros.' musical production "The Desert Song", which has its premiere at the Belle Theatre today.

Produced in brilliant Technicolor, the production is a completely modernized version of the famed musical stage success of the same name, with all of the original Sigmund Romberg music which included such favorites as "One Alone," "The Desert Song," "The Riff Song," and "Romance."

Told against the exotic background of North Africa just before Germany and France went to war, the story treats of a young American musician who takes it upon himself to protect the Riff slave labor from the Nazi aggression. Working through Carl Youssef (Victor Francen), the Nazi Arab, who is in league with them, the Germans persuade France to build a railroad from the interior of Northern Africa to Dakar. The Caid employs Riff slave labor to drive the railroad through near impassable terrain and the Riffs defy the Caid. Paul Hudson, played by Dennis Morgan, is incensed by the treatment of the Riffs and becomes their friend and champion.

Hiding his identity under the name of El Khobar, he uses every possible means in attempts to free the Riffs from the German-inspired French, and soon becomes a common scourges of the desert.

When the French authorities become aware of the real identity of El Khobar, they stage a surprise raid, and the Riffs escape only through the efforts of his friend Johnny Smith (Lynne Overman), a Riff newspaper reporter. In time Paul acquaints Col. Pierre Boisvert (Lee Bob), a French officer, with the true facts of the case, and he is instrumental in freeing the Riffs.

In Manhattan

By PAT USSHER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, June 17 — (CP) — They're taking down the old signs and putting up new ones outside Manhattan theatres these days. This week brings four new shows to Broadway, the most seen there after lengthy runs.

The newcomers are mostly light entertainment, none meaty enough to make the hot-weather customers start thinking furiously.

"Slightly Scandalous:" This newcomer brings Janet Beecher back to the New York stage after 12 years in Hollywood. "Slightly Scandalous" at the Windsor Theatre, is billed as a comedy by Frederick Jackson based on an idea by Rowland Bottomley. The idea is a bit flimsy and the play is poorly-written, peculiarly so for a farce in which drugs. Miss Beecher plays the part of Frances Stuart, an ultra-intellectual woman given to lecturing on world problems.

Old-fashioned: Up on the East side of 52nd St., at an old-fashioned melodrama, "Broken Hearts of Broadway" opened at the New Yorz Music Hall. The setting was appropriate — a huge hall, with the patrons at tables, able to quench their thirst as they watched. But the drama was weak even though the audience valiantly hissed the villain and audibly warmed the heroine against him.

Favorites depart: Scheduled to close tonight are "Arsenic and Old Lace," "Decision," and "Tomorrow the World." The first is a peculiar mixture of comedy and horror. The other two are serious plays on timely themes. All have had good runs on Broadway.

KING GEORGE PAYS

After the investiture, His Majesty chatted briefly with Keller before his return to the front, congratulating him, and asking about the 3rd division's part in the invasion and the casualties Canadians had suffered.

Keller told him its casualty figures were lower than had been expected.

The King visited French villages which had been in German hands only days previously, and men, women and children gathered to wave and cheer.

Later in the day he went back aboard the Arethusa and returned to Britain.

Last night the King sent this message to Allied supreme commander Gen. Eisenhower:

"Today I have visited the beaches of Normandy, which will be forever famous.

"All that I saw on the journey and on the soil of France has moved me deeply. I have come home feeling an intense admiration for all those who planned and organized so vast a project, and for the gallant and successful execution of it in all its varied phases, by every one of those now engaged in this great battle."

VARIETY OF MEANING

The word "snood" was pronounced "snewed" by the Saxons, "snate" by the ancient Irish, and is said to be strictly for unmarried women in Scotland.

AT THE BELLE — Breath-taking adventure, glorious romance and beautiful songs are the ingredients of the Technicolor musical, "The Desert Song," starring Dennis Morgan and Irene Manning, are featured in the new Warner Bros. film.

Picton and District

Driver Injured When Car Hits Tree in Village

Picton, June 16—Col. W. E. Manahan was admitted to the hospital here early yesterday morning, when his car he was driving smashed head-on into a tree in the village of Bloomfield. He escaped with lacerations of the forehead, severe bruises and a shaking up. Though his chest was struck by the steering wheel, no internal injuries have as yet been disclosed and his condition is said to be not serious.

Col. Manahard, engineer at Mountain View R.C.A.F. station, resides on the Glenora Road, east of Picton. He was returning from Trenton when it is believed he dozed for a moment. The car went into the ditch and struck a tree on the lawn of Harold Rolston's home. The steering wheel broken, Col. Manahard's escape from very serious injury is considered remarkable.

Ralph Rolston and an R.C.A.F. officer released Col. Manhard from the car and Dr. K. E. McQueen gave medical attention.

Council to Meet.

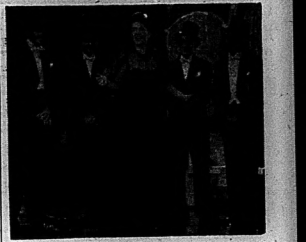
A special meeting of the town council has been called for Tuesday night to deal with traffic regulations in town and their enforcement. This action follows many complaints and suggestions, which were heard at a meeting of the Police Commission, itself a rather last session ordered traffic bylaws enforced and police handed out nearly 100 summons. Since then, some situations have arisen that stressed the need for action. One of these was that the Belleville bus, now being able to find parking space near the hotels, and not allowed to stop on the main portion of the street, carried passengers to the nearest vacant spot, often some distance away. The bus also left different spots and would-be passengers missed the bus when it did not call at the hotels.

At a meeting of the Police Commission, it was recommended that the space from the Royal hotel to the Ross Street corner be kept clear as a parking space for taxis; that double parking be allowed for the purpose of discharging passengers, or for persons to collect parcels at stores, but that engines must be kept running and only allowed a reasonable time for pick-up.

James Hepburn, told commission that with the restrictions on parking Chatham at its curb, he could not make deliveries of ice. Others voiced complaints and suggestions, and the commission will present its recommendations at special meeting of council, when the public is invited.

Find Missing Girl.

Among the residents of Milford district took part in a search to locate four-year-old Joyce Ann Fralick, wandered into a woods near the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Fudge. Frantic efforts failed to locate her and it was decided to call had fallen into a creek. All ended happily when a small mourner, Douglas Glenman arrived with the child whom he had picked up on the road, near the intersection of Milford, in the direction opposite her home. The child had been scratched by bushes and it was learned that she had wandered through the woods and finally came out into the open by following a stream. She was accompanied by a pup.



Home From Overseas.

Among the arrivals home from overseas this week was Capt. Geo. Wallace, who arrived in Kingston on Wednesday. He had been overseas since 1941, being a member of Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment. He suffered an injured ankle and was transferred to the R.C.A.M.C. Suffering from bronchitis, his medical category was lowered and he was sent home. Capt. Wallace, whose wife resides at Wellington, today saw for the first time his daughter, Beverly Anne, who was born two and one-half years ago. His mother, Mrs. J. Wallace, resides here. Major J. Innis, stationed at Kingston, is a brother-in-law.

Will Camp at Ft. Peter.

An anti-aircraft battery will spend the summer in camp at Point Peter and most of the permanent staff of 125 arrived yesterday. During the summer, the strength of the camp will be around 300, with groups of men taking two week courses. They will come from many parts of Canada for this training. The Y.M.C.A. will look after entertainment and recreation.

Site of the camp is on the shores of Lake Ontario, with a woods as part of the grounds. It is an ideal spot. A similar camp was held there

"Guadalcanal Diary"

The stirring drama of America's first smashing victory against Japan, the immortal offensive spirited by the American Solomons, comes blazingly to the screen with "Guadalcanal Diary," the 20th Century-Fox picturization of Richard Tregaskis' best-selling book, which opens Sunday midnight at the Capitol theatre.

While the picture is a vivid filming of the determined, relentless battle at Guadalcanal Island, it also captures the indomitable, wisecracking spirit which so characterizes the Marines Corps in the heart of America.

Preston Foster, Lloyd Nolan, William Bendix, Richard Conte and Anthony Quinn head the cast.

"Nearly Eighteen."

A dramatic story with a decidedly musical flavor is presented in "Nearly Eighteen," the newly cut Monogram picture which opens an engagement at the Capitol Theatre Sunday midnight as the added bill.

Gale Storm, ambitious for a career as a night club singer as she is approaching her 18th birthday, is the central figure of a story which is filled with fast-moving incidents, and which gives her ample opportunity to sing the catchy songs which she does so well. Bill Henry

"CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT" by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER 13

"I think Roberts meant well," Gala said with a tired sigh.

"And that's not so well," the Inspector grinned. "To no purpose entirely. Course the murderer has the stone all right, all right now."

"No, he hasn't," Gala said with the calmly I know one of the things Bruce wanted to tell—or rather, to show us. The glass he'd put it. Somewhere in the portset around here, where it would be —just a stone among stones to the casual passerby."

"You mean, he hid it outside in the woods?" The Inspector looked incredulous.

Gala nodded. "Yes. You afraid it's lost, now that Bruce is gone?"

"And what about the envelope with the directions I found in the safe—opened. He bury that too?"

"So far as I know it's still where you discovered it", Gala told him quietly.

"Crazy. The whole case is crazy!" the Inspector muttered disgustedly. "I been listening to Mr. Reid all the way from town, and I been listening to you—and I can't make sense of it yet. When you learn about hiding the stone and all them things? You been out here night before this too, Miss Burton?"

"No. I only drove Bruce out Friday night. That's all. I just told you I learned from a letter Mr. Forrestall wrote me," Cala confessed.

"Forrestall! No matter what, they's always Forrestall!" The Inspector combed his hair till it stood straight and his head. "Maybe it's just because he takes care of the Burton estate, but —well—let's start from the beginning once more. Mr. Bruce arrived in Clifford—when?"

"Friday a week ago."

"And stayed by himself in his house, didn't tell nobody he had come. Why?"

"To go over the various items of his inheritance without the well-meaning interference of the whole town—and straighten out his personal affairs".

"With Miss Kay? But Mr. Reid said he didn't tell her he was here. She found him in the street, by chance. Late one evening when he was taking the dog for a walk."

"I didn't know he was here either, until Thursday", Gala said, with a catch in her voice.

"And why did he tell you then? What he want to see you for?" the Inspector inquired.

Gala hesitated. "Is this necessary? I assure you, my talk with Bruce had nothing to do with his murder."

"How you know? What he want with you?" the Inspector insisted.

She made a palpable effort to appear casual. "He wanted to tell me about his secret marriage to Kay, and ask me to marry him, either their divorce".

"He did, did he?" the Inspector's eyes goggled from Gala to me and back to Gala again.

"He did. And I said 'No'." Perhaps I imagined it, but I thought she glanced at Sheriff Reid when she said it. "And I also said not to his offer of half the estate. If you must know".

"Well—so—guess you was right. Guess I didn't have to know all that", the Inspector apologized. "Just routine, you see, by so much private life, "What happened next? When you left again?"

"Friday night. He was in my painful position then, according to private life, "What happened next? When you left again?"

"Friday night. He was in my apartment when Kay discovered Stoddard's body".

"Hitting again! Seems like all he ever done was hide!" the Inspector exploded. "Why? Did he kill the Professor after all?"

"He certainly did not", Gala assured him emphatically. "He was in his room on the top floor when he heard a noise downstairs below. And when he went to investigate he found someone — in the library — turning it upside down. He said he didn't notice Professor Stoddard's body at first. Please don't forget the electricity was off. He had only a flashlight. And he had to put that down to get hold of the intruder. The next thing I'd hit him with something—the uranium, it turned out to be. Bruce said he kicked the stone out of his hand, grabbed it, and fled into the night. He knew quite a bit of Ju-Jitsu, you see. But he tripped over poor Stoddard's arms, and fell headlong. And the man got away".

"Hmmm. Why didn't he call the police and report what happened?"

"Do you think it's a pleasure—being charged like a criminal for investigation?" Gala parried ironically.

"I don't think", he told her without realizing what he was saying. I'm sure, "I know it was his soundest duty to make a report. How did he get away? How come they wasn't a sign of him left in the house?"

"Roberts saw to that. After Kay told him she'd found Stoddard's body".

"So that's what the scoutsgun been doing when it took him all that time to turn on one switch!" the Inspector broke out angrily. "When was that? When, and how, did Mr. Bruce come to your apartment?"

"Around six. Up the back stairs. We had to wait almost an hour for Roberts to come home".

"And then you drove him here, to this camp?"

"Late in the night, yes. After your men had gone", Gala said, and admitted wearily. "And that's all I know, Inspector. You've drawn your own conclusions I have but of me. Now are you happy?"

The Inspector was hurt, and said so eloquently, with dire threats against Roberts, Agar, Nellie Sloss and the whole "pit and casboodle" of plotters and liars—present company distinctly included.

He was just turning his newly aroused wrath against me, the "widow" of the second victim, when the sudden clanking of a police car diverted his attention opportunely.

"Sorry. That's got to be all for now", he told us grimly, getting up and walking to the door. "They's my men, come for the body. You got to go home. But don't leave the house till I call you for the final inquest this afternoon. I'll—mean, the ladies. Not you, Mr. Reid. You can stay at Mr. Reid. You can go to your shipyard. I wouldn't interfere with government business, not for no murder. And—you'd better not drive. You're all tired and upset and I don't want my witnesses in a ditch. I need 'em in the courtroom. Flynn, you drive Miss Kay, and pick yourself some good men for the other cars", he called to the Sergeant, who had been sitting in a corner, struggling with his notes.

The cars back to Clifford—Allan and I alone in the back of the police car. Flynn at the wheel—should have been a reprieve, and was not. My mind was too full of horror, too busy with conjectures about the murder.

Inspector Pettingill had pulled our wretched secrets into the open, Bruce's and Gala's. But that seemed all he had accomplished. Bruce's murderer, even if the reason for it seemed clear, was as much of a mystery as ever.

There wasn't a suspect—unless Gala meant "No matter what", when she said Forrestall" constituted a suspicion. And when Aunt Millie had mentioned Stella Avery's name the Inspector had frowned a little. But that might mean nothing, didn't say he attached the slightest importance to my assertion that it was Stella who had accosted in the Burton house that fateful Friday night.

Come to think, he hadn't asked me to Amy, shielded her love under Bruce's roof. Who was the man she had met in the room Roberts had filled with lights for her? Not the Jordan boy. Of that I was convinced. And whoever he was, had he left with Amy? Was she now with his father's office—long before six? That much was established by a number of witnesses—if he had stayed behind?

The murderer. Had he only been after the radium, or was there another motive? Was Bruce's murder bound up with Stoddard's diagnosis of Roberts' hands entwined in Amy's hair?

Roberts' hands. Roberts' shifty eyes, and his betrayal of Amy. Somehow the man was involved in the murders. I felt sure of it. Perhaps he'd killed Stoddard himself, in defence of his master's property, albit or no albit. But—"I'm a Burton man" he had told us defiantly. Could he have killed Bruce?

My thoughts swung like a pendulum now exonerating, now doubting the person of whom I was thinking.

According to Forrestall, Bruce had vaguely recognized the intruder—in restrospect—and was going to name him to the police after the interview with me. Was that why he'd been killed this morning? Had the murderer been aware of the intention?

The Inspector was right. No matter what, it always led to Conley Forrestall. He was the only one who knew Bruce's plans. He'd driven the car that enabled the murderer to return to town without meeting me—if he returned to town.

I came out of my futile reflections with a start when the car drew up at our door.

Gala's Aggy, her face tear-stained, was standing in the driveway, on the lookout for her mistress, and our door opened as if by magic, almost before Flynn and Mac with Roberts behinds them, down the step. Distracted, crying, they almost collided with Gala and me.

Questions and lamentations flooded over them, as if they had the master really been murdered" — Roberts with promises to serve me as faithfully as they had Bruce, and his uncle before him. And every one of their lachrymose outbursts began and ended with a respectful: "Mr. Burton, ma'am".

It was the last straw. I fled to my room, locked myself in and sat leaving Allan to deal with the gratification family relations as best he could.

Shortly before two the Inspector arrived, bent on getting me to the Stoddard inquest safely, and on time.

Before it opened a stout, balaln man was introduced to us as the Professor's brother, come to claim the body—and what inheritance there was, no doubt. Then the proceedings opened, with the Coroner in the Stoddard parlor. "When, and at the camp—presiding.

There were scarcely any witnesses. Only Roberts and I, outside of members of the police force. And the verdict was as expected: "Murder by a person or persons unknown".

Gala had not been called, in spite of her disclosures of the morning. The airing of our private affairs seemed to be reserved for the next inquest—of Bruce's murder.

The whole thing was over in no time, and would have been gratifyingly painless if the important question of my name hadn't proved of too much of a conundrum to Doc Tobie.

"Miss —er Wentworth, or Mrs. Allan? I say, Mrs. Burton?" he began tentatively.

It made me so furious the room spun around me for a moment. "Miss Wentworth, by all means", I assured him coldly. "I have no right to the illustrious name of Burton. The man I married five years ago—and who deserted me after three weeks —was called Allan".

But I have never used his name since, and have no desire to do so".

There was a short bursting of consciences. I trembled, but remained subdued. Most of those present knew Allan, I suppose. Besides, the evening paper not yet being out, they were ignorant of the second much more exciting murder and so couldn't connect the remark with it.

When it was over, and I was leaving the Coroner's office with Inspector Pettengill, I discovered that Conley Forrestall had attended the Inquest as a spectator.

He was waiting for us at the door, explaining he'd dropped in because he had had other business in the courthouse, and could he drive me home?

He could., With the Inspector's permission. But I noticed, through the rear window, that Sergeant Flynn's car was following us.

"Any new developments?" I wondered. Out loud, I'm afraid.

"Suspicion. Of me", Forrestall told me bitterly. "Pettengill's going crazy. He's had me on the grill for hours—days. Who's throughout, practically. He seems to think I've embezzled half the Burton estate and am committing wholesale murder to cover up".

He got out of the car with me in our driveway, and followed me into the house as a matter of course.

"I don't believe Bruce's murder has anything to do with Stoddard's death", he said. "It's strangest coincidence", he persisted. "So I'm sure it won't offend you if I come to the point and discuss our mutual business today".

I didn't know what he was driving at, and really had no wish to discuss anything. But at the same time I felt it was best to get what ever it was over and done with. And so I nodded assent and led the way to the library.

"It's about the inheritance, of course", Forrestall sank into a deep armchair gratefully. "I went to the court of probate the minute Pettengill let me go, to inform them of Bruce's return, and help in fulfillment of the conditions of the will, and give them the necessary proof of stewardship—which, incidentally would dispel the suspicion cast upon me of my honesty. Now, if you'll let me have Bruce's marriage certificate, I can take care of that part also".

It sounded really business and incomprehensible. "Why do you need my marriage certificate?" I asked stupidly.

"Why—to establish the relationship legally, so that the estate can be settled". He looked as if he pondered my fatuous question. "I will take quite a while though, I guess, what with the appointment of an administrator and all the rest of the red tape".

I didn't understand it at all. "But —aren't you going on to take care of things? That's the difference whether Bruce inherits, or Gala?" I asked.

"Gala?" Forrestall looked surprised almost dismayed. "Gala Burton has nothing to do with it whatever. She's not a relative of the Ellis Burton estate, by the simple act of coming home. And now he's died intestate, without leaving a living relative or direct heir of any sort. That means his widow gets it, I get the third, customary in this state, but the majority, rest and personal. And the widow is you".

I sat blinking—open-mouthed—trying to think what I had been told and finding it utterly impossible.

"That's sheer nonsense', I said after a while. "I don't want it that way. I've said I said Bruce should inherit, and if not Bruce, then Gala. And Bruce is dead, so now—it's Gala."

"You are speaking of Ellis Burton's will, and I of the estate of Bruce Johnstone Burton", Forrestall corrected me patiently.

"What's the difference?" I insisted. "You say I'm the heir. Well I don't want to be. I want Gala to be the heir. That's just you have to do whoever it is you tell these things —that he's giving it all to Gala".

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop started to light his cigar after dinner, saying to it as he blew a few puffs, my dear, and then I've practically decided to move heaven and earth and strain every nerve and sinew to get a new washer into that dripping bathroom faucet so it won't keep you awake another night.

How you've been able to sleep through it yourself is one of my mysteries to me, ma said. You must have either an angelic conscience or an acute touch of deafness, she said, and pop said, I have a touch of poetry, my dear, and to a poet a leaky faucet can be as restful as the lapping of the ocean on a calm moonlit night.

Ma took a poet's wife, ma said. Anyway, better late than never, she said, you've got a big object in very good adage, and to quote another practical proverb to the same effect Never put off till after breakfast what you can do after dinner. But on the other hand It was a very wise poet who wrote, Gather ye rosebuds while ye may, and now's a rosebud has a less exhilirating aroma than this cigar, he said.

That's right, procrastinate till you're so comfortable you will be too comfortable to do anything but by either time or reason, ma said. Which is one of the subjects of proverbs, don't forget there's no time like the present, she said.

Quite true by dear, and also time and tide wait for no man, yet when I feel regret at letting time slip through my dilatory fingers, I recall Cicero's glowing words, that the fire of spring the winter garment of repentance fits no man well, and that harsh practical proverb seems to have its soothing antidote, and that's what makes life an compliment, he said.

Well then rest assured that you isn't any more complicated than usual, because I put a washer in that faucet with my own busy hands this afternoon, and the entire operation didn't take more than 5 minutes, ma said, and that said, I'm sure it would have taken me twenty, so we've saved a golden quarter an hour for more perfect teamwork, my dear.

And let's go over to a movie to prove his appreciation.

For a Safer Community We Must Remove the Rat

(By W. H. Colclough in Stratford Beacon-Herald)

"The first night we killed sixteen rats," admitted the exterminator after his return from a visit to his next customer's place some months later.

Canada's rat bill is staggering. Nobody is able to work out with any degree of accuracy just what damage rodents do annually to the Canadian people. Some put the estimate at $50,000,000 a year, but others make it much more than that. It is quite obvious, however, that it is heavy, not only in property loss, but in disease and sometimes death as well.

The rat problem is world-wide, certainly; scientists have been seeking a solution for a hundred years, and have made little progress. Rats are the first thing that we they do the plague, for in many instances they carry plague.

The country grey rat is a most voracious creature. He is always on the hunt for food and will devour anything edible. He is a filthy feeder through inordinate and short circulation of saliva. He is the carrier of many a fire. He works his way into buildings and has been known to disfigure the face of a sleeping child. Rats are extremely prolific and a female may bear 100 young in one year.

Science has done much in keeping the supply of rats within bounds and has given us poisons and traps which may be used in safety, as they do no harm to human beings or domestic beings. Mechanical traps may be had at a small cost and are safe to operate. Poison baits and gases are death on rats and are satisfactory in dealing with considerable areas or warehouses. Nevertheless, they are of little avail against the rats having effect upon the rat population, and other methods must be adopted if we are to enjoy reprieve.

It is a biological law that life creates in ratio to the amount of material there is for the extension of life. This is true with rats. Where covering and food are available they will find rats in abundance. Where they find food and they will move along somewhere else. Keep on destroying their food or their harbor and they will be unable to multiply.

Canadian cities have a definite method of building warehouses, mills, stores, and even dwellings. At the present time new houses are being built which do not have rat harbors. Many of the buildings we have lying around much food for the rat to eat.

Rats are always dump in a mecca for rats. It is a curious thing that citizens living in a first class residential district will tolerate any hesitation, turn a vacant lot into a dumping ground for rats and a haven for rats and more rats. Old cans, roots, bone, grain and garbage are thrown over the fence or wheeled into the vacant lot, which makes a paradise for rats. It is rather inconsistent to complain about rats when we do so much to harbor them.

Reinforced concrete and a determination on the behalf of everybody not to leave lying around anything that a rat can eat will soon reason rid the land of this loathesome pest. Legislation will never solve the rat. It must become the concern of every man, woman and child. In this connection the files —if you destroy their breeding places and prevent them from getting food, they will perish.

If you want to do your bit in making the community a better and cleaner place in which to live, swat the rat!

Royal Navy Changing

Aboard a British Escort Carrier at sea, admiral did customs officials though war and its imperious necessities have brought a host of changes to His Majesty's navy.

Today many officers and men of the Royal Navy's equipment is made in the United States; they live on food from the Dominions's pipes to teapots — the latter one of the many gifts from Canada. A British warship, this ship, built in the United States, is outfitted from top to bottom with standard United States navy equipment. Even its crew, nearly all the officers except "the Owner" (the captain), were in civilian life Americans. Its captain, Lt.-Cmdr. Ian Baldwin in New York Times, each day has coffee served from their tot of "Nelson's blood" (rum), and each evening at 4.30 o'clock the boatswain mate's pipes skirl over the loudspeakers, and the British version of Cocktail or Welsh rarebit is the sleeping crew with the cry, "Cocoa, sir!"

"All hands! All the hands! Heave to! Heave to! Heave Ho! Up and stay! Lash up and stow. Wakey, wakey, rise and shine! Wakey, wakey's fine; you've had your time and I've had mine!" Such the boatswain's pipe still echoes out. Beautiful dreamer; lash up and stow. Rise and shine's the galley! Show a leg! Show a leg!

"Hands, ...Navy today, under the influence of war, is a picture of the best of new and old—the newest of ships and technical devices, and the traditions of centuries. Twentieth century Influence of American thought and ways, and the long struggle and backward stepchild of the Royal Navy, has been written a comprehensive declaration of independence and is now living up to its new status of ship-based platform, operated from mine-proof harbors, for the projection of air carriers, of sea-borne power.

"Boogie-Woogie" Preferred

"Boogie-Woogie" has taken a recent "concert" aboard this ship, formally prefer jazz music to Handel and Bach. Long gone is the old tunes of England. "John Peel" and "Who Killed Cock Robin" are only mild interest, but "Pistol Packin' Mama" and "Deep in the Heart of Texas" are heads of the "Canteen Flat" (compartment) where the king-size movies are shown. Western movies — both the products of Hollywood and some of the more realistic ones produced by our Navy—play a prominent part in the long sailors' lay-by.

So too, do American cigarettes and matches.

Royal Navy traditions and probably few British realize what "lend-lease" has meant to Britain, is considerably more than "reverse lend-lease" have meant to the British and Empire economy, in material, philosophical, cultural and spiritual grounds. The tie that binds is the only great fleets that will remain when the war is over. Already the two navies have closely associated in the last two years than in the first World War. In the first World War it was, generally speaking, the British who had the impress of good upon the American navy; in this war, especially the Pacific fleet has learned much from its principal naval ally, but Britain has learned more or less reversed. The process of exchange has been on the give and taking one; as far as this observer knows no instance of friction between the two navies has been withheld by either party.

A large part of American naval strength, of course, has been engaged in the Pacific in a war in which the British have not yet been able to participate fully. Yet the Royal Navy is preparing to throw its maximum strength against Germany. Germany is defeated. The destruction of Germany's industrial potential and even to some extent the night and customs service, the Royal Navy in the Atlantic — may thereby be brought to fruition by the Pacific fleet. It is the Royal Navy, for the first time in their history, which will be the key to the post-war common tongue. In some sense an Anglo-American Navy may arise.

New Ship, Old Traditions

This "baby flat-top", for instance, built to a standard and of more than 10,000 tons displacement, is supposed to be turned over to Britain, but, except for the addition of minor changes in its structure and for differences in customs and traditions, you would think you were aboard an American escort carrier. The naval planes the British are using are chiefly American — Grummans and Vought-Corsairs. The guns are standard American equipment.

But though this ship is only a few months old, it is already wrapped in an atmosphere of tradition. You feel yourself caught up in the long canals and unhurried pace of history—something foreign to the brash, hurried, youthful atmosphere of the American Navy.

Even the mess dump is a mecca for rats. It is a curious thing that citizens living in a first class residential district will tolerate any hesitation, turn a vacant lot into a dumping ground for rats and a haven for rats and more rats. Old cans, roots, bone, grain and garbage are thrown over the fence or wheeled into the vacant lot, which makes a paradise for rats. It is rather inconsistent to complain about rats when we do so much to harbor them.

Reinforced concrete and a determination on the behalf of everybody not to leave lying around anything that a rat can eat will soon reason rid the land of this loathesome pest. Legislation will never solve the rat. It must become the concern of every man, woman and child. In this connection the files —if you destroy their breeding places and prevent them from getting food, they will perish.

If you want to do your bit in making the community a better and cleaner place in which to live, swat the rat!

FINAL ORDERS BEFORE CANADIANS ATTACK BEACHHEAD

Lieut. J. E. Pincock of Winnipeg, Man., is giving final instructions to a group of his men before they leave their landing craft for the attack on the Normandy beachhead.

Pyle Tells of Great Obstacles Which Troops Overcame on Beachhead

By ERNIE PYLE.

Normandy Beachhead, June 14 (Delayed) — Due to last-minute alteration in the arrangements, I didn't actually land on the beach until the morning after D-Day, after our first wave of assault troops had hit the shore.

By the time we got here the beaches had been taken and the fighting had moved a couple of miles inland. All that remained on the beach was some sniping and artillery fire, and the occasional startling blast of a mine sprayering brown sand into the air. That plus a gigantic and pitiful litter of wreckage along miles of shoreline.

Submerged tanks and overturned boats and burned trucks and shellshattered jeeps and and little personal belongings were strewn all over these bitter sands. That plus the bodies of soldiers lying in rows covered with blankets, the toes of their shoes sticking up in a line as though on drill. And other bodies, uncollected, still sprawling grotesquely in the sand or half hidden by the high grass beyond a seawall.

That plus an intense, grim determination of work-weary men to get all the vital supplies and the reinforcements for the next more rapidly over it from the stacked-up ships standing in droves out to sea.

• •

Now that it is over it seems to me a pure miracle that we ever took the beach at all. For some of our units it was easy, but in this special sector where I am now our troops faced such odds that overgrieving ashore was like my whipping Joe Louis down to a pulp.

In this column I want to tell you what the opening of the second front in this one sector entailed, so that you can know and appreciate and forever be humbly grateful to those both dead and alive who did it for you.

Ashore, facing us, were more enemy troops than we had in our assault waves. The advantages were all theirs, the disadvantages all ours. The Germans were dug into positions that they had been working on for months, although these were not yet all complete.

A 100-foot bluff a couple of hundred yards back from the beach had great concrete gun emplacements built right into the hillside. These opened to the sides instead of to the front, thus making it very hard for naval fire from the sea to reach them. They could fire only from the beach and cover every foot of it for 5 miles with artillery fire.

Then they had hidden machine-gun nests on the forward slope, with crossfire taking in every inch of the beach. These nests were connected by networks of trenches, so that the German gunners could move about without exposing themselves.

Throughout the length of the beach, running signs a couple of hundred yards from the shoreline, was an immense V-shaped ditch 15 feet deep. Nothing could cross it, not even men on foot, until fills had been forced in at various places at the far end of the beach, where the ground is flatter; they had huge emplacements. They tell epic stories of destroyers that went right in to shallow water and had it out point-blank with the big guns in these concrete emplacements ashore.

When the heavy fire stopped, our men were organized by their officers and platoon leaders, headed machine gun nests and taking them from the rear.

As one officer said, the only way to take a beach is to face it and charge. There is no other way, but it's the only way. If the men are pinned down on the beach and in and out of action, they might well stay there all day. Fire will hold up the waves behind them, and confusion is multiplied.

Our men were pinned down for a while, but finally they stood up and went inland. And it was only that beach and accomplished our objectives. We did it with surprise and vantage on the enemy's side and every officer and man knew that in the light of a couple of days of retrospection. It is a hell of a lot to ask, but it is miracle that our men ever got on at all or were able to stay on.

Before long it will be permitted to name the outfits that did it. Then you will know to whom this world owes a debt. There were many casualties. And yet if you take the entire beach, there were appallingly few units that had a much easier time, our total casualties in driving back the whole German defense of Europe were remarkably low — only a handful in fact, as some of our commanders had been prepared to accept.

And these units that were so battered and shot to pieces were not all still, right at this moment, pushing on inland without rest, their spirits high over the success the victory almost reaching the smartaleck mark.

Their tails are up. "We've done it again," they figure. They sense that the rest of the army isn't needed at all. They have complete faith in their judgment in this regard is bad, they certainly have the spirit that wins battles and eventually wars.

On our first morning after leaving London the Army gave us an assault correspondents a semi-final set of instructions and sent us off in jeeps to separate groups, each group to be divided up later until we were all separated.

We still weren't given any details of the coming invasion. We still didn't know where we were to go about what, but with the word we would be with.

As each batch left, the oldsters among us would shake hands. And because we weren't feeling very brilliant, almost only words we said to each other were, "Take it easy."

The following morning, at soldiers' camp, I was called at 4 a.m. All around me officers were dressing and getting up. This was the headquarters of a certain outfit, and they were moving by motor convoy at dawn.

For months these officers had been living a civilized existence, with good food and cots and dressup uniforms, polished desks and a normal social existence. But now once again they were in battle clothes. They wore steel helmets and combat boots, and many carried packs on their backs.

They got up in the sleepy predawn darkness. One said to another:

"What are you dressed up for, a masquerade?"

Everybody was overloaded with gear. One officer said:

"The Germans will have to come to us. We can never get to them with all this load."

The most-repeated question, asked jokingly, was:

"Is your trip necessary?"

Three men had spent months helping to plan this gigantic invasion. They were relieved to finish the weary routine of paper work at last and glad to start putting their plans into action. If they had any personal concern about themselves they didn't show it.

• •

I rode with the convoy commander, who was an old friend. We were in an open jeep. It was just starting to get daylight when we pulled out. And just as we left it began raining—that dismal, cold, driving rain that England is so capable of. It rained like that a year and a half ago when we left for Africa.

We drove all day. Motorcycles nuzzled each of our three sections along. We would halt every two hours for a stretch.

At noon we opened K rations. It was bitter cold.

Enlisted men had brought along a wire-haired terrier which belonged to one of the sergeants. We couldn't have an invasion without a few dogs along. At the rest halts the terrier would get out in the fields to play and chase rocks with never any worry. It seemed wonderful to be a dog.

The English roads had been almost wholly cleared of normal traffic. British civil and army police were at every crossing. As we neared the embarkation point people along the roads stood at their doors and windows and smiled bon voyage to us. Happy children gave us the American O.K. sign — thumb and forefinger in a circle. One boy smilingly pointed a stick at us like a gun, and one of the soldiers pointed his rifle back and asked, "Shall I shoot him?"

"Shall I let him have it?"

The little girl, thinking the Lord knows what, made a nasty face at us.

• •

Along toward evening we reached our ship. It was LST, and it was already nearly loaded with trucks and armored cars and soldiers. Its ramp was down in the bow, several yards from shore, and being an old campaigner I just waded aboard. But the officer behind me yelled up at the deck:

"Hey, you! Tell the captain to move the ship up closer!"

So they waited a few minutes, and the ramp was eased up on its dry ground, and our whole convoy moved aboard. Being an old campaigner, I was the only one in the convoy to get his feet wet.

We had hardly got aboard when the ship was under way and we pulled out. That evening the colonel commanding the troops on our ship met with the whole invasion plan in detail—the secret the whole world had waited so long to hear, and once you heard it you became permanently sick at heart. At least you were committed. It was too late to back out now, even if your heart failed you.

I asked a good many questions, for I realized I might never be having when I spoke, but I couldn't think of any. Yes, it would be tough, the colonel admitted. Our own naval forces would support us, and get to go in with as few casualties as possible, but there would be casualties.

From a vague anticipatory dread the whole thing turned into a horrible reality for me.

I had always known this holocaust of our own planning would be. Yes, it would be tough, I could guarantee his own fate. It was almost too much for me. But I felt—after explanation—cheered me throughout the night. It was impossible to get to sleep, and then it was a sleep harassed and torn by an awful knowledge.

Toronto, June 16 (CP)—Frederick George Hilary Williams, an active Canadian newspaperman for 62 years died today at his home, aged 81.

Son of Charles Williams, an English war correspondent, Mr. Williams came to Canada in 1882 and joined the staff of the Montreal Herald. He worked on the Montreal Gazette, the Montreal Star, Toronto News, Ottawa Free Press, Montreal Daily Mail, Victoria Colonist and Vancouver Sun before he turned to free-lance writing in 1918. Beginning of Military Plan to Hit Japanese-Where it Hurts the Most

By THORBURN WIANT
(AP War Correspondent

Aboard a Superfortress over Yawata, Japan, June 15 — (Delayed) —(AP)—We are only ten minutes from Yawata, the Pittsburgh of Japan."

This is no propaganda raid. This marks the beginning of a military plan to hit the Japanese where it hurts the most.

We are in the forefront of scores of Superfortresses, concentrating tonight on Japan's biggest steel and coke works. One fifth of Japan's entire steel output is produced there.

Our Superfortress is piloted by Lt. Col. Warren Wilkinson, 36, of Lincolnton, N.C., and a training commander than a watch.

This Superfortress is longer than a Pullman, carries nearly as much gasoline as a railroad tank car, and each of its four engines is more powerful than a locomotive.

By the time we return, we will have established a world's record for long-distance bombing.

The Japs bragged over the radio weeks ago that they knew Superfortresses were coming from Western China and they were prepared for us.

But now we are only five minutes from the Imperial Iron and Steel Works and searchlights are frantically sweeping the sky. Ack-ack guns are winking like little mirrors on a night club floor—and suddenly, but the bursts are far from our position at this altitude. There are no signs of enemy aircraft.

Beaten to Target

At least one of the Superfortresses beat us to the target because we see several bomb bursts.

Wilkinson shouts into the interphone "It's all yours," and Capt. William C. Goldstein, of Indianapolis, and Lieut. Glenn Berkhiser of Albuquerque, N. M., prepare to drop their bombs.

The target is now only seconds away, but those seconds are like hours because the sky is filled with searchlights and ack-ack.

"There they go smack into their diamond steel works," yells Goldstein.

Our giant plane, relieved of its explosive load, nose upward.

Wilkinson sharply turns and dives in the direction of home. We look back on a fireball's dream. Planes are shooting at least 1,000 feet high from two huge fires, Several smaller fires are blazing up rapidly.

Sixty miles from Yawata our fires and those started by the Superfortresses following us are plainly visible.

Japan's vital steel works is being reduced to a huge rubbish heap. It will take the Japanese months to recover from this blow.

Gasoline is the chief limiting factor of future Superfortress operations. Now every drop must be flown over the Himalayan "hump" by the Superfortresses themselves.

AMERICAN FORCES BEAT OFF GERMAN ATTACK ROCKET-BOMB LAUNCHING AREA HAMMERED

Enemy Attempts To Break Out Of Cherbourg Trap

Strength is Being Built up on the Peninsula for the "Next Step"

MINOR LOCAL GAINS

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 19 (CP)—The American 9th Division has beaten off a German attempt to break out of the Cherbourg trap, repulsing a heavy local counter-attack and inflicting heavy tanx and artillery losses.

Minor local advances were made on other parts of the front with British elements fighting into the northern section of Tilly-Sur-Seulles while the Germans still hold the southern part of the town.

Headquarters said the Americans were building up strength on the Cherbourg peninsula for the "next step."

The Germans increased their shelling of Carentan southeast of the Allied entrapment corridor.

In Tilly, the battle is raging up and down the street. Heavy fighting continues from Tilly to Caen, Small Advances by British.

There have been small gains by British and Canadian 3rd Division troops in the area around Caen, while a small advance has also been made southeast of Bayeux.

The spearhead of the American drive to capture this big port, developed by Maj-Gen. Manton S. Eddy's 9th Division. It was this division that broke through German defences to take Bricette, Tunisia, 17 months ago.

United States forces that secured the beachhead ensure best advantage their break-through path to the Atlantic coast, which even last night was only a few miles away. were driving the Germans down toward La Haye Du Puits, big road junction seven miles south of St. Saureur Le Vicomte, into what appeared to be another trap, for one American transpeninsular spearhead has been within four miles of La Haye for several days.

If this spearhead takes the town of La Haye, the Germans in that area will be in another pocket, between St. Lo D'Ourville and the Atlantic Coast.

A third American column struck south of Lieut in Carentan and miles of St. Lo, important rail and highway junction in the Vire River Valley, 42 air miles south of Cherbourg.

One officer returning to Britain said it was quieter behind the lines on the beachhead than in the southern England, where the German sent over hundreds of rocket bombs causing casualties and damage, particularly among the civilian population.

But for days of incessant bombardment with the new weapon, the Germans had failed to halt the disembark of a single man on the beachhead.

On the beachhead side the German air force virtually had disappeared, bombs from Cherbourg and other ports of the Reich, causing no serious damage.

German troops in the Cherbourg area are not of the highest quality and they have been using many horse-drawn guns, many of which have been knocked out by Allied strafing planes.

The Germans have a strong perimeter defence around Cherbourg and undoubtedly Hitler's orders will be to hold on to the last. There is no chance of the German garrison to escape, since the Allies control all sea and air routes.

The German-held Channel Islands, which have many heavy guns, may give the Allied western flank a good deal of trouble, but so far British and American battleships have been able to deal with any coastal defences encountered. For example, the troublesome German battery at Maisy, just to the east of Ireham and the mouth of the Orne River, was silenced almost at once by Royal Navy Battleship Ramillies. It is now a mass of few Germans and a series left that could rake the invasion beaches.

While the Germans were expected to attempt destruction of the port of Cherbourg, they are unlikely to prevent its use by the Allies. The naval docks, especially, are a product of solid rock and there is little the Germans can do against these.

CHINESE TROOPS WITHDRAW FROM TOWN OF LUNGLING

However Forces Continue to Press Offensive Toward Burma

JAPS TAKE CHUCHOW

Chungking, June 19 — (AP)—The Chinese high command announced tonight the withdrawal of Chinese troops from the Burma Road town of Lungling.

The Chinese recaptured Lungling on June 10, and hailed it as the greatest success of their first major counter offensive of the war.

While admitting the loss of the town 30 miles west of the Salween river, the Chinese continued to press their offensive toward Burma and announced that other forces reached the outskirts of Watlen, 20 miles north of Tengchung. Tengchung is 40 miles northwest of Lungling.

Japanese troops have captured 2 important Chinese strongholds in their Hunan province offensive aimed at clearing the Canton-Hankow railway, and 400 miles to the north in Honan province have made gains along the Peiping-Hankow rail line.

The Chinese high command said Chinese defenders in the by-passed Hunan capital of Changsha faced the prospect of seeing their last route of retreat cut.

Conquest of both rail lines would give the Japanese a complete northsouth line of communications, which would neutralize some. Allied air fields and would facilitate enemy reinforcement of troops to any American landing on the China coast.

In the Hunan province drive the Japanese have captured Chuchow, 75 miles northeast of the vital railway junction of Hengyang and 25 miles southeast of Changsha; Siangtan, 30 miles southeast of the Siang river 25 miles southwest of Changsha, and Liuyang, 30 miles east of Changsha.

Invasion Weather

Dover, England, June 19 — (CP) —The wind rose swiftly in the Straits of Dover and by noon was blowing a gale from the north-northeast, with a temperature of 60 in the shade an hour.

Conditions at sea, especially in mid-Channel, were extremely bad as the gale piled the sea into a choppy, high-running surface. There were occasional sunny intervals with improved visibility but temperatures remained low.

The wind was coming from one of the worse possible quarters for Allied unloading operations on the beaches of Normandy.

RUSSIANS BREAK MANNERHEIMLINE MOVE ON VIIPURI

Capture Koivisto Fortress at Mouth Of Viipuri Bay By Frontal Assault

SECRET GUN USED

Moscow, June 19 (AP) — Soviet field dispatches declared today that the Red Army had smashed forward to the threshold of Viipuri, key city in southern Finland, after breaking the Mannerheim line and capturing Koivisto fortress at the mouth of Viipuri Bay.

Farther inland on the Karelian Isthmus the Russians were reported to have driven 2½ miles past the Mannerheim line on the Murtila sector.

While the Red Army's left flank had made the most progress along the Gulf of Finland, dispatches said the fighting on the eastern side of the Isthmus now was advancing along Lake Ladoga, capturing numerous points.

Marshal A. Govorov's Leningrad forces which launched the offensive nine days ago appeared to have broken the back of the Finnish army after piercing the enemy's three lines in the defence of Karelia and prospects for an early complete victory over Finland seemed bright.

Tremendous Artillery Barrage

The Russians' quick success was attributed largely to tremendous artillery barrages which pulverized Finnish positions. Front dispatches declared that for hours before the Red Army's secret gun, was used for the first time on the Finland front, the present drive.

The Red Army reached the Mannerheim line Saturday, three days after breaking the Karelia front. It was there that the old Mannerheim fora yesterday in a single day.

A Pravda dispatch said Soviet army men "electrified" the world the first view of the Mannerheim pillboxes which they broke through in the 50vlet-Finnish war of 1939-40.

The Russians attacked at dawn yesterday, overcame enemy pillboxes and trenches with artillery fire. Then the barrage only partially lifted barriers remained intact.

Three Days Siege of Fortress

Red Army infantry chased the survivors out of the Finnish positions, took the villages of Murtila and Ilialkirkola and pushed two more miles beyond them. The fort was defended by fire from Koivisto fort.

Yesterday the Red Baltic fleet promptly shelled Koivisto island in the mainland fort.

The Russians were reported advancing up Viipuri Bay, with troops moving in trucks and artillery towed by tractors pressing closely on the heels of the Finns.

Corvette "Belleville" Launched in Kingston

Mrs. Harry Rollins Christens the Vessel-Named After City of Belleville—Ceremony Attended by Number of City Officials and Residents

Gaily bedecked with the flags of the Allied Nations and topped by the colors of the British ensign, the corvette H.M.C.S. Belleville slid gracefully down the ways at the Kingston shipbuilding yards on Saturday afternoon, the christening splash of her side launching ex-ecched by the cheers of the many Belleville citizens who witnessed the ceremony.

Sponsored by Mrs. Harry Rollins, wife of Mayor Rollins, the H.M.C.S. Belleville made a perfect launching and was moved silently down the ways with the crack of the traditional bottle of champagne against her steel bows. "I christen thee H.M.C.S. Belleville, may good fortune always be with you," stated Mrs. Rollins as she cut the ribbon which sent the bottle of champagne crashing against the ship's side.

Members of Belleville City Council with their wives, together with a number of other citizens of Belleville witnessed the launching from specially constructed platform built at the bow of the ship. In the official party from the city was His Worship the Mayor and Mrs. Rollins, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Boyce, Mr. and Mrs. Reeve Ponton, Reeve Fred Chamberlain, T. G. Bishop, general manager of the Belleville Construction Co. Ltd., C. O. Boyd, of Kingston and Lieut. H. W. Gill, naval chaplain, stationed to H.M.C.S. Cataraqui. A detachment of sea personnel drawn up at attention lent a definite naval atmosphere to the launching.

About 200 Feet Long.

Actual launching ceremonies were in charge of Mr. Boyce who briefly described the H.M.C.S. "Belleville" as being a super corvette approximately 200 feet in length. When completed she will carry four times as much anti-submarine equipment as the first corvette built. She is the second last corvette to be built in Kingston, the sister of the ship launched in Port Arthur Falls, now being under construction.

Speaking on behalf of the ship he launching, Mayor Rollins stated: "We are gathered here today paying tribute to those gallant sons of this city who have left their homes to fight the supreme sacrifice, and others, and this very large party is assembled to witness unwavering determination of the Belleville Engineering Company and all their employees for the great contribution they are making to the war effort by the building of these ships.

Will Also Serve Navy.

"I would be very remiss in my duty if I did not, on behalf of my self and the corvette committee and my fellow citizens of Belleville, on this occasion say to you citizens from Belleville how grateful we are to you, for the work you are doing for your country. Your generous contribution this memorable event would not take place today, but for the splendid spirit that one of these corvettes now making up an essential and effective a division of the Canadian battle fleet, should be named after Belleville, because the City of Belleville is more than proud, that you have volunteered for service in the Canadian navy. I am proud to say that our city has more than its quota of naval enlistments per population in the Dominion of Canada. Also her Belleville on a new corvette.

Following the launching the citizens, Mayor Rollins, other visitors from Belleville, were entertained by the Kingston Golf and Country club where a reception and presentations took place. During the reception Mrs. Rollins, as sponsor of the H.M.C.S. "Belleville" was presented with a lovely silver tray by Mr. Bishop of the Shipbuilding Company.

In response to an address of welcome by Mayor Rollins, J. B. Boyce, as chairman of the Belleville Construction Co. Ltd., expressed a desire that the H.M.C.S. "Belleville" be converted into a Belleville officer and that many of her crew members be from this city.

With Be Completely Equipped.

With approximately $2,000, having been raised by the Belleville and district citizens who have sponsored the launching of the H.M.C.S. "Belleville" is expected to be one of the most completely equipped fitted corvettes in the service of the navy. According to the shipbuilding company officials it will take from three to four months to complete the ship, and therefore intensive efforts will be made to bring her to Belleville on her trial run.

FRENCH CAPTURE TWO-THIRDS OF ISLAND OF ELBA

Portoferraio, Capital Of Island, Taken Despite The St'ff Resistance Of Nazis

PRISONERS TAKEN

By LYNN HEINZERLING
Associated Press War Correspondent

Rome, June 19 —(AP)— French colonial battalions captured Portoferraio and now hold the "greater part of the island of Elba," Allied headquarters announced today, while on the Italian peninsula, Anglo-captured Allied troops are fighting on both flanks and in the centre of their big Anzio beachhead bridgehead of St. Pravola.

Beating down determined German resistance on Elba, the French have rounded up several hundred prisoners, including several high officers, a communique said.

Field dispatches said the French had seized more than two-thirds of Elba.

Before taking Portoferraio, the capital on the north coast, the French captured Napoleon's villa. The invading forces brought artillery against the German battery overlooking the coastal port of Longone on the east coast.

Increased Resistance.

Fighting with British 8th Army troops in Italy are meeting increasingly stubborn resistance as the Germans back toward the Pisa-Rimini line, but some ports have been taken and strong pressure is being exerted against the Gothboum German garrison at the central sector road junction of Perugia. In the Adriatic sector, Allied troops are approaching Ancona.

Fighter-bombers blasted the concentration of several hundred German. One fighter group sa. what looked like a big column of citizens out for a ride in horse shays, but when the pilots came down to strafe for a closer look German soldiers dived for cover. The ammunition-laden "shays" were sent up in a string of fiery explosions when the Nazis scampered across the fields.

The German air apparently are making increased use of horse-drawn vehicles, indicating perhaps a shortage of motor vehicles or a necessity of using horses to go over 1,200 Beachhead roads.

German Air Bases Southwest France Heavily Attacked

Bombers Drive Home Three-Ply Assault In Direct Support Of Invasion Forces

HAMPERED BY WEATHER

By GLADWIN HILL
(AP War Correspondent)

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 19 —(AP) —U. S. heavy bombers 500 to 700 strong hammered Hitler's rocket-bomb launching area at Pas de Calais today as more of the pilotless explosives were sent into England, and other big Allied planes struck heavily at German air bases in southwestern France.

Fighter-bombers, attacking at the end of the afternoon, drove home a three-ply assault in direct support of the invasion forces. One wave pounded trapped German forces on northern Cherbourg peninsula. Another destroyed a communication routes to the southwest, over which the Nazis were trying to reinforce their armored divisions in the Tilly-Caen sector. The third group bombed the area north of Paris, disrupting enemy reinforcement lines.

The American heavy bombers slashed at rocket installations after a night assault by the R.A.F., which one plane was lost, and a raid in the same area Sunday by 950 big U. S. bombers.

Airfields, Targets.

Fighters bombed six airfield targets including Bordeaux-Merignac, Cazaux, west of Bordeaux, and Rene Echue near the coast west of Cognac.

After a stretch of bad June weather still was hampering air operations.

Months of This Summer May Bring Full Success, Says British Premier

London, June 19, (CP) — Prime Minister Churchill in a speech delivered at the Mexican Embassy today said that victory did not know when it was coming until they saw the whites of its eyes, but the eventual will occur in the next few months which will show us whether we are soon to be released of the course which has been laid upon us by Germany.

The invasion was launched "in full accordance with the Russians and the decisions reached at Teheran," he added, "and although the execution of the plans adopted there is now being completed, it is being steadily unrolled, and the months of this summer may be the victories of this Allied campaign bring full success in the European theatre."

Touching on political aspects of the war, the Prime Minister said efforts were being made "to achieve permanent co-operation and to build up an organization which after this war will strengthen the belief that all our nations will well succeed in preserving peace".

"We look forward to the future in which the rights of small nations will be as much respected as those of the mighty and in which the only use their power can make is for the protection of the weak".

Never Falter.

Whatever the Germans are defeated "this year or next, the British Empire and United States will never falter or withdraw their hands from the task which they have undertaken," he declared. "Together with our Allies we shall go on to the end, and the end will be the more terrible for our foes the longer it is delayed. The execution of the plans adopted there is now being completed, it is being steadily unrolled, and the months of this summer may be the victories of this Allied campaign bring full success in the European theatre."

Orlando's Bond Is Forfeited To Federal Court

Saint John, N.B., June 19 —(CP) —With 15 dead animals picked up in mid-week alone, as a beverage, police accused this city today in search of 25 gallons of the poison still unaccounted for.

Sixteen are in hospital for medical treatment and some are in a critical condition, two long graves are being used for those more seriously affected by the alcohol.

Warnings were broadcast to the public during the weekend and hospital authorities reported that people were responding for voluntary treatment on Saturday alone. However, many of those who had taken the poison seemed to doubt it would have such a disastrous effect, and as a result the police patrol wagon and ambulances were busy making cases to hospitals after they had collapsed.

Allied Govts. Approve Cabinet

Rome, June 19 (AP) — The Allied governments of Italy and Greece, have approved the cabinet shake-up in Greek government ranks at the request of Prince Humbert, said it now has the confidence of the Italian government, it was announced today.

The Allies insisted that the new government assume all responsibilities undertaken by the former government headed by Marshal Pietro Badoglio pursuant to armistice terms of the terms of the Italian armistice, and make no change in the economic institution.

POSITION CRITICAL

Stockholm, June 19 — (AP)—Swedish newspaper dispatches from Helsinki today described the position of the Finnish Army as "critical" as a result of the Russian Karelian advances up the Karelian Isthmus.

Viipuri was acknowledged to be defended mainly by German Red Army troops whose weight of men and materials was said to be "overwhelming," the dispatches from Helsinki said.

LAST JAPANESE THROWN OUT OF ASSAM IN INDIA

Operations Proceeding to Drive Rest Off Kohima-Imphal Road

TROOPS STRAFED

Kandy, Ceylon, June 19—(CP)—The last Japanese have been thrown out of Assim, in northeastern India, and operations are proceeding satisfactorily to drive the rest off the Kohima-Imphal road in Manipur, it was announced today.

Large-scale withdrawals of Japanese south and east town of Ukhrul, 25 miles northeast of Imphal, were observed and the congested columns were strafed by the R.A.F. Allied headquarters said.

The monsoon was slowing Allied operations, however, and rubber boats were employed to maintain supplies and evacuate casualties.

Allied troops compressed further the Japanese defensive arcs at Maosama and Mytikyina in northern Burma.

Chinese troops are now about a mile north of Mogaung, after gaining 3½ miles since their capture of Warazup to the north, it was announced last night. A junction of Chinese divisions British air-borne Chindits east of Mogaung appeared imminent.

Near Mogaung River.

Chinese troops reached the north bank of the Mogaung river opposite the town of Mogaung, while Chinese troops on the Mogaung-Kamaing road were fighting flamethrowers and bazookas in the attack at Myitkyina.

The Allied setback at Lungling, 100 miles southeast of Myitkyina, was announced at Chungking, however, where it was said Chinese troops had been forced to give up that Burma Road town. The Chinese announced its capture on June 11 and declared it was their biggest success of their offensive west of the Salween river.)

On Scale They Are Appearing Now Bumble Bombs Only a Nuisance

By ALAN RANDALL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Somewhere in Southern England, June 19 (C.P. Cable) — There's a Wellsian atmosphere to the Southern England since Hitler decided to bring Britain's little people back into the front line by putting to use pilotless planes—or more correctly, winged bombs—which Britain have known for some time he had been holding up his sleeve.

It's a weird feeling, like getting a glimpse of some world of fantasy, when you see these queer, clumsy, bumble bombs or comet planes are being launched somewhere in the air and night, without regard for military objectives, the more vicious they are able it would become to attack.

The first reaction is that if Canadians and the United States are worried over this new method would be to push the Normandy invasion timetable up to the limit. Invasion would be out of range of contentional heavy artillery.

Need Bigger Launching Base

Air commentators suggested it was unlikely the new winged bombs could be built to greater dimensions than they are now, because would have to be made by providing more space for fuel which would reduce the bombload, unless the whole thing was increased in ratio. That would mean a bigger launching base would be needed and the bigger it was the more vulnerable able it would become to attack.

Only a Nuisance

Meantime, "sooner and too late" is the verdict of the British people by thousands months ago, they might seriously have interfered with invasion preparations. On the scale they are appearing now, they are only a nuisance.

The German-controlled Paris radio quoted a Berlin announcement that the Allies had begun a London blitz, targets hit by the rocket bombs included Plymouth, Southampton, Portsmouth, Weymouth, the Isle of Wight, Worthing, Eastbourne, Hastings, Folkestone, Dover, Margate and Gravesend.

HOUSE RANSACKED WHILE FAMILY AWAY

Sneak thieves entered the home of Robertson Collins, Trent Road, and after ransacking living room drawers and cupboards made off with about $3.00 in cash, Provincial Police were informed Sunday noon. Entrance was gained thru' a rear window while the family was attending church service. Provincial authorities believe it to be the work of juveniles.

NEIGHBORS NOTIFY POLICE AUTHORITIES

Becoming alarmed when a light was seen shining through a window in the grocery store operated by A. Cook, at the intersection of Donald and North Front Sts., neighbors notified police authorities of their suspicions late Sunday night. As the store is outside of the city limits Sergeant C. Arnott communicated the report to Provincial Police who hastened to the scene. However, nothing was found to have been disturbed and the residents of the premises assured the authorities they had heard no disturbances to indicate a break-in had been attempted.

Robbers Enter Front St. Stores Through Skylight

Gaining entrance through an insecure roof skylight window robbers entered the adjoining stores of Vermilyea's Shoe Store and Meaghers' Haberdashery, 264 Front St., and stole men's wearing apparel and gasoline ration books sometime Sunday night. The break-ins were discovered when store proprietors opened their respective places of business early Monday morning.

Previously to being divided into two separate stores the Vermilyea Shoe Store once housed the entire building that includes a semi-circular staircase at the rear of the building, half of which leads to each of the stores now housed in the premises. The robbers are believed to have gained access to the roof by climbing a fire escape ladder on an adjoining building.

Once on the roof it was an easy matter to enter the roof skylight window and from that point move down into either store. At Meaghers' men's wear store two suits of clothes and a hat were stolen while from Vermilyea's Shoe Store two cancelled gasoline ration books were taken. These books had been left with Mr. Vermilyea, local traffic licence dispenser, for renewal. Sergeant Doug. Ellis investigated the robbery and discovered the roof window insecure, Chief Probert reported today.

VIOLENT STORM IN W. ONTARIO

Electrical Services Disrupted in Some Centres but Damage is Not Heavy

(By The Canadian Press)

A violent electrical storm swept Western Ontario last night, coming as far east as the Toronto district. Telegraph communications and electrical services were disrupted in some centres. On the whole, damage was not heavy.

Two Hydro transformers were struck by lightning at Kitchener, and parts of the city were without lights for as long as three hours. Rainfall totalled 1.7 inches in four hours and slight damage was reported from flooding. Near Mitchell in the Stratford district a barn owned by John Ingram was destroyed by fire after it was struck by lightning.

There was little damage done at London but at Port Stanley, farther south, power was off all night and streets were flooded. In the Wallaceburg area rural electrical power was cut in half a dozen townships while lines also were down in the town of Dresden. In the Woodstock area some garden crops were flattened by the heavy rain but there was no other damage.

At Niagara Falls a bank of three transformers of the Ontario Power Co. burst into flames during the storm. They were believed to have been struck by lightning. They were used to export power to Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Two houses were struck by lightning in Toronto and the police radio was off the air for three-quarters of an hour.

West of London, telegraph service was disrupted and Canadian Press wires to London, Windsor and Sarnia were affected.

High Tribute Paid Fred Livesay

Toronto, June 19 — (CP) — The funeral of J. F. B. Livesay, former general manager of The Canadian Press, was held Saturday at nearby Erindale.

In attendance were men and women who had worked for and with him in the years he directed Canada's national news-gathering agency, and friends and neighbors.

The simple service was conducted by Rev. George F. Banks, rector of St. Peter's Anglican Church, Erindale, a friend of Mr. Livesay's who had shared common experiences with him in the First Great War.

In a brief tribute Mr. Banks said: "He was a man capable of great friendships who loved the beautiful; a man of strong ideas, deep convictions, yet one who was touched by the troubles of others." Speaking of his work he added: "As one man said yesterday, Fred Livesay did more in 20 years for unity in Canada than any other individual of his generation."

He quoted from messages of sympathy, including one from Prime Minister Mackenzie King and another from Ken Cooper, executive director of the Associated Press.

Representative of tributes from employees of The Canadian Press was one from Charles Bruce, London superintendent, who cabled: "It is good to know that the work he loved goes on in the spirit in which he conceived it and the reflections of his personality in those who knew him."

Kinsmen Tag Day Totals $1,076.47

Successful in every phase the annual Kinsmen Fag Fund tag day held Saturday, netted the club $1,076.47, the largest amount ever contributed to a tag day enterprise in Belleville. The entire proceeds which will purchase and ship 322,941 cigarettes, will be given to the provision of smokes for Belleville's sons serving overseas, Fag Fund Chairman "Buster" LaBarr announced today.

The response was far in advance of the expectations of the Kinsmen and only made possible by a number of personal contributions from firms, industries and private individuals. A list of the special contributors will be published in The Ontario Intelligencer later in the week. The tag day was in charge of Chairman Kin Ralph Ketcheson with Mrs. R. Ketcheson being in charge of the taggers. Especially of note was the tagging of six-year-old Marlene Halsey, whose father has been overseas four years. The Kinsmen are indebted to all who made the tag day the success it enjoyed to assure Belleville's own sons ample supplies of cigarettes for the next few months.

Preparations Of Overseas Mail Vitally Important

In this global war, Canadians are serving in many parts of the world. Their greatest thrill of happiness comes with their mail from loved ones at home. No other single element plays such a great part in keeping up their morale, states Hon. W. P. Mulock, Postmaster General.

Yet, through carelessness or oversight in the addressing of letters and preparation of parcels, more than 22,000 letters and 2,500 parcels every month require redirection or repacking in the Base Post Office.

If parcels are not properly packed, damage or loss of contents is almost inevitable, as well as damage to other parcels, and delays in delivery to the addressee.

Please help your Post Office also in speeding the delivery of mail and parcels to your relatives and friends Overseas by taking extra care to put the address clearly and correctly on each letter or parcel you send.

With the Post Office, in spite of manpower shortages, handling the greatest volume of mail in its history, your co-operation is vital and essential, and one of the most important things you can do is to make sure that your mail is correctly addressed and all parcels securely packed.

Directions to Follow.

Do these 3 simple things:

1. Make sure the address is clearly and correctly written.
2. Write a return address in the upper left hand corner of the envelope.
3. Affix the correct postage, and mail as early in the day as you can.

SABOTEUR BLEW UP 3 SHIPS

MAN'S BEST FRIEND

GERMAN

More than 1,300 American heavy bombers hammered oil refineries and storage plants in the Hamburg area and three enemy airdromes in northwest Germany yesterday, while 250 other heavy bombers pounded the Pas de Calais area.

The Germans hurled more winged bombs at Southern England today, carrying their attack with these new weapons into its fifth day.

The western air war now has developed into a three-sided battle, with Allied air units engaging in a cross-channel duel with German rocket bombs, maintaining ceaseless support of the invasion troops in Normandy and mountaining strategic attack on the Reich itself.

Although the Germans threw up a flak barrage described as one of the heaviest yet encountered, not a single enemy fighter rose to challenge the mighty aerial fleet which struck into Germany yesterday. About 500 fighters accompanied the heavy bombers, which made an attack aimed at shutting off the lifeblood of Germany's motorized divisions.

Moving Targets Hit.

Only two German aircraft were sighted all day yesterday by United States 9th Air Force fighter pilots who made more than 1,000 individual flights. They attacked hundreds of moving targets on the Cherbourg Peninsula and military objectives in the Pas de Calais area, and made sweeps into Central France near Paris, Amiens and Arras.

Many formations of medium, light and fighter-bombers laid down a withering fire on enemy forces being thrown back by American troops smashing across the Cherbourg peninsula.

Some American medium bombers heavily attacked the railyards at Rennes yesterday. Others joined in bombing ammunition dumps at Fort D'Andaine south of Villers-Bocage and other targets close behind the enemy's lines.

In two missions Saturday, the Americans struck a dozen landing fields behind the Normandy battle zone, in addition to heaping new destruction on the Pas de Calais area, which also was hit by R.A.F. fighter-bombers.

R.A.F. and R.C.A.F bombers battered enemy installations in Northern France and laid mines in enemy waters Saturday night, while Mosquitos struck targets in Berlin and Western Germany and also roamed behind the Normandy battle front These operations cost one plane.

The latest tabulation on Saturday's combat scores showed 37 German planes downed over France. This represented about 10 per cent of the total air forces the enemy risked during the day and night. The list also showed 44 Allied losses —around one per cent of the sorties flown.

Stores Will Observe July 3rd as Holiday, Industries July 1st

Despite the fact that the Retail Merchants' Division of the Chamber of Commerce here, decided to observe Dominion Day on Monday, July 3 instead of the calendar date of July 1st, Mayor Rollins and the city council will ask the residents of the city to hold the holiday on Saturday, the statutory date.

Due to governmental regulations and the exigencies of war, the majority of industries in war work will observe Saturday. The Deacon Bros. Limited, closes its plant on Friday, June 30 to July 10 in order to give its employees personnel its week's vacation with pay.

The Dominion Government has decreed that Saturday July 1st be observed as the holiday and Mayor Rollins and his council in committee meeting decided to abide by governmental decree.

Merchants of the city, however, have decided to stick by their original decision and observe the holi-

Stories by Pyle Make Interesting Reading for All

Earning the reputation, by his simple unpretentious style of writing, of being one of the most popular correspondents on the war fronts today, Ernie Pyle, whose column started in the Ontario Intelligencer on Saturday, has a tremendous newspaper following in both Canada and the United States.

His article on Saturday of the landing on the Normandy beaches is being landed by Metropolitan and smaller city editors as one of the classics of war reporting. He tells of the simple things everybody wants to know, the human little details, (a small girl makes a face at the troop convoy as it neared the British embarkation port). He is always content that the drama of his story should emerge from a style that is simple and friendly.

He clearly depicted, in the language that every one understands, the enormous difficulties of the beach landings and the courage and bravery of the Allied forces.

Ernie Pyle's column will appear in this newspaper as a daily feature, dependent upon mail facilities and circumstances which the war may bring about.

Six Are Injured When Tire Blows

When the left rear tire of an automobile bearing six Deseronto residents blew out near Millbrook, nine miles east of here on Highway No. 2 Saturday evening, the entire six occupants were injured and taken to the Belleville General Hospital after the vehicle crashed into a cement culvert.

Most seriously injured were Elmer Amey, 62, who has his throat cut, when his head crashed against the car windshield shattering the glass. A four-inch throat gash resulted, but was attended to at the hospital. John Barry, 41, was so heavily shaken by the impact that he bit his tongue inflicting a two inch gash in it. Others to sustain injuries were Vernon Joyce, 40, who suffered facial lacerations, while Miss Avis Mongo, driver of the car, Mrs. Helen Joyce and Mrs. Marjoie Beattie, 26, all suffered from bruises of limbs and shock.

The entire party was treated at the scene of the accident by Dr. H. E. Eckardt of Shannonville and after being rushed to the hospital by ambulance Dr. G. H. Stobie attended the party. Later in the evening Bernie Joyce and John Barry were allowed to return home.

Traffic Officer Harry Caldwell investigated the crash and was informed that the left rear tire of the motor-car blew out just after the car broke over the Millbown hill enroute to Belleville. The automobile veered and went out of control to crash against a highway cement culvert. The vehicle was badly damaged.

HERE'S A GOOD "TIRE BUY"!

(NO PERMIT REQUIRED)

Good "Tire Buys" are hard to find nowadays. Yet here is a way that you can enjoy many months of extra tire mileage without requiring a permit to get it. Just bring in your tires on which the tread has worn smooth. We will build you a new tread that will give your old tires a new lease on life. The cost is low, much lower than a new tire, yet you get new tire performance. But do not wait until the tire has worn through the fabric. It is then too late for recapping.

Damaged Tires can be Repaired:

Let us examine any tire before you throw it away. Even holes clear through a casing can be repaired permanently. Damaged parts are buffed down, cords are replaced with a "section repair" and rubber is cemented into the injury; then the repair is vulcanized and will last for thousands of extra miles. Badly damaged tubes can also be repaired.

Why Do We Export Goods?

Because Canada is one of the least self-sufficient countries in the world, her prosperity and her very existence depend on making the most of her own specialized resources and on trading them as advantageously as possible for her other requirements.

Report of the Royal Commission on Dominion-Provincial Relations, 1940.

● There is the answer in a nutshell—as worded by Canada's leading economists.

It was true in the old days of the fur trade. It is just as true to-day, when our exportable surplus includes many raw and manufactured products.

With our export trade the largest in our history, more people have jobs than ever before and our national income has reached a new peak.

Our post-war task is to maintain for constructive purposes the export trade which war has carried to such high levels.

The Dominion Bank, one of the Chartered Banks of Canada, will continue to give its full assistance to the furtherance of Canada's export trade.

If your wheels are OUT OF LINE

Obtain a free copy of the "Automobile User's Guide"—a booklet which will prove a valuable aid in maintaining the efficiency of your car or truck—by writing to Service Department, General Motors of Canada, Limited, Oshawa.

you'll soon be OUT OF TIRES

CARE SAVES WEAR—

but tire conservation doesn't stop there!

The mechanical condition of the chassis parts of your car or truck is most important.

—Wheels which are a ½" out of line cause the tires to "scuff" sideways approximately 87' in a mile.

—A few ounces out of balance multiply into many pounds of damaging force, even at normal driving speeds.

These elements actually tear the rubber off your tires. You can safeguard against such damage by having:—

—The mechanical parts of your vehicle inspected and adjusted periodically.

—Your tires and wheels checked regularly, particularly after the tires have been removed from the wheels for repairs.

Tire conservation service from a General Motors dealer will:—

—Stretch your tire mileage.

—Assure your safety.

—Improve the steering, riding and braking qualities.

This information is made available to you, the owners of Canada's cars and trucks, to assist you to conserve your tires and vehicles, and to safeguard against a breakdown of the country's automotive transportation up to and even beyond the day of Victory!

Our CONSERVATION SERVICE will help you to:

Stretch your Tire Mileage by:— —Maintaining proper tire pressures. (Pass cars and light trucks.)
—Tire rotation every 3,000 to 5,000 miles
—Regular inspection of wheel alignment and balance.
—Brakes and shock absorbers.

Avoid Engine Failure by:—
—Tests of compression and checking oil consumption.
—Flushing sludge removed.
—Cleaning and refacing "sludge-coated" valves.
—Replacing "sludge-packed" piston rings.
—Adjusting crankshaft bearings.

Save Gasoline and Oil by:—
Engine tune-up including carburetor, battery and electrical system.

Prevent Deterioration of Body and Fenders by:—
—Repairing and refinishing damaged or chipped surfaces.
—Washing body as required to preserve the finish and to keep drain holes open as a protection against costly rust damage.

Extend the life of your Car or Truck by:—
Regular lubrication (at least every 60 days).
Inspection and adjustment (every 1,000 miles).

New Cigarette Supply System

By establishing a new cigarette supply system, the possibility of cigarettes, consigned to a member of the forces not receiving them, will be removed. There has been a certain care lest shipments addressed to the members of the forces overseas might be lost and this care was felt not only by the servicemen but also by the friends who send them the smokes. The new system will eliminate that possibility.

Under the new plan which went into effect today as far as the men serving in the Mediterranean theatre are concerned, a huge reserve depot will be there built up by shipment in bulk and addressed labels, which will authorize the drawing on this reserve for so many cigarettes for the Canadians overseas will be flown to the Mediterranean, in this instance.

In Canada the donor will continue to do as has been the practice up to the present. The sender pays the tobacco agent or the company for cigarettes he or she orders for some one overseas.

The Montreal Herald explains the new plan. "A label covering the order is prepared, with postage and particulars. The Post Office records the label, speeds it off by air transport. At the Tobacco Depot, it is attached to a made-up parcel and dispatched to the addressee.

"Labels will be duplicated if lost and any losses in bulk shipment will be made up by the Post Office Department.

"The plan promises a more dependable supply of cigarettes for our fighting men and as the Post Office people note, 'cigarettes are highly regarded as a direct contribution to the well-being and happiness of the armed forces.'"

This system of the depot overseas assures the sender and the serviceman that smokes for the addressee will be forthcoming. Hitherto, if the shipment were lost, the fighting man did with that many fewer cigarettes except for what others would help him out with and the sender did not learn of it for quite a time after.

Will Find Answer

German use of the robot planes against England is an effort to interrupt Britons in their war work of production and it is a form of terrorism, such as the Germans have practised before.

Germany knows that Britain is the great arsenal and bulwark of the Allied cause, that from it come the armies of Britons, Canadians and Americans of war equipment and the munitions and food supplies which are dealing the blows which will lead to the finale with the defeat of Nazi Germany.

Britain is aware of the mighty air raids, and now of the Allied invasion which has taken so great a step towards the liberation of France and the rest of Continental Europe. Out of this isle of freedom is coming what means death to Hitlerism.

So the Germans have taken to this robot or pilotless plane that flies low and explodes when in contact. This of course saves German pilots for other work.

Counter measures are being taken by the Allies to meet the robot plane effort of the enemy, and from the history of British science there is no doubt that a full answer will be found if one has not already been found, or in part discovered. On Saturday many of the robot bombs were brought down and some were exploded by measures taken against them. Heavy Allied raids were made by planes on Friday night and Saturday against the Pas de Calais area whence the enemy was believed to have launched the new missiles.

Waterloo

In this month of June there is the anniversary which has just passed, that of Waterloo, fought and decided on June 18th., 1815. This was looked upon for a hundred years as the battle that decided the destiny of Europe.

To the German people and the Nazi chiefs mention of Waterloo should tell the story of the collapse of a conqueror and dictator, and suggest the decay and defeat of another. It was Napoleon Bonaparte who was finally run down and removed from the scene so that he could no more interfere with the welfare of Europe. Napoleon who rose up out of the turmoil and chaotic state of France after the Revolution of 1789 was able as Hitler was able early in this war to take advantage of the countries of Europe. Like Hitler, Napoleon knew that Britain was the chief antagonist to be faced but Napoleon never was able to invade Britain though that was in his mind, just as Hitler never has been able to invade Britain. Napoleon found the going more slow than Hitler did, who with his preparations, was able to strike deadly blows at Poland and at the two Scandinavian countries, the Low Countries and France. Hitler scattered at the coast and channel but without the skill Napoleon also did not have an ample navy. Neither of them tried to invade Britain.

It is recalled that Hitler in 1940 after the fall of Paris arrived in the French capital, full of pride, and went to the tomb of Napoleon. There he remained for considerable time. What was Hitler thinking? Was he greater than Napoleon who had arrived there? Or did Hitler have a premonition that like Napoleon he too would finally fall?

The similarity with Napoleon's course goes on further. Hitler deliberately set out into Russia to do what Napoleon's fate should have warned him not to do. He was going to conquer Russia and get the fields and the coal that practically all of his large gains in Russia. Russia is a powerful nation today that stands ready on the east front to beat down the German tyrant. That is different from what it was in 1812.

There is a difference. The world today is more closely knit by modern progress and invention. Hitler rose faster than Napoleon rose and will fall more quickly. Napoleon was a great general. Hitler is not a military leader.

There is another difference. The tyrant is Hitler and Germany. In 1815 it was Napoleon and France. But the same sturdy Britain is in it now as she was in 1815. And Britain is on the side that will win for she has with her the United States and Russia and the rest of the nations of the world. Today France is prostrate though her underground is alive and alert. Today it is France and the European underground that will assist the Allies to smash Hitler.

On the 129th anniversary of the Battle of Waterloo Germany should see the approach of the end of another tyrant, her own Fuehrer, a foul upstart, a malignant monster and a gangster whose hand is against all mankind. So that cruelty and brutality known as Adolf Hitler is swiftly approaching his end, his Waterloo and the world tribunal of justice.

What's This? Skirts for Men!

(Detroit Free Press)

This being hot weather, let's not get too serious. We have the case of that Pana, Illinois, judge who walked down Main street the other day wearing a woman's skirt, instead of trousers, because he said he found that garment much cooler.

The gentleman may be an eccentric, or maybe he has a sense of humor. Probably looking for office this fall and needs publicity. But his argument is sound at that. He is rebuking women who wear trousers, contending that a skirt is more comfortable and more comfortable. There is nothing, per se, effeminate about a skirt—as the Scots and the fighting Greeks have proved for ages.

And every woman wearing slacks will admit if she is honest, that skirts are much more comfortable and much cooler. She only wears 'em because it is the vogue and she thinks she has to be in fashion. The only legitimate excuse for women's slacks in war work.

TO THE GRANDSON

I hope you will not have to learn
How guns are fired and turrets turn,

And just how far to left or right
To lead the plane that's in your sight.

I pray, when you are sent to school,
They'll teach you theorem and rule

And mathematics of the kind
For peaceful reckonings designed.

They had to teach this age's sons
The dreadful skill of bombs and guns;

Of planes and tanks, amphibian cars
And how to travel by the stars,

But when these cruel days are done,
And this great global war is won,
God grant the need to kill will cease
And you may learn the arts of peace.

PARTISANS MAKE MERRY

London, June 19 — (CP) — A Yugoslav Partisan communique reported last night that from May 25 to June 10 Marshal Tito's forces killed 3,000 enemies and 'mopped up' in western Bosnia, had killed 1,500 in eastern Bosnia in the first 10 days, and that in recent operations in Banija, in a three weeks period the Partisans destroyed 21 German tanks, 19 trains, 150 trucks and other equipment.

Canadian Scene A Century Ago

By J. L. G.

Open-air markets were a sign that the farmers' wives had been laid under contribution by their wives and children to spare some of their garden produce for town dwellers. Each farmer brought an air of festivity and good-natured bargaining to the market squares where the push-carts were piled high with fruit and vegetables of tempting size, color and taste.

Adjacent to the market-place might be the silversmith, a busy man at this time of year with manipulated metals other than silver. Sometimes the farmer's wife had ten amassed a quantity of gold coins and would entrust them with a warmth to melt down the money to make beautiful gold vases for his wife's mantelpiece at home.

Fine collections of gold and silver sacred vessels in the churches and monasteries of the St. Lawrence River Valley bear witness to the fact that little Century Canada was rich in Canada. The traditional forms maintained by the master smiths of Europe and Asia showed that they obtained inspiration for their art from a rich background of French culture prevalent at Quebec City. The forms of artist was actively a silversmith from 1711 until 1819 or thereabouts and produced some very interesting pieces of his work until the third decade of the nineteenth century.

Premier Drew Takes Exception To Statements

Toronto, June 19—(CP)—Premier Drew of Ontario, in a statement here tonight, said he was minister Gibson has made "grossly misleading statements" regarding the restrictions on the sale of liquor and asked the Dominion minister immediately step out of a field of regulation in which it has no legislative jurisdiction.

"By Mr. Gibson's own admission, Ontario's share of the total output of spirits than Ontario as a result of the application of quotas by the Dominion government. There can be no possible justification for such a statement," Mr. Drew said.

(Last Friday, Col. Gibson, in statements to the House of Commons criticized a cartoon and editorial in the Toronto Globe and Mail regarding the Dominion government's wartime liquor control order.

(He said the editorial, published Friday, represented "a deliberate falsehood" in being responsible for the fact the monthly ration of beer per adult male in Ontario was 4.6 A.D.: "What Roman power slowly built, an unarmed traitor instantly overthrew." That is now applied to Canada. Several other ancient writers refer to the long period required to build Rome. In 1946 Sir Thomas Browne wrote in "Vulgar Errors:" "It crosseth the opinion of Rome which was not built in a day, if that were true which is traditionally related by Strabo; that the great cities Antichide and Artaxata, built by Sardanapalus, both in one day, according to the inscription on his monument.

The saying, 'When in Rome do as Romans do,' is known in many languages. It means that one should adapt himself to circumstances and conform with the customs and manners of the country whom he lives.

Augustus Cæsar, the first emperor of Rome, said on his deathbed: "I found Rome brick and leave it marble."

"The history of Rome," observed Napoleon, "is pretty much the history of the world."

Rome was known as the Eternal City even among the ancient Romans themselves. They thought that no matter what happened in the world, no matter how many other empires might arise and fall Rome would go on forever.

ON GROWING IN

Although we often try to regard the graying of the hair in a romantic or poetic way, the unavoidable fact is that it spells old age, an early sign of senility, perhaps, but as true as the early sign of supper—or winter — the autumnal tint of foliage.

Mind, the degenerative changes, the physical decline, the functional letdown of advancing age is not due to the graying of the hair, nor is the failure in the formation of pigment in the hair directly due to advancing age, but rather all of these manifestations indicate nutritional deficiency.

Nutrition means much more than food or vitals. Nutrition is the sum of the processes by which an organism (animal, plant, man) absorbs or takes in and utilizes food materials for growth, maintenance or oxidation or combustion in the material and excretion of the end-products or by-products or ash. It is a common error to assume that when physicians find the nutrition is poor or that there is malnutrition the remedy is to provide more food. In the vast majority of cases nutritional deficiency the victim does get enough to eat, all right, but too much of their food is refined and refined and "purified", cooked and processed, and hence contains only a small fraction of the vitamins required to maintain good nutrition and good functioning.

We should keep the fundamental rules of nutrition in mind when the question of graying of the hair presents itself. Whatever disorders there may be to retard or postpone premature graying of the hair up to mature natural color to gray hair from which the color has been lost are elements or factors essential for good nutrition.

These elements or factors, all of them essential for good nutrition, have sufficient functional health both in animal experimentation and in actual human practice, seem particularly essential to prevent premature graying of the hair and loss of color. Some of these factors may be also present in foods that are rich in vitamins, but we do not know what they are.

Of course it is difficult to prove that graying of the hair can be prevented or postponed in any circumstances—for who can say in any instance whether the hair would or would not have become gray at a given age regardless? But when the natural natural color returns to hair that has become gray or white there can be no question about it.

First of the three factors to gain wide recognition as an anti-gray factor was an entity or complex of the vitamin B complex called para-aminobenzoic acid.

Last of the three factors to gain wide recognition was another entity of the vitamin B complex called pantothenic acid or preferably calcium pantothenate, the form in which it naturally occurs and is most suitable for human nutrition.

The first of these three factors to be heralded as an anti-gray hair factor was Iodine—and the hackling was done in this column.

(More about gray hair later.)

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Early Start.

Son aged 16 is fond of all kinds of alcoholic drinks and drinks them when he can get them. Anything I could give him secretly or without him knowing that will take craving for alcohol away? Or will he outgrow it as he grows older. (Mrs. C.)

Answer—Certainly he will not outgrow it as he grows older—he will grow older. That notion that there is something which can be administered secretly to alcoholic to take away the craving for alcohol is nonsense. Hospitality, the only course, and the best for the boy's future is to consult the local court of record county court or supreme court judge to commit the boy to a reformatory where he will receive proper treatment.

Friend Has Tuberculosis

Is it harmful to associate with a girl who has had tuberculosis five years ago? We are very good friends and I wonder whether the trouble is catching.

(Miss B. R. S.)

Answer—Prolonged or daily intimate association is the way lung tuberculosis spreads. Whether the girl's tuberculosis is now active, open (that is, whether tubercle bacilli may be present from the tuberculosis portion of lung) I cannot say. Her physician would know.

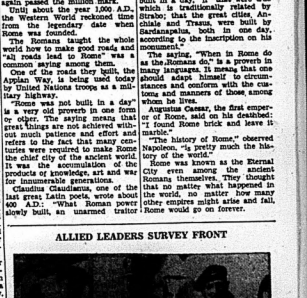
ETERNAL ROME

Nineteen hundred years ago Rome had a population of 1,200,000.

During the Middle Ages Rome dwindled in population to a small town of 25,000 or 30,000.

It was not until 1871 that Rome again passed the million mark.

Until about the year 1,000 A.D., the Western World reckoned time from the legendary date when Rome was founded.



The Romans taught the whole world how to make good roads and "all roads lead to Rome" was a saying which originally meant

One of the roads they built, the Appian Way, is being used today by United Nations troops as a military highway.

"Rome was not built in a day" is a very old proverb in one form or other. The saying means that great things are not achieved without much patience and effort and refers to the fact that many centuries were required to build Rome, the chief city of the ancient world. It was the accumulation of the products of knowledge, art and war for innumerable generations.

URGES FARMERS STUDY METHOD OF SOIL CONTROL

National P. C. Leader Tells Simcoe Farmers of Challenge to Farmers

Alliston, Ont., June 19 — (CP) — Farmers must study and practice methods of soil conservation and soil management to ensure that nothing contained in Canada's "finest inheritance — the land — is lost to future generations," John Bracken, National Leader of the Progressive Conservative party, said yesterday.

He was addressing the annual picnic of Simcoe county's Federation of Agriculture on agricultural problems.

"The responsibility rests with you to produce food for this and other nations," he said. "To produce your best crops, you must have suitable crop and soil management methods."

He urged farmers to organize and said that until agriculture does "other sections of our economy will have an advantage over it."

"But when the farmers speak with a united voice no government in Canada could dare not to listen."

He said Canadians face three challenges: winning the war; making an enduring peace and building a world more acceptable to the common man.

Hussell Love, president of the Alberta Farmers' Co-Operative, in a brief address, urged wider extension of the co-operative movement in Canada.

BOYS "WRECK" SCHOOL BUILDINGS

Saugus, Mass., June 19 —(AP)— There was no school today for the pupils of the Oaklandvale Grammer School—all because of the savage antics of five small boys between 10 and 14 years of age, the Danish-Icelandic Union of Police Captain Henry P. Wheaton said the boys invaded from nearby Everett and "wrecked" the school buildings, causing damage estimated at $2,000 before they were apprehended.

BEER LINEUPS DUE TO PANIC BUYING

Chief Commissioner Goggin Says Beer Available at All Hours Retail Outlets Open

Toronto, June 19 —(AP)— Victor T. Goggin, chief commissioner of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario, said in an interview at the weekend that tests carried out by the board showed that it was possible to eliminate lineups at brewery warehouses in the province and that beer now is available at all hours retail beer sale outlets are open.

Mr. Goggin said that experiments had been carried out in Ottawa, Hamilton, London, Windsor and Toronto with outlets in these centres being instructed to remain open full hours— 12 noon to eight p.m.—and to see that every legal purchaser was given his ration of beer. The test showed that it required only a little more beer to meet the demand and the lineups were eliminated when people found they could get their supply at any time. Previously outlets were sold out in two or three hours and there was a rush of buying when business opened for the day.

As a result, the same policy was applied to outlets in other parts of the province.

The Dominion Government removed its restrictions on provincial beer sales March 13 and this assisted in meeting the demand, Mr. Goggin, who added however that the lineups were largely due to "panic buying."

The War Today—

Fateful Fortnight Passes, Allied Beachhead Still Grows

By J. M. ROBERTS, Jr.
(Substituting for DeWitt McKenzie, Associated Press War Analyst)

The fateful fortnight which has encompassed Allied plans and fears for more than two years ends tonight, and the Germans have failed to mount either the massive defence or the fanative counter-attack which had been expected.

A comparatively small Allied initial force, harassed by unseasonably bad weather which interfered with, both reinforcement and supply, has engaged approximately one-fourth of the estimated German strength in France and found it only a hindrance.

To be sure, undue optimism is never proper when dealing with the Reichswehr. You can be sure that it has been busily repairing road blocks and bridges swept by the pre-invasion aerial hurricane of the Allies. Parts is 100 miles away, the Allies have been only preparing to mount either that and there may be Caslsos on the way.

WEDDINGS

WALTERS—McDONALD

The home of the bride's parents, Colborne, Ont., was beautifully decorated with pink and white roses, peonies and orange blossoms, was the scene of a lovely early summer twilight wedding on Saturday, June 17th., at eight o'clock, when Dorothy Bernice McDonald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne McDonald, became the bride of Wilfred Ora Walters, of the U.S. Marine Corps, son of Mrs. Walters, of Penaleton, California, son of Mrs. Maude Walters, of Lexington, Kentucky.

The Rev. R. Perry, grandfather of the bride, officiated at the ceremony.

The wedding music was played by Miss Lola Harper, of Belleville, and a solo, "Because I Love You Dear", was delightfully rendered by Mrs. C. J. Reddick.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was a pretty picture in her lovely white sheer wedding gown and floor length veil of bridal tulle illusion which draped softly about her head from a halo cap misted with seed pearls. She carried an arm bouquet of red roses.

Mrs. Dorothy Chaiten, as matron of honor, was wearing a charming dress of shell pink sheer taffeta and shoulder length veil of matching hue caught to her hair with a dainty flowerette headdress. Her bouquet was composed of blush rose peonies and roses.

Marilyn and Carole Reddick were winsome little flower girls in their frocks of sky blue and carrying nosegays of blue forget-me-nots and Talisman roses.

Mr. Lyle Chaiten acted as groomsman for the occasion.

For the reception following the ceremony, the bride's mother wore an ensemble of printed silk jersey accented with white accessories and corsage of red roses. The groom's mother was attired in white silk jersey, matching accessories and corsage of Talisman roses.

On the wedding trip, the bride selected a powder blue suit complimented with accessories of matching shade.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding were Mrs. Marie Walters, Covington, Kentucky; Mrs. T. Ketchenson, Mr. and Mrs. E. Pollwell and Miss Margaret Burrowes, all of Belleville.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She Dreads Being Called a Love Quisling

One of the minor war problems is the "Quisling" type of person, whose husbands are in the services. So careful attention to this letter, sent to such a letter as the following:

"Dear Miss Fairfax: Everybody knows how hard life is for us girls whose husbands are in the service, so we miss them terribly, but it isn't just that that I'm writing about.

"You see, there are still a few men who are not yet in the service. And there are always a lot of stray soldiers and sailors. Those of us who are at all attractive get a good many invitations to go out for a meal or a dance or something. Now, since I haven't any children or other responsibilities life is an innocent thing to do. But am I safe in doing it?

"It is true that my husband tells me to amuse myself all I can. But I can't forget that he is really terribly jealous, though I never show it, paper that a man called his wife a 'Love Quisling' because she went out with other men while he was far away in the Aleutian Islands fighting like the devil for his country. And he got a divorce, too.

"Now all this might be pretty badly, for I should die without my husband's love. But I don't want to spend all my time taking care of the apartment. Though I never know it is clean enough already, or doing Red Cross work, though husband is making.

I'm not very good at sewing or such things, But I have the kind of temperament that needs diversion and I don't care very much for bridge or solitaire. What to do?

"Then lots of people say that it's dangerous to be nice to the poor infantry. But I couldn't bear it if I were hugged or turned against, or known unjustly, for we really love each other with all our hearts. Do you think I should be afraid? Of course, I'm not.

"Worried Wife."

I'm sure that if "Troubled" went to her local Red Cross and told them that she had time on her hands, they could enlist her in organized entertainment for the soldiers, for undoubtedly she is pretty and attractive enough to be useful for this purpose. This I think would be wiser than to continue entertaining them on her own initiative, for if a husband is jealous, sometimes it does not pay to take into consideration, whether he is justified or not.

And if a girl has a happy marriage, she should never risk its loss. It's worth the sacrifice of some pleasant evenings in order to retain it. When such cases do arise, group diversions are the wisest as long as the wife is there. And it is scarcely necessary for me to say that "Troubled" has been said so often, that there's no sacrifice a stay-at-home wife can make that will compare at all with the one her husband is making.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Advice to a Club President

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I have been given the hint that I may be made the presiding officer of the organization to which I have belonged for several years, and in which I have served on the various committees that further the work of this organization. Although in general I am familiar with how to conduct a meeting, I would like to be really prepared in case I am made president. Is there a book about this I could study? Thanks you for any advice.

Thomas R.

Your organization undoubtedly has a formula that it has adopted for the procedure of its meetings and you should study this carefully. I realize you may hesitate to ask for this pamphlet or book. So I suggest that you get a copy of a well-accepted classic, Robert's Rules of Order. This will give you all the rules for conducting a meeting according to the best parliamentary practices. Studying this book now for the theory of conducting a meeting, you can, when you are the presiding officer, adapt or simplify this procedure according to club method. The Widow's Name.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

I am very much in doubt as to how I should style my name, since I have recently become a widow. I have a daughter now which I always used, and since I became a widow I have been told to drop my middle name and use my mother's name. Let me illustrate. Lets say my maiden name was Mary Jane Brown, and my married surname, Long. Should I write Mrs. Mary J. Long, or Mrs. Mary Jane Brown Long? Which is correct?

Mother.

Neither of these forms of name is correct. Because socially it is considered correct for a widow (married woman, a widow, a divorcee) to use "Mrs." before her first name.

Your husband gave his name to you. Your friends, unless you know many and thereby relinquish his name, you should always continue to use your full name, even after the "Mrs.", just as you used it, or would have used it, while he was living. That is, your name is still Mrs. Mary Jane Long.

As to your informal name (the name which should sign to letters written to all but close friends, when you would naturally sign only your initials) the customary form would be: Mary Jane Long, or Mary J. Brown Long.

If you loved your husband, you shouldn't stop "wearing" his name, which he gave you, any more than you should stop wearing the wedding ring he gave you.

Jane.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman.—

My son, two months old, is a "junior". Should I write "junior" or "jr" after his name?

Mother.

Use either "junior" (not capitalized), or "Jr." (capitalized). When the abbreviation is used, the capital must be used. . . so "Jr." is not correct.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Hands and Their Care.

Hands smooth and white, fingers rose tipped! That's the beauty ideal. Hands can't be pretty unless you sit on them, and sitting on the hands is a habit that is not considered etiquette. The lady laborer in the victory garden is looking at her's in dismay. Planting has been fun, reaping fills one with joy, but the nails of the kitchen range with the pots on the kitchen stove with good things to eat. But goodness gracious, look at her mitts! If she hasn't worn gardening gloves she'll look as if she belongs to the coal heaver's union.

Protective measures you must take, Mary, Mary, most contrary, whose garden is growing along with your hair. . . You're not only contending with the ravages of dirt, but your hands are exposed to strong sunlight that does no good by the texture of the skin, for soon freckles besides. Gloves are clumsy? What of it? Yes, we know, there are times you have to chuck them, but do wear them as much as you can. If you don't, you'll feel sorry when autumn comes and your hands days are over. And what about sitting in at the bridge game? Hands must look pretty.

Besides gardening you may be polishing furniture. Furniture polish, one wedged into knuckle creases, is not easily removed. Wear your gloves, lady.

Avoid strong cleaning agents. Soap makers are giving us plenty of mild products that do the work, no matter how dirty the job may be. We've fussy enough about the soap we use on our precious faces, not so particular about soap selection for household use. Rinse away every bit of suds; dry the hands thoroughly. Soap removes the natural oil that keeps skin smooth, so hands need a creamy coat once a day.

When washing the hands after messy household tasks, add a little corn meal to the suds. The tiny bits of meal slip into dark knuckle lines, clean them in a jiffy. Keep a cut nail brush handy, when plunge the finger tips into the pulp. You'll be surprised to find the nail saves will come out while as snow.

Cocoa butter can be substituted for cold cream during the bed time lubricating if you feel that cold cream is a drain on the beauty budget.

Work the cocoa butter well into the flesh. Friction it into the finger nail cuticle, massage the nail bed, stimulates the underlying blood vessels that provide the pink glow. Also, this treatment keeps the surrounding cuticle soft; if you permit it to dry, it curls, pulls away from the nail fabric, you will have a flock of hangnails to contend with.

After the massage, lift the cuticle gently with a towel, rub it over, flush up any little shags of skin, then apply polish under the curved, needle point scissors.

Frankly pretty hats designed for the spring season are all trimmed with posies. Pure silk plaided in pale blue and pale pink are clear as a beauty is in pearly gray straw. The crown of the hat is trimmed with deep pink camellias with glossy green leaves and green velvet ribbon.

Most popular detail in the print frock has been its more formal styling with emphasis on the side draped skirt. Pure silk plaided in pale blue and pale pink are clear as a beauty is in pearly gray straw. The crown of the hat is trimmed with deep pink camellias with glossy green leaves and green velvet ribbon.

Victory Recipes

By LAURA C. PEPPER

Chief, Consumer Section, Department of Agriculture

Have you noticed an upward trend in your food bills since meat rationing went into effect? Butchers are reporting a heavy run on the more expensive cuts of meat.

Yet there are many meals and who doesn't these days, you'll frequently hear the cry that there is nothing fit to eat. Whether food value is just as high as some, but with a little extra ingenuity and they are more flavourful. Our occasionally following recipe for cuts of meat come from the parts of the animal which receive the most exercise and that same exercise that develops the muscles also develops the "extractives" which give flavour to the meat.

In slow cooking, in moist heat and imaginative seasoning lie the secret of the many savory dishes that can be made from the less expensive cuts of meat. There are some that have been tested recently in Canada's kitchen in the Dominion Experimental Farm Service and proved specially popular with the tasters.

Fashion Flashes

BIG DELIGHT this summer is the bare-back pinafore dress that goes nicely over a blouse for street or city wear. One such model is in a rose boucle print on white blue or yellow washable permanent finish glazed print with crisp winglike shoulder ruffles and bretelles.

It's a challenge to get as much wear as possible out of a restricted wardrobe with the aid of well chosen accessories. Here is a blue silk blouse and vest topping off a white pique trimmed with mother-of-pearl buttons. The blouse has a wide rever collar.

Cooler nights are apt to bring out the dark cloth suit, as one for city or country wear.

Work the cocoa butter well into the flesh. Friction it into the finger nail cuticle, massage the nail bed, stimulates the underlying blood vessels that provide the pink glow. Also, this treatment keeps the surrounding cuticle soft; if you permit it to dry, it curls, pulls away from the nail fabric, you will have a flock of hangnails to contend with.

After the massage, lift the cuticle gently with a towel, rub it over, flush up any little shags of skin, then apply polish under the curved, needle point scissors.

Frankly pretty hats designed for the spring season are all trimmed with posies. Pure silk plaided in pale blue and pale pink are clear as a beauty is in pearly gray straw. The crown of the hat is trimmed with deep pink camellias with glossy green leaves and green velvet ribbon.

Most popular detail in the print frock has been its more formal styling with emphasis on the side draped skirt. Pure silk plaided in pale blue and pale pink are clear as a beauty is in pearly gray straw. The crown of the hat is trimmed with deep square neckline outlined with self-covered piping and in pink and blue, and side swept skirt with pleated flounce self bow holding the drapery.

Cool to look at and cool to wear is a white pique three-quarter sports coat belted in black and worn over a black linen sheath.

Commuters go in for clothes that wear well en route and look good in town. Such a costume is a suit with gray crepe skirt and a navy and yellow paid cotton peplum jacket.

HEALTH CHATS

Nerve Disorders in the Arm.

The brachial plexus is a large group of nerves which come from the spinal cord and pass into the arm. Mentions of affected this plexus may occur following an infection. It usually affects the nerves on only one side. The neuritis may be due to any of several causes.

As "a result of the neuritis, paralysis of a number of the muscles of the shoulder and upper arm may develop. This same sort of neuritis may occur occasionally following the injection of serum, particularly antitetanus serum. Neuritis of the brachial plexus may also occur following injuries to the shoulder, due to stretching or even to tearing of the nerves. In such instances, not only is there paralysis of the arm, but also a loss of sensation.

After sudden, brief overstretching of the arm, numbness and tingling, as well as pain in the arm and hand, may develop. It is the quickness with which the pain in the arm which does the damage, rather than the distance the arm is stretched. It is thought that in these cases a mild inflammation of the nerves produces the symptoms.

Another common condition affecting the nerves of the arm is known as the scalenus anticus syndrome. In this disorder there is a pain in the arm as well as some tingling and numbness. The trouble is due to pressure on the nerves, as they pass over the first rib, by the muscles known as the scalenus muscles.

It is fortunate that this condition can be relieved promptly by an operation in which the scalenus muscles are cut. Not only is the relief brought about promptly, but it is also permanent. However, the operation should not be carried out until it is certain that the pain and other symptoms in the arm are actually due to the scalenus anticus syndrome.

In making a diagnosis, it is helpful to put pressure over the lower end of the scalenus anticus muscle. If such pressure causes a great deal of pain, it is probable that the scalenus anticus syndrome is present.

In middle-aged persons, tingling, numbness, and pain in the arm often develop during sleep. The exact cause of this disorder is not known, but it is thought to be due to pressure on the nerves near the first rib. This condition is called brachialgia statica parasthetica. The disorder does not progress, and usually clears up after a period of time. Exercise of the shoulders and the use of diathermy are electrical treatment which produces heat deep in the tissues, are helpful in the treatment.

Numbness and tingling in the arm may come from many causes. In each case, a careful study to determine the cause must be made before the proper treatment can be given.

Premium Broilers

Now that broiling chicken is at its tender best! Here's a trio of tasty ways to cook it.

BROILED PREMIUM CHICKEN

Brush quartered or halved Swift Premium broilers (1 to 2 lbs.) with melted fat. Place on greased rack, cavity side down, below preheated broiler. Broil for 10 to 15 minutes. Turn, brush with fat, cook 15 minutes more, again, cook briefly until tender. Season and serve. Caution: Keep chicken 5 inches from heat. Watch best not to burn.

A honey of a frock is an afternoon dress of paleist beige crepe with a print design of bugs, flowers and beehives. Tiny plastic bee-shaped buttons.

Maybe the earlswheel hat isn't very practical for everyday wear but for special occasions, it's lovely. Pure cerverett earthwel of navy or black taffeta has a broad bandeau edge of white lace and hair braid at the edge of its wide brim.

Good to look at and cool to wear is a white pique three-quarter sports coat belted in black and worn over a black linen sheath.

Commuters go in for clothes that wear well en route and look good in town. Such a costume is a suit with gray crepe skirt and a navy and yellow paid cotton peplum jacket.

CHICKEN SAUTÉ WITH MUSHROOMS

This is a tasty dish for special occasions. The quantities given serve four.

1 Frozen chickens (3-lb.)
1 large onion, chopped
½ lb. mushrooms, peeled and sliced
Salt and pepper
2 tbsps. butter or well-flavored fat
1 cup chicken stock or canned consommé
1 glass sherry (optional)

Have the butcher cut up the chicken as for frying. Season well. Lightly sauté the onion and mushrooms. Drain out vegetables and remove to a casserole. Now brown the chicken pieces evenly in the fat over high heat. As soon as they are brown remove to casserole laying them on a bed of onion and mushrooms. Pour off fat from pan, swirl the consommé (and sherry if used) round the hot pan, scraping vigorously, then pour over chicken. Simmer, covered, over low heat 30 minutes for 30 minutes.

Columnist Tells of Trip Across The Sea to Invasion Beachhead

By ERNIE FYLE

Normandy Beachhead — (by wireless) — On the way to the invasion I rode an LST — the watery workhorse of this war. We carried armored reconnaissance troops.

We felt good about our position in the convoy, for we were about a third of the way back in the column. That meant we had ships on all sides of us and we wouldn't be backing the cable in two if the ship were torpedoed. Later I asked the captain, and he said there wasn't any such rule at all.

Funny little things happen in a convoy. The steering gear on one ship broke in middafternoon and the ship came slowly careening around like a skidding automobile until it was crosswise of the convoy and the ships behind had to veer around it.

You see, we were lined up in straight columns, extending as far ahead and behind as we could see. On both sides of us ran destroyers and corvettes for escort, but as I've said before in convoy seems to the participants in a convoy that the escort is adequate.

Our only real scare came late in the night before we hit the invasion area. I was in my bunk, and the colonel with whom I was rooming came down from the bridge.

"How are things going?" I asked.

"Terrible," he said. "Another convoy came along and pushed us out of the swept channel. One engine has broken clear down, and the other can only run at third speed. The rudder and tide are drifting us toward the Belgian coast. We're steering straight west but barely holding our direction."

I thought how ironic it would be to wind up this war by drifting alone onto a hostile beach and spending the rest of the war in a prison camp—if we didn't hit a mine first. But unfortunately I was too sleepy to worry about it. When I awakened at dawn we had both engines going and were back in line again in the swept channel. Morale always is too sleepy to give a damn.

* * *

My own devastating sense of fear and depression, of which I have spoken before, disappeared the moment we were under way. As I write this, the old familiar crack and roar of big guns is all around us, and the beach is a great brown haze of smoke and dust, and we know that bombers will be over us tonight. Yet all that haunting premonition, that soul-consuming dread, is gone, and the war is prosaic to me again. And I believe that is true of everyone aboard, even those who have never been in combat before.

* * *

The night before sailing we were instructed to take two anti-seasickness capsules before breakfast the next day, and follow them up by with one every four hours throughout the voyage. The capsules had been issued to us with our battle kits.

Well, we took the first two and behind each pontoon we also towed a smaller pontoon with six huge outboard motors on it — a thing called a "rhino".

Several ships broke cables and lost their pontoons during the journey. Special Coast Guard tugs were assigned to pick them up. We lost our own rhino on the last night out, and I don't know whether it was picked up or not.

* * *

We were told that if the ship sank our chances of being picked up would be slight. The water was so cold we would lose consciousness in 15 minutes, and die within four hours.

So we all conjectured about the possibility of clambering out onto the trailing pontoon if the ship went down. That brought up the question whether the pontoon would be cut loose if the ship sank, or be dragged under the water by its huge steel cable.

To show how rumors get around, one soldier said he had learned that the ship had a sailor standing aft with an ax, for the sole purpose of cutting the cable in two if the ship sank.

Monty 'A Real Genius'

(From the Chicago Daily News)

This time it is Eisenhower vs. Von Rundstedt at the top; but in the field—as it was in the North African campaign—it is Montgomery vs. Rommel. It is Montgomery who will execute the other plan in Europe, as he did in Africa. To all who pray for the success of the Allied cause, but especially to Americans with loved ones serving under Montgomery, there should be assurance and comfort, in the fact that he has proved himself one of the great field commanders of our time—insofar as it is within his power—his men go into battle with every possible advantage on their side.

Montgomery's conduct of the North African campaign, particularly the attack against Rommel's forces at El Alamein, demonstrated in the meticulous and complete detail that characterizes his methods. One phase of his preparations, the weaving of a web of deception in which Rommel, the enemy, has been described by Major Peter Mainby of the British Engineer Corps in his book, "Pipeline to Battle."

Montgomery began by moving his tanks by night down to the southern end of his line near Kuaitara depression. The tanks left tracks in the sand that were immediately spotted by enemy reconnaissance planes. Then, also by night, he moved them by night from the south to the north, leaving dummies under the flimsy camouflage nets at the south end of his line. And as each tank moved north, men on foot followed, carefully sweeping the sand and removing all trace of the tracks they left in their wake. The Germans still thought the attack would come in the south; but in the north Montgomery had his motorized strength and the roads over which they could be off to a flying start.

Montgomery had still another surprise up his sleeve. In all previous desert attacks, the tanks had led the assault. This time he attacked with his infantry after a terrific artillery barrage. Once the infantry broke through the enemy line, the tanks roared out of the breach—where no tanks were supposed to be—to trap Rommel's tanks in the rear.

The North African campaign stamped Montgomery as a rare genius—a man of brilliant imagination, with a capacity for infinite detail. On the basis of past performances, the Allied peoples have every reason for confidence in his leadership.

Baxter is Given An Opportunity To Tame Dunlop

Whenever you see a feature wrestling bout end in a flurry or undecided you can usually rest assured there'll be fireworks when the rematch comes along, especially following a first meeting. And that's exactly what Promoter Frank Tunney gambled on when he re-signed Ralph Cardadian, one of the noted boys in Dunn (Nobody likes him) to meet John (Nobody likes him) Katan, the fiendish ring villain to a return grudge fight at the Hume Arena Wednesday night. Of course Marse Tunney wasn't taking any chances when it came to selecting his rematch as he added Jack Sharkey, the former heavyweight boxing champion of the world, to referee this important match. The big boy is out to "Show" better skill to wrestling, of 'else.

Last week two referees were manhandled in the Hume Arena ring. Referee Bert Maxwell was floored by Katan and Referee Cliff Pox was hurled bodily from the ring by that same wrestler. Dunlop, the gentle-taining an ankle injury, "I've got Sharkey engaged and the commissioners has given me the green light. Let any of those wrestling referees start anything with the Boston Tar," warned Tunney today as he announced Vern Baxter would be given another opportunity to tame Dunlop.

Nelson Scores Clean-Cut Win In Red Cross Golf Tourney

The Red Cross golf tournament, at New Rochelle N.Y., concluded yesterday with a clean-cut victory for Byron Nelson, former open champion of Toledo, O, who rounded out the 72-hole contest with 272 or 13 under par.

Preparations have been made for the opening of the Port Erie racing season July 4 following the return from duty south of Peter J. Holmes, general manager of the Niagara Racing Association. Opening Day feature is the $1,500 fourth of July handicap.

Gaston Aimyot, Ryca. Quebec Golf Club, proved the winner of the 10th Annual Duke of Kent Memorial tournament at Quebec Saturday, leading a field of 23 with a 153.

Scores of Super Fortresses Took Part in Raid on Jap Steel Works

Chungking, June 17 —(AP)— Scores of the United States B-29 Super-Flying Fortresses participated in Thursday night's historic blow at the Japanese mainland, pouring a great weight of explosives on the industrial centre of Yawata and starting huge fires and pillars of flame visible for 60 miles by the huge new planes swept high across the Yellow Sea to their Chinese bases.

Four of the $1,500,000 planes failed to return, a Washington announcement said, three of them were sent down due to accidents, and the fourth was one of scores that is third is missing, and a fourth fell victim to "enemy action over the target"—indicating that the wreckage of the huge new aircraft may be in enemy hands.

The bombing was accurate and effective. Enemy fighter craft offered some resistance to a few planes. Anti-aircraft fire was moderate to intense over the target area, but enemy planes were reported shot down, the communique said. There were no casualties aboard returning aircraft."

First detailed stories of the record bombers flight ever made indicated that the Americans might have knocked out a fifth of the enemy's steel production at Yawata, on the north shore of Kyushu island 500 miles southwest of Tokyo.

Low-Level Approach.

The American Super-Portress airmen took off from several bases located in western China with the sweat of nearly 500,000 Chinese laborers, Sir-lenths of the territory over which they flew is hostile. To conserve fuel for their foulr 2,200-horsepower engines, they kept as low as possible until reaching the Japanese mainland, where they went upward in a long slanting approach to Yawata.

Yawata was attacked from both high and medium altitudes. The high attack was the likeliest spot of the first strategic bombing of Japan by the B-29s since, while a 50-mile radius, it contains a heavy concentration of shipping facilities, both rail and sea, as well as the Japanese Imperial Steel Plant.

No incendiaries were carried because the great number of inflammable products in the manufacturing city would feed the flames set off by heavy explosions in the blast furnaces.\

This was not the first action of the B-29's however.

A shakedown combat operation was carried out June 5, with an attack on the Makasan Railway shops at Bangkok, capital of Japanese-occupied Thailand.

Wedge at Base Of Cherbourg Peninsula Widened

Supreme Headquarters, Allied Expeditionary Force, June 19 (CP)— The wedge across the base of the Cherbourg Peninsula is being strengthened and widened. In the Tilly Sur Seulles area attacks by our troops have met strong opposition from enemy armor and fire supported by heavy artillery fire.

Further east a small counter-attack was thrown back.

An enemy battery at Houlgate, east of Ouistreham, has been silent for 24 hours after accurate bombardment by H.M.S. Ramillies.

Weather again retarded air activity over the battle zone from noon yesterday until daybreak today. Nevertheless, fighters and fighter-bombers ranged from the Cherbourg Peninsula to Lisieux in the east and to Alencon in the south striking at communications and transport.

Bridges, railway cars, locomotives and power stations in the fighting-ers between Valognes, Briquebec and Carteret.

Rocket-firing planes and dive-bombers attacked enemy ammunition dumps hidden in a forest, also canal bridges, ferries, motor lorries and a heavy concentration of troops between Caen, Falaise and Montigny.

Sweeping from Arras and Amiens to the outskirts of Paris, long-range fighters searched out targets of opportunity throughout the day. They found many and destroyed plenty. Attacks on road and rail targets continued after dark with night fighters. Night fighters destroyed two enemy aircraft over the beach.

EXCHANGE INTERNED CIVILIANS

London, June 19 — (CP)—Britain and Germany are to exchange an equal number of interned civilians, the Foreign Office announced today. The Swedish Red Cross-Drottningholm will be used. Arrangements were made through Switzerland.

Lagos (CP) — A recent development in Nigeria was the setting up of a laboratory at Igumale to deal with investigation into lime and cement manufacture. The results indicated the presence of a large quantity of high grade limestone.

Baltimore Orioles took possession of first place in the International League by taking both games of a double header from the Toronto Maple Leafs, 20-6 and 4-3.

The 20 runs scored by the Orioles in the first game ties this year's league record set by Rochester June 15, when the Redbirds defeated Jersey City 20-10.

For the third time this season, Stan Monaco bit a home run with the bases full. Howie Moss raised his total to eight when he homered in each game. Three Toronto pitchers gave up 17 hits in the first game, four to Monaco. The Orioles second ackor also scored 4 times in the opener. A two run rally in the final inning gave the Leafs a one run single, ans the flock the second game.

Montreal climbed into the first division by downing the Jersey City Giants, 13 and 3, as Bob Dillinger and Wayne Collins, the winning pitchers, held the Giants to 7 hits in both games. Collins needed help from John Travis in the sixth but finished the game in the absolute. The double defeat dropped the Jersey into the cellar position.

Rochester won two games from the lowly Syracuse Chiefs, 4-0 and 5-3, as Jimmy Wicker won his sixth straight against one defeat, blanking the Chiefs with five hits in the nightcap.

Newark won a doubleheader from Buffalo 9-7 and 11-1 to knock the Bisons out of first place. Arnold Umbach, by his two double triple and homer, batting in four runs in the two games.

New York, June 19 — (AP) — Random chords—or some of the dizzy doings that actually have taken place in the world of baseball this season:

Never Too Late.

At Rochester, N.Y., recently the Red Wings were trailing in the first and third with one out against Syracuse when Manager Billy Meyer was filed out, the guy on third galloped home easily and the umpire called him out because before there was no chance to catch him. Then the two first wandered to second and was caught, apparently ending the inning. But the umpire already had started infield warmups and Syracuse players, on the right field and started a mysterious series of confabs. Finally Umpire Jodrigo was called from the bench and tried to get the right dope from the players and players, who wouldn't give it up. Finally Jodrigo announced he was going to plate umpire and tossed it to Rodriguez who was on third base.

Only then did Ump Roy Van Gratian realize he'd forgotten about Yellow "Yer out". . . It seems that only Nebe and Van Gratian knew the most strenous part of the league schedule as no less than seven games were played for four nights, the men playing games every night except Monday. The Peoples' Stephens Adamson "Marvels" continue to lead the pack with four wins in as many starts and with their next two games up Garrison and Tweed the Marines should run the circuit to six. Incidentally the Marines and Universal gals journey to No. 6 Repair Depot this evening for a dual bill of exhibition softball for the entertainment of the personnel of the station.

In the ladies loop Connies moved up even with SWACO and Reliance, but this week sees the two second place clubs tangle while the top-ranking nines will naturally be battling each other lotty perch before Saturday.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 498

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Raise the curtain again. Begin a preview of an opening bid of two in a suit. What most bridge players call a "forcing two bid." What some players call a "demand opening."

Now, don't get excited. There is nothing tough about it. Horse Sense makes it one of the easiest lessons in bridge. But first, let me underscore myself as a fan of the underlying principles.

When bid wrong by now that is every bid has two words: a number and a denomination, naturally, the numeral department tells of the number of tricks.

How many tricks does a numeral show? That depends on whether it is a normal (no more than necessary) number or an unusual number. It also depends on the spot in which the numbly is used.

When it is a normal number, it is say only the hand contains a no more than expected. When it is an unusual number, it is a signal to show an unusual amount of tricks. two-bid hands are stookum.

If it is an opening with a normal bid or one, it merely admits having more than average. If it is a response with a normal number, it merely admits having more than the two expected tricks.

An unusual number is a jump. A one-jump response reveals tricks enough to make a game with what partner has promised. From that we get the signal that a one-jump shows enough tricks for a game.

An opening bid of two in a suit is a one-jump to start with. And so, such an opening shows tricks enough for a game. Having not yet heard anything from partner, it shows enough all by itself.

Admire this hand:

♠ A K 9 ♠ 10 8 6
♥ A K Q
♦ A Q
♣ K 7

The opening bid with that hand is two spades. Since it starts with a one-jump, it shows tricks enough for a game.

Now, suppose partner bids two diamonds. Since it starts with a one-jump, it shows tricks enough for a game in spades.

AT THE McCARTHY

"Out of the Fog"
Coming to the McCarthy Theatre will present "Out of the Fog", a dramatic Warner Bros. film that co-stars Ida Lupino and John Garfield, the pair who made so great an impression earlier as the star-crossed lovers of "The Sea Wolf".

"Out of the Fog" has a modern setting and deals with the turbulent romance between an excitement-seeking girl and a ruthless young man, determined to "get ahead" in the world, no matter what cost. An excellent cast has been lined up to support the two stars. It includes Thomas Mitchell, Eddie Albert, John Qualen, Alan Hale, Jr., Frank Faylen, Leo Gorcey and Odette Myrtil.

The unique setting for the drama is Sheepshead Bay, a seaside resort near New York. The story begins just after the summer season ends and the gay, carefree atmosphere of the little community draw together for the long, lonely winter ahead. Two people are drawn closer of long standing forget the cares of their workaday lives, finding a right from their little rowboat. They dream of the day when they will have saved up enough money to buy a boat and sail down to Cuba to fish. Their dreams are rudely interrupted by the sudden appearance of a sinister young man who extracts five dollars a week protection money directly from their pay.

Not only does this opportunistic young man threaten to disrupt the lives of the two old men, he also breaks up a romance of long standing. Meeting the pretty daughter of one of the old men, he fascinates her completely that she forgets all about her steady boyfriend, a deep-sea diver, and one of the boardwalk concessions. Her new admirer promises to open a visit to new life-the champagne and caviar kind-that she has always dreamed about.

They hit a few high spots together then to make him jealous she tells him that a man offered her a job in Hollywood. He admits that the man is her father but he is powerless to keep away from the man's sinister influence. He follows her, of course, that her "go getting" boyfriend is extorting money from her father. Finally he leaves her that night he has her promises to go to Cuba with him. Then he goes to one of two old men, tells them he knows they have been saving up and asks them turn the money over to him. They refuse. Whereupon the old men decide to murder him. They get him aboard their boat that night. Albert strikes the lethal blow when his back is turned, their quarrel. Then, for a practical purpose, jumps to his feet draws a knife and plunges it overboard into the bay.

The dramatic attraction opening at the McCarthy Theatre next Wednesday is a first-class show featuring Bob Hope, Paulette Goddard and Edward Arnold.

AT THE BELLE

"DESERT SONG" in Color

In one of the most lavish settings given a motion picture in recent years, Warner Bros. have gone all-out in its production of "The Desert Song," which is now at the Belle Theatre.

The highly musical, highly entertaining film stars Dennis Morgan and Irene Manning, who are reporting each other's favorites as Bruce Cabot, Lynne Overman and Gene Lockhart. Filmed in gorgeous Technicolor, the picture has successfully recreated the wild beauty and indescribable loveliness of Northern Africa, which is supposed to be the setting of the story.

"The Desert Song" has been modernized and brought up to date for the film production. The intrigue of German agents operating in N. Africa, using the French as unwitting cats' paws, has been drawn on to give the story present day significance.

Dennis Morgan portrays a dual role in the film. As Paul Hudson, he is cast as an illiterate American musician, stranded in French Morocco. This is the character he portrays to hide his identity — as that of Il Khobar — long-time friend of the Riffs, who spends the major part of his time aiding their cause in fighting-like raids to free them from enslavement by the Germans.

Running throughout the story are exquisite renditions of the beautiful Sigmund Romberg music, all of which has been included in this succesful present-day version. The search-lyed and familiar numbers such as "One Alone," "The Desert Song," and the "Riff Song" and the others are greatly enhanced as sung by the youthful singing team of Morgan and Manning. The two stars, who began their careers as singers, prove beyond doubt that their sojourn as straight dramatic stars did nothing to dim the beauty of their voices.

A popular supporting cast is headed by such favorites as Bruce Cabot, Lynne Overman, Gene Lockhart, Victor Francen, Faye Emerson and Felix Basch.

AT THE CAPITOL

"GUADALCANAL DIARY"

The glorious story that was written in the smoke of the battle that gave America its first taste of victory, emerged last night as a thrilling, never-to-be-forgotten screen experience with the showing of 20th Century-Fox's production of Richard Tregaskis' "Guadalcanal Diary" at the Capitol Theatre.

Here indeed is the picture we've all been waiting for. For "Guadalcanal Diary" is the first great American picture of this war — the story of the U.S. marines on Guadalcanal, thumbing their noses at desperate odds and — whooshing to the crack of snipers' bullets — yes, and dreaming of dames amidst the terrors of Japanese bombing. It is a throat-choking epic of victory told in a hard-hitting manner of "just guys" America will always remember.

NEARLY EIGHTEEN"

There is a great deal of interest in "Nearly Eighteen", the Monogram picture now being opened in engagement at the Capitol theatre last night. Romance and music have been blended in a production which has proved a thoroughly satisfying entertainment.

Much of the picture's success can be attributed to the fine manner in its three leading players. The charming Gale Storm is the girl in the case, and the other points in the romantic triangle are Robert Lowery as Bill Henry and Rick Vallin. These three young people are exceptionally good in their roles and most pleasing atmosphere to the proceedings. Miss Storm's singing of catchy ships is delightful. Others in the cast who contribute capably are Lois Albersl, Mildred Harris, George O'Hanlon, Kenneth Harlan and Belle Mitchell.

"ZERO HOUR"

The morale-building service of the National Film Board is admirably demonstrated in the current production of the "Canada Carries On" series which opened last night. It is a background story of the Sicily invasion. With the power of the camera, it depicts what must be taking place on the beaches of France, something that everyone is anxious to learn. It analyzes the technical and tactical problems that had to be solved before this historic operation was launched and it should thus be helpful in securing the individual co-operation of everyone in the production parts. The film was made in co-operation with the army film units of the United Na-

Birds Fly More Safely in Blackouts

By William Abbott
(In Strand Magazine, London)

Thanks to the war, migrating birds are travelling more safely now than for several centuries. The reason is blackouts, which have curbed a long-standing menace.

Migrating birds travel almost entirely by night. They do not go along at great heights, perhaps three hundred feet or less, as a rule, except when in mountainous country or over cities. So beams from lighthouses, the tops of skyscrapers, and beacons in high mountains are a positive danger to their path.

On moonlit nights the travellers are not bothered greatly by these lights, although they are apt to get flashing lights confuse them much at any time. But steady white beams, blurred by fog or rain or refracted by even slight moisture, have a devastating effect.

Something like panic seizes the travellers when the appearance out of the darkness of the bright damp blooms of light. Birds have practically the keenest sight of any living creatures, but in their distraction sone why they should be drawn to beam dashing themselves to death against the lantern.

"Those who have not witnessed a 'bird night'—a night when the birds are travelling in large numbers—at a light station cannot form any conception of the appalling loss of life that takes place," says W. Eagle Clark, the ornithologist. I have stood on the gallery of the Eddystone lighthouse and watched the migrants striking the great lantern and falling into the surf for ten and a half hours without a break."

On the Great Lakes of North America have also taken their toll, and the Statue of Liberty in New York harbor has struck down migrants with its torch.

In the past, occasional measures have been taken to reduce the casualties—the turning off of ornamental illumination on monuments and buildings during the migratory period, and warnings to gallery on some lighthouses where birds might be seen to be in danger of drowning when they fell.

But now wartime blackouts and dim-outs have come to the birds' aid on a global scale. The dousing of thousands of lighthouse beams has been an especial boon, because it has saved the lives of the favorite routes of the migrants.

The Hottest Spot on Earth

By Melvin K. Whiteleather
(Writing from Ahwaz, Iran, in the Milwaukee Journal)

There are 100 miles of desert between Ahwaz and Andimeshk, where I forsook the railroad car for the station wagon. With a thumb and a jeep I got rest of the trip my way.

I am now in what is reputed to be the hottest section in the world. It is a few degrees off the equator and temperatures rise higher elsewhere. But nowhere, say the books, is the heat more telling on the human body, owing to the high humidity. That is what our soldiers have been battling for over the last seven months, as they have kept supplies rolling into Russia.

At this time of year it isn't so bad. The temperature is around 100 degrees in the shade. The catch about that "in the shade" business is that there is no shade excepting in that box where the meteorologists hide the thermometer.

In another month, the temperature will be around 130 degrees in the shade and anywhere from 170 to 185 in the sun.

Andimshk, with nearby Dizful, which is called the Gibraltar of Iran because so many of the inhabitants are blind, and Bandar Shapur, the port of the gulf, are supposed to be the worst places. Next other port, Khorramshahr, and neighboring Abadan, are not far behind. Basra, on the Iraqi, on the other side of the Shatt-al-Arab river, suffers equally.

There is no relief for five full months. It's like a constant, terrible bath. Water is far more important than food or water is a scarce item. Liquids leave the body at a terrific rate. Consequently, life is one drink after another.

No human can work during the intense hours of the day. Work only begins in the night and ends at midnight. It depends, of course, according to local circumstances. In Abadan at the present time, while the heat is not yet excessive, the men work from 6 a.m. to 12 noon and from 4 p.m. to 6 p.m. At a southern airport the hours already are 3.30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

No metal can be worn next to the skin. Officers wear cotton or leather gloves for casual touching of metal. If you touch your car door unprotected, it will blister the hand. Even your belt buckle is a burn. Sweat, perspiration drips on the papers and the pen slips from the hand. Even your shoelaces are too hot to tie direct immediately. Files die in July and mosquitos in August. One Arab have a saying that "flies die in June and die while man in July."

Lieut.-Col. A. J. Abeloff, head of the general hospital, located at Ahwaz, told me of his quick laundry method. He takes soiled linen to the hospital, where it is steamed at against the wall. By the time it has been dried in the shade, dusting is dry and creased ready to wear.

The general hospital had a standard joke in which men new doctors. The newcomer is told to take a patient's temperature. Inevitably he gives the thermometer a couple of shakes and puts it into the patient's mouth. The mercury leaves it he reads 108 degrees or as high as the thermometer will register. Human beings are supposed to die at that body temperature, so the new medico gets excited.

What his ribbing colleagues had done was to give him a thermometer that had not been packed in ice. The mercury leaves it he kept on ice or the mercury will not go down to normal.

This supply route has been kept open despite the worst months by teaching the men not to flirt with the sun. Every time a new contingent arrives, the hospital fills with heat cases. The worst of them are sunstroke cases. Two years ago, there were on record of men who had temperatures beyond 106 degrees for days. They were packed in ice and died. But they came thru as mere shells.

Desert coolers have been installed. Mechanical refrigeration and air conditioning units are now functioning in the hospital. The desert cooler is a simple arrangement. Water runs over reed pads, palm leaves or even excelsior. As the water evaporates, it is cooled. The Americans have forced things by putting electric fans behind the mats.

This will be the first summer that such cooling systems have been available. Last summer, the boys sweated it out.

If heat is one problem, sand is another. A sandstorm came on afternoons at 4. The silt enters every crack. It sticks to perspiring faces and you wipe off mud.

All sorts of tricks have been devised to alleviate the situation. Sand traps have been made to prevent the sand from covering the roads and the precious little patch of green grass around the jeeple. That grass, however small, is a cheering sight here in the desert. It is nursed tenderly with water during the night and watched over during the day." Incidentally, what is probably the only lawn mower in Iran is used to trim it.

The camp streets are neatly laid out and an oil truck goes around oiling the ground to keep down the dust. The camp stands on the entire desert, so the sand blows in.

A few months ago the camp here was a wide expanse of desert. Now it is a brick village with comforts the desert never before knew.

"CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT" by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER 38.

Forrestall's lips quirked in a fleeting smile. "You can't give away what you don't have," he pointed out.

"But you said the estate belonged to me, now," I commented, more and more perplexed and, puzzled.

"Certainly. But you said you didn't wish to accept it. And if you don't—how can you give it to Cleta Burton?"

"Then, what am I to do?" I asked him. I had never in all my life felt so helpless.

"Accept your inheritance, and later on—give it away, if you must." he advised me dryly. "First of all have an administrator appointed and have the estate settled. If you trust me sufficiently, in spite of Inspector Pettengill, I'd be glad to take on the responsibility. It's really the same work I've been doing, under another name. And perhaps you'd prefer your father, or Mr. Reid, or an outsider—"

"Heaven, no! I couldn't bother Dad, or Allan, with looking after Bruce's estate when they're as busy as they are now," I protested.

"Perhaps not." Forrestall seemed to be more amused all the time. "Anyway, you must meet with no more than willing to administer an estate for which you will receive, when accounting to a good two million, after the deduction of the double inheritance tax, and the Burton end alone. And the Dalmar end has much more on the Jollimar side."

I gasped and sagged deeper into my chair, too surprised to speak.

"That—that's terrible! I haven't cut at last—" I can't feel that's right. Are you sure Cleta won't get it, if I don't accept?"

"Absolutely sure," Forrestall nodded.

"But—who wouldn't? I puzzled.

He shrugged. "The state. After endless delay and fuss—advertisements for possible distant relatives—the appearance of the usual bunch of impostors, and so forth."

"If I take the inheritance—I give you my marriage certificate, and have you appointed administrator—then I can give it to Cleta?" I asked Forrestall.

"To Cleta or anyone you please. He assured me with a crooked smile.

"Then I have no choice," I said resolutely, getting out of my chair. "If you will, I might as well go get it for you."

In my room I dug out a flat box in which I kept the relics of my shortlived venture in romance: my marriage certificate, a note of dismissal and five thousand dollars in large bills.

And then, suddenly, the enormity of things struck me as so incredibly funny I started having hysterics, laughed and laughed, shrilly, in a guffaw, and with the tears streaming down my face, until I ached all over.

The noise roused Aunt Millie from the nap she'd obviously been taking. She came running in, her hair down, one foot slipshod in her negligee open and billowing behind her like a sail.

"Look at it!" I gasped at her, between fits of hysterical mirth. "Look at it! Five thousand dollars! To help rectify our mistake." I got rid of me, in other words. And now! Forrestall says I'm the heir at all by half a million. Millions, Aunt Millie! All the Jollimar and the Burton money, and the radium thrown in if I can find it! And I don't want it! I'm only taking it so I can give it to Cela."

An hour after Forrestall's departure, Inspector Pettengill came ostensibly to relieve Sergeant Flynn who had occupied his "office" ever since trailing me home.

Aunt Millie and I were having tea in the library at the time. She had quieted me down and was trying to make me eat something, questioning me between well-meant urgings toward tea, cheese, bran toast and jam—about my news, which she plainly hadn't yet assimilated, due, I'm afraid, to my excited irrelevancy.

The Inspector's voice in the hall, and the prospect of renewed questioning by Sgt. Flynn at the time, she where it showed through her magazine, sent her and me flying in all directions at once and pretending sleep, illness and sudden indisposition.

But I was for once eager to see the Inspector—having for first time to tell him a change. And so I jumped up and dragged her with me into the transformed drawing room, where I delved immediately into an account of my amazing inheritance, reluctance to accept it, and first resolve of turning it over to Cela, the moment the law would let me.

Inspector Pettengill listened attentively, with ponderous nods, grunts and occasional smiles.

"Glad you took it," he approved when I had ended. "And glad you ain't aiming to hog it all. Only, don't carry his generosity too far. Give Miss Cela part of the Burton money, as it's just and right. But keep the Jollimar fortune. Should ought have something for what you been through."

Aunt Millie's expression showed she liked the suggestion. But the way I felt that day, nothing pertaining to my unforeseen millions of millions sounded reasonable or attractive. And I quickly changed the subject to Conley Forrestall's chagrin and worry about being unjustly suspected of murder and dishonesty.

The Inspector chuckled. "He's worried, eh? Well, seems like he's getting himself into a long stretch when a short one would do. I didn't suppose there'd be objections."

"I don't see how you could—doubt his honesty," I remonstrated. "He's the kind of a fig. Now. He's managed the whole shipyard deal, including the negotiations with the government. People of his importance don't go about—distributing clients."

"Or slaughtering their golden-egged geese," Aunt Millie threw in dryly.

And I wound up: "And just to show you I don't share your suspicions, I've signed a paper, asking to have him appointed my administrator."

"Couldn't found better," the Inspector assured me solemnly. "On that."

"Only what?" I prompted, when he stopped and left the word hanging in the air.

"Only I notice you standing up for him being honest only," he pointed out, with an amused twinkle in his eye. "I didn't hear you say you were sure he wasn't —the murderer."

The remark took the wind out of my sails.

"Why, I—I—it was simply — we weren't speaking of the murder," I stammered incoherently, and then made up my mind to be honest, and to remember, that ain't the truth. I didn't say it, because I'm not sure myself, one way or the other. One minute I believe he did it, and the next I don't. Anyway, of course we don't know at all, an outsider who's managed to remain invisible. It's dreadful, Inspector! I've never been in such a state—so blind and prejudiced in all my life!"

"You—and the rest of us," the Inspector agreed, amicably. "Ain't what you might call an easy case. Sort of turned around, first and first. With the motive and the way it was done clear's day—but not a pointer to a real suspect."

"Then you believe that both murders were committed for the radium and by one person?" Aunt Millie tried to nail him down.

"Wouldn't even go so far's that," the Inspector told her. "Might well been Mr. Bruce killed the Professor—and good right too—and someone else killed him. Maybe over the radium, maybe for some other reason. But—that's my worry. You needn't bother your head about it, or Miss Kay's. She's got to have her mind free to get that there estate settled. Quite a responsibility for a young woman like her, having the say-so over millions. What you going to do first, when Forrestall's appointed?" he ended, turning to me.

"Go through the safe in the Burton library and see what's in it. Mr. Forrestall suggested I'd better do it right away, so that I know what it's all about," I informed him, with a sensation of Mr. Forrestall" the Inspector approved. "Now, doing the same thing—you don't want. Might even change your mind for you, the inside of that safe."

Forrestall going to be with you when you take that look-see?"

"I don't know. He's going to show me where the safe is as soon as I've appointed—and as he's appointed—ed. That's are far as we go," I told him, a little stiffly.

"And far enough too," he agreed, getting to his feet and making ready to leave. "Anyways, it'll give you a day to yourself, and I don't ask for the appointment before morning. Use it for a good rest — if you can get it."

"I don't need a rest, but—why shouldn't I be able to get it if I've wanted it?" I asked, walking along with him toward the door.

"Because our e-lights won't let you," he grinned down at me. "What if the Burton murder all over the place—and you and the great, big front page, and you the great, big front page? Can't see you wouldn't keep 'em away. You'll have more callers tomorrow than — than they got flowers in your garden."

The Inspector appointed. "I don't want any callers. I won't see them," I protested.

"Oh, yes you will—see some of 'em," he contradicted, pleasantly, but with a firmness that I'll give Nettie a list of who's to be let in."

I looked suspiciously at his sign of determination, and so I gave in, unwillingly. "All right. Anything you say," I assured him. "Only—please let me get a rest from people. Maybe you want to question about Bruce's murder?"

"Didn't say I wanted to question 'em," he parried.

"Then—that you wouldn't." Aunt Millie imitated him ironically. "Here's a beast, Inspector! Tell us what, or whom, you suspect. We're very interested persons, you know—what with two murders and Kay's incredible inheritance as a result of them."

He seemed to see the justice of her plea. "Guess you have a right to be worried," he admitted, "so long as the murderer's still on the loose. And I can't help you a whole lot either, except maybe by giving you a piece of advice: Don't go nosing around by yourselves. If you're going to do and where you're going to be any given time. Nobody. Not even Forrestall."

"Why not Forrestall?" Aunt Millie's curiosity was aroused.

"He has a gabby fool for a wife and can't keep from telling her what he knows. That's why," the Inspector explained.

"You mean—the murderer might have had this information from Alice Forrestall?" I asked incredulously.

"Could be."

The Inspector made a wry grimace. "In a round-about way, yes," he admitted. "One of the alone and the letter. In the safe, didn't he? And the letter from Mrs. Burton was to be at the camp, and the road you'd come on—"

There was no refuting the statement. It all seemed so clear and simple.

"Then—you have an idea of—of the murderer is?" I asked.

The Inspector suddenly looked grim. "Ideas don't make arrests and convictions," he said briefly. "You have the murders to me and put your mind on the Burton estate."

It was almost dinnertime when the Inspector left at last, and I had just time to take a quick shower and change before Dad came home, bringing Stan with him.

All through the afternoon I had looked forward to Allan, longed to forget the horror of the night and the trying days ahead in a quiet hour with him. And then I didn't get it.

The news of my sudden wealth threw both my father and my future husband into such a dither, the discussion about it—what to offer Cela and how to make her accept—once, and the radium—very much the radium—so lively and so long lost, it obliterated my desire for a twosome with Allan—in fact, every thought of him, until I'd.

I staggered up to my room at last, thoroughly overwrought and mentally exhausted, and literally fell into bed and slept at the same time.

I woke late in the morning, fresh and rested and completely absorbed in speculations about the murder, and what the day would bring me. I got part of them answered when I came downstairs.

Aunt Millie preceded me by a good hour and was full of news.

"Let breakfast wait a few minutes. I simply must show you something," she announced with her funny little sniff—which had been sadly in abeyance the last terrible days—dragging me into the living room next to the library.

It looked like a florist's shop, banished with huge bouquets and potted plants. And on the table by the window the sofa was a large tray heaped with mail.

The condolences of Cliffport's "e-light," to use the Inspector's unconscionable slang, and with an inclusive wave of her hand. "Opened some of them—couldn't resist. They'll slay you, darling! Seems like they have it all doped out to suit them. Heavens, I've been caught in the middle of it!" grinning to talk like Cliffport! Bruce came back in secret, for a reconciliation with you. He engineered your father into the shipyard job, for that end only. And Bruce died when you're going to fall into each other's arms for the fade-out clinch — because he's murdered! Here, read a few 'em, plse!"

But I shook my head. My sense of humor was definitely under a cloud this morning, and the "Miss Bruce Burton" staring at me from the envelopes looked pretty feminine to me.

"No, thank you! Not before breakfast. I told her firmly and walked to the dining room.

While I was doing justice to Mae's culinary art, Aunt Millie gave me a brief digest of the morning.

Conley Forrestall had called, on his way to the probate court, "He's certain he'll be appointed, at once, today," she added, and feels sure he'll be able to show you the safe combination so that you can get acquainted with your new possessions and have about—Grafton, if any," she told me. "Also, we discussed Forrestall's funeral. He thinks it would be best to have it quietly, from the funeral parlor, early in the morning before the lying in state in his house and all that kind of thing."

"Thank the stars he feels that way. The other would have been ghastly," I said fervently.

"That's what I told him. I was sure you'd approve. So it's to be at seven. He suggests your father and Allan should be present, and we two and Cela stay at home. I said it was all right."

"You're my guardian angel!" I assured her gratefully, and then having finished my first real meal in thirty-six hours, and my mind in the drawing room to say good morning to Inspector Pettengill and find out if anything important had occurred during the night.

He wasn't a very successful visit. Flynn was with the Inspector when I walked in. He looked haggard, and so was Roberts — looking embarrassed and shifting his big feet on the lovely Aubusson carpet by way of greeting me, his latest victim.

I plainly was interrupting a grilling of the caretaker, and would out again meekly when I was told imperiously: "No time for you now. Nothing happened anyway," to join Aunt Millie in the living room.

A little later, while we were waiting through my distinctly irritating delay, the doorbell started in ring. Through the open arch to the hall, we could see Nettie, red-eyed and in black, proceeding doorward with the air of one officially defending a fortress in the house. Then would come the inevitable sound of the opening of the closing entrance door, and Nettie passing back, sometimes with an armful of flowers.

The people on the Inspector's list were obviously not among my early callers — unless it included Mrs. Libby.

She suddenly walked in on us from the library, via the door, avoiding doorbells as usual, and looking positively regal and in both WHAM — Rochester 1150

"My dear, dear child!" She boomed in a deeper bass than ever. "My heartfelt sympathy! And I'm so very glad you're really and truly one of us now! I must have felt it unconsciously. That's why I felt you so much from the start!"

With that she reached up, grabbed my head as if it were an unattached object, kissed me resoundingly, pulled me down with her on the sofa and proceeded with what she had come to say, once she'd let pause for a reply.

"Terrible, hurt, though. You should have taken me into your confidence, my dear. Should have come to my house, after the Stoddard disaster, instead of going to that hotel alone. A palace, so filled with sighs I couldn't make myself heard. And you, child! Not even in mourning! I'll get everything you need. For you too, Miss Wentworth. It's terrible! At the height of happiness and then sudden death! I've worked out all the details of the funeral. You needn't bother about anything. Just be the beautiful young Burton widow. Never had one before. The Burton women never outlived their men—"

WLB Grants Increases To Can. Employees Of U.S. Rails in Canada

Ottawa, June 19 —(CP)— The National War Labor Board announced today approval of application for wage increase by Canadian employees of United States railways operating in Canada.

Application for the increases was made by a number of railway unions. The case does not affect the principal application of Canadian railway workers for increases to level with United States railway wages.

The unions now represent certain Canadian as well as United States employees of a group of railroads operating in Canada. The increases in applications filed with the Board May 1 on the ground that the Canadian wage levels should be brought closer to the United States schedules because the workers performed identical services.

The unions were: Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, freight handlers, express and station employees; order of railway conductors; Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen; order of railway telegraphers; Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees; Brotherhood of Railroad Signalmen of America; Federated Shop Trades, and International Brotherhood of Firemen and Oilers.

Nazi Winged Bombs Are Jet Propelled

London, June 19—(CP Reuters)—German pilotless planes attacking Britain are jet propelled, it was stated officially here today.

Authorities said also that the plane or pilotless bomb — is launched from a ramp and has a range of about 130 miles. Flight speed is between 300 and 350 miles an hour. The missile has an explosive power about equivalent to a ton of ordinary bomb.

The Air Ministry news service said the planes are launched with the aid of a take-off rocket and are fired from ramps. The ramps are operated by an automatic pilot set before launching.

Once the missile has been launched the pilot and other equipment control over its movements, the news service added.

Since the start of the last tens of thousands or tons of bombs have been dropped on the "launching or launching bases.

Photographs show extensive damage hag been caused to them and this resulted in dislocation of the widespread plans intended to assail Britain.

An Air Ministry statement said "other offensive measures to frustrate the enemy's attacks on attacks on British cities from across the Channel" have been taken.

Memorial Service For Canadian Dead In Normandy

By WILLIAM STEWART
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With the Canadian Forces in Normandy, June 19 — (CP) — Under a wind-swept square of sandy soil overlooking the sea a memorial service was held yesterday for men of the Canadian assault force who died in the D-Day attack on the beaches of Normandy.

The service was in a temporary graveyard where a few British and German dead also are buried. It was sponsored by officers and men of a British beach group as a tribute to the Canadians.

Prayers were said by an Honorary British captain who stood in battle dress, bareheaded in a rope-ed-off enclosure of the little burial ground. A British padre in cassock and white surplice conducted the Protestant service. At the close the absence of a Jewish chaplain, read a prayer for any Jewish members buried there.

A little group of French civilians from a nearby town, through which the assault troops fought their way, stood outside the enclosure on one side of the troops, and at the end of the service placed flowers at the foot of the white crosses on the graves.

Honorary Major J. M. Malone, Edmonton, thanked the British troops for their gesture.

Beach in Normandy Busiest French Port

By HOWARD COWAN
(AP War Correspondent)

On a Beach in Normandy, June 19, (AP) — This beachhead has become France's busiest port.

More shipping was landed here Sunday and sent into the American lines than passed through Cherbourg during an entire month of normal operations.

And still it is pouring in. Merchant ships, tank landing ships and converted ocean liners ride deep by the scores with their umbrella of barrage balloons.

Their cargo bears a simple standard order: Unload with dispatch. To thousands of sailors and soldiers who pass this way each day this beach is their temporary hometown.

There are no houses—just tents and foxholes.

Flood 5 Feet Deep Snatches Children From Parents' Arms

Glendive, Mont., June 19 —(AP)— Mrs. Ethel Mae Struth were awakened in their trailer house by violent pitching and tossing. Thinking it a recurring violent wind which has struck Montana Friday, each parent bundled a child and started for a nearby rooming house. They stepped into a flash flood more than five feet deep and the swift waters jerked the babies from their arms. Today, the body of one child, three months old, was found near the trailer house. The other, 16 months old, still is missing.

WHERE FRENCH PARTISANS STRIKE

Increasingly important activities of the French underground are revealed daily and this map gives a general idea of how widely scattered are their areas of action. Lyons, Limoges and Grenoble are partially under German control. Also in areas of sabotage and military groups have built a hostile and active network. The hill people of the Alps region block Nazi traffic on highways; the entire Paris region is alive with saboteurs whose activities are report ed figuring in invasion preparations.

Crows and Owls Evil Spirits of Farms

The crow, to my way of thinking, is the boldest, trickiest, most offensive, most useless, most elusive, and most destructive form of vermin to be found among the many depredations inflicted on farmers by an insecurable, Frederick says Kenneth Roberts in The Country Gentleman. He has nothing whatever in his favor except his aversion to great horned owls — an aversion I assume, due to the same fundamental reason that fills every gangster with a desire to machine-gun all his rivals.

When a number of crows fly satisfactorily around one small section of woodland, cawing so excitedly and persistently that their scoring and fury can be heard a mile away, they are usually attacking a great horned owl and trying to drive him into the open from his safe perch close to the trunk of a big spruce.

Once in a great while crow indignation meetings are held over a hawk or a fox but nine times out of ten the object of their wrath is an owl.

Day Blindness of Owls is Myth

When the presence of an owl is thus directed, he can be stalked and killed provided the stalker is an expert at moving through the woods soundlessly and unseen. I don't know the origin of the widespread belief that owls can't see in the daytime; but I've stalked enough of them to know that day blindness among great horned owls is even less common than two-headed movie actresses. I have repeatedly crawled on hands and knees wriggling thru junipers and alders on my stomach to get within gunshot of a tree around which fifty crows were conducting a noisy aerial service, but only once have I got near enough to kill the owl they were attacking.

Comes Back to Scene of His Kill

A great horned owl is particularly vulnerable when frightened away from a partly eaten victim. When not frightened, he eats every last scrap of his kill, no matter how large it is, and such a repast seems to satisfy him for three days. If he leaves anything, however, he comes back the next night to finish it up, in which case he's waited up—finished—easy meat. All that's necessary is to set three traps close to the partly eaten body, one almost under the tail, say, and one at each shoulder.

Owls are the worst vermin that afflict duck breeders, because they take full-grown birds, break up families and snatch mothers from their nests so that irreplaceable eggs are lost; but crows run them a close second. In fact, I think my hatred of crows is more searing, more nerve-racking, more paroxysmic of black rages, foul profanity, surging blood pressure, indigestion and neuritis than is my detestation of owls.

Crows are Diabolically Clever

I am perpetually enraged at the diabolical cleverness of the crow, his infinite capacity for evil, his contemptible boldness, his insolence, his impenetrable, selfish perfidy, his treachery and destructiveness. And above all I am perpetually depressed by his inability to cope with his thievery and destructiveness.

Once I went to raising ducks, crows didn't mean much to me. I didn't like them, because they were noisy and offensive, but neither did I dislike them sufficiently to kill them.

But with our second season of hatching, all the crows in our vicinity learned about our ducks and we began to learn a little more about crows. About twelve chiches of mallards hatching out that year, averaging twelve ducklings to a clutch. No sooner would a clutch of diminutive ducklings go skittering into the water behind their mother than they would begin to disappear.

102 Ducklings Fall Victim to Thieves

We found later that crows took the ducklings to their nests, dismembered them, and fed them to the baby crows. That year crows took 102 ducklings, leaving forty-four to reach maturity.

In the following year I took early steps to overcome the menace. At the opening of the nesting season I surrounded the pond with all the accepted crow deterrents — a lifelike scarecrow, half concealed beneath a bush, with a gun in his hands; scores of pieces of tin dangling and twisting from branches near the nesting grounds, pieces of string with rags knotted to them; twelve dead crows suspended from poles.

That year we had thirty-two mallards on nests. Each mallard laid two clutches of eggs averaging fourteen eggs to the clutch. Crows took six hundred eggs out of the nests, and the only ducklings we raised were hatched in an incubator and raised in a breeding pen covered with wire.

Time of Depredations Varies

When the egg stealing started I got up hopefully at dawn, to kill the crows, but the crows would then steal eggs only at dusk. If I stalked them both at dusk and dawn, they did their egg-stealing at high noon, when I went home for lunch.

We finally contrived to reduce our losses a little by a new form of crow blind, and by tastefully arranging groups of three eggs in places where we had learned ducks never nested; then by setting three concealed traps around each group of eggs. The blind was a box made to look like the grain bin in which we kept our duck feed. It had peepholes all round and a sloping cover, like a grain bin. The cover had two heavy counterweights so arranged that when the occupant of the box stepped on a treadle he raised a catch that let the cover fly up. Thus he could jump to his feet and get in two quick shots at the rapidly vanishing crows.

Vichy Promenade

By Joe Alex Morris in the New York Herald Tribune.

One of the strangest promenades in history is about to come to an end in tortured France. It is a promenade begun shortly after the fall of France, when Marshal Henri Philippe Petain moved into the little resort town of Vichy with an assorted crew of government functionaries who had been persuaded, bullied and blackmailed by Pierre Laval into collaboration with the Nazis.

The Old Marshal took up residence in the Hotel du Parc, had the faucets that tap an effervescent solution of sodium, calcium and magnesium carbonates, with sodium and potassium chlorides, better known to health seekers as Vichy water.

Almost every day at noon the two black-uniformed and helmeted guards at the main entrance of the hotel would snap to attention, the bayonets on their heavy rifles would move stiffly up in the sunlight, and then everybody would know that the Old Marshal was about to take his daily constitutional around the park.

Petain always came with heavy dignity through the doors of the hotel, paused beneath the flapping Tricolor and then walked sedately across the street to the park that formed the hub of the town. The Old Marshal had grown considerably stouter; his white moustache had taken on a fuller curve and gold braid had been laid aside in favor of a black suit, black overcoat and black homburg.

The occasional quick flash of his cane in the sunlight beneath the chestnut trees relieved the pompous of solemn and portly dignity.

The Marshal's promenade was peculiar because it was like a telescoped tour of defeated France. He did not walk alone. Usually there was an official or unofficial adviser at his side. Behind them strolled a little group of men whose dark hats and sombre suits marked them as bodyguards even before you noticed the bulge of a pistol beneath the cloth. In front of him were two other nonchalant strollers, of similar appearance and purpose—and on each flank were others who strolled when Petain strolled and paused when he paused. In all, ten or a dozen strollers accompanied the Old Marshal.

He walked around the rim of the park, past the streets empty of all vehicles except military automobiles; past the expensive dress shops, where windows were all but empty; past bake shops which had only a handsome photograph of Petain to display; past coffee shops, where only ersatz went into the cups; past markets where endless queues waited to buy an egg or pat of butter; past restaurants, where signs on the walls said: "It is forbidden to leave a piece of bread that has been rendered inedible by being bitten into." He passed the Ambassador Hotel, where all of the diplomats were crowded together, using bedrooms for offices, but enjoying the only bar where Scotch could still be purchased.

He passed the Minister of War, where sometimes there was a sentry on duty at the entrance and an indolent Nazi chauffeur snapped photographs of the aged French as he waited. And occasionally the Old Marshal passed a slogan that had been scrawled in white night with a piece of chalk: "Vive de Gaulle!" All of fallen France was before his eyes in a miniature as he circled the park, but if Petain saw any of it,he gave no sign of interest.

Occasionally he raised his hat to a friend. Sometimes he stopped to bow over the hand of a woman. But he seldom, if ever, glanced at the empty store windows, at the line of housewives outside the market, at the faces of the countrymen.

He didn't want to see, because he was promenading in a circle in more ways than one: he was waiting for the war to end. He was collaborating with Hitler, but that merely meant he did nothing to interfere with the speed with which the Nazis were taking over the bone and sinew of French industry with a view to making the nation permanently impotent. He was giving occasional lip service to Admiral Leahy, but that merely meant he was waiting for the confirmation of Nazi victory in Europe; the Germans in the war.

They knew that London was bombed to rubble; that the U-boats had reduced Britain almost to the status of a pirate island, isolated off the European coast; that the Mediterranean was in German hands and Moscow would soon be. They couldn't afford to believe anything else. They didn't want to see the people.

So the Old Marshal, whom Clemenceau had called a defeatist during the First World War, who accepted defeat from the moment he took over the fight in this war, marked time, strolled in a circle around Vichy, perhaps pausing while shaving in the morning, he thought up a new law and soon it would appear as a decree in the Official Journal, beginning: "I, Henri Philippe Petain," etc. Sometimes he engaged in palace intrigue against Laval; as he had long intrigued against the republic. But by the most part he just walked, or strolled in a circle.

His promenade is almost ended now. It was four years ago next month that France fell. Petain, who had not believed that Frenchmen could win at Verdun in the First World War and who accepted defeat from the moment he took over the fight in this war, failed to know that a far greater struggle is now enveloping France.

The little men of France—the workers, the tradesmen, the peasants—in whom his monarchist mind could never put any faith, are about to reclaim their country.

What Petain planned for France if the Germans won the war may never be known in full except by the strenuous effort he made to destroy the remnants of the republic.

There as many who are ready to believe that having remained behind to protect the people of France as far as possible from the oppression of the Germans; to try to salvage whatever was possible from the debacle.

But the men who are coming back to France are ready to remember the Vichy promenade in another light. They will remember the failure to use France's still great armed force to defend the frontiers or the fleet or even the Loire; the abject surrender of huge armies in Africa that never fired a shot; the elimination of the French navy at an hour when it might have turned the tide of war in the Mediterranean; the indications that Petain feared the workers in his own country more than he feared the Germans.

The old man who walked beneath the chestnut trees without seeing the name of Du Chilo scrawled on the wall seems to be more alert these days to the things around him. He has put on his uniform to visit the bomb-damaged areas of Paris, and it is said that he may stay there because there is danger that the Vichy government will be cut off and paralyzed by the Frenchmen whom Petain would never trust and whom he helped to drive underground.

Perhaps the Old Marshal's eyesight is improving now that the angry Frenchmen rise again as they rose, despite his own efforts, to bar the Germans at Verdun. Or perhaps the echo of the guns of a firing squad that ended the career of Pierre Pucheu at Algiers can be heard even as far away as a sunny park in Vichy.

Germans Retreat To Inner Line Of City's Defences

Tilly Sur Seulles Near Eastern End Invasion Beachhead Occupied by British CAPTURE VALOGNES

By ROGER D. GREENE
(AP War Correspondent)

With American troops in the suburbs, and the Germans fell back from Valognes and swept a mile beyond that town to the inner defences of Cherbourg's fortified area, only four miles from Cherbourg.

Simultaneously other American troops advanced to St. Martin, only four miles from Cherbourg.

The Germans fell back from Valognes without attempting a major stand, and there were reports that enemy was withdrawing his lines toward Cherbourg.

Over Mile Beyond Tilly

Communique No. 29 reported:—"The enemy once again was driven from Tilly Sur Seulles," a town which has been fought over often. Even there British patrols pushed as far as Hottot, 2 miles to the south, without encountering any serious resistance.

The situation remained static around Caen, besieged by British and Canadian forces now being built up for a strong drive. Across the river, northeast of Caen, artillery duels were reported continuing and a fierce fight which developed being captured in a wooded sector. Canadian prisoners were operating in that sector.

In the Cherbourg peninsula, meanwhile, Gen. Omar N. Bradley, the American commander, drew new strength from other sections of the beachhead and sent his troops surging northward to what headquarters called "re-ordinated attacks along the front".

Artillery hurled streams of shells into the area, with Caen's third largest, defended by possibly 30,000 German troops caught in the closing trap.

The deepest wedge was driven into the German ring of fortifications from the southwest. A column sweeping forward from captured Briquebec, 11 miles south of the port, hurled the Germans back from the outskirts of Rauville La Bigot, a village between six and seven miles south and slightly west of Cherbourg.

The American wedge across the Cherbourg peninsula now is 12 miles at its deepest point and eight miles at its narrowest. Expanding to the north, the troops are driving toward the main German defence line six miles north of the port.

It was expected that a matter of hours would show the strength of these defences and whether the Germans can manage to swing the muzzles of their coastal defence guns from the sea to repel a land attack.

The German-held Channel islands have guns capable of reaching to the Cherbourg peninsula at extreme range, but headquarters said there is little chance they believe they can seriously interfere with American advances.

Enemy Becomes Tired

The supreme command said "coordinated attacks" meant Bradley had thrown other divisions into the drive on the port and a total of ten fire from 105-millimetre howitzers to 16-inch guns of battleships.

"There may be some advantages in terrain but it can be assumed he is more tired than we are," a headquarters spokesman declared.

German troops all along the north front were reported apparently badly disorganized. From dispatches said many of the high level officers had been killed and in some sectors units had been cut to pieces.

Fierce gains were reported in the Carentan area to the south and it is set up apparent that the Germans contient mostly with holding actions there while driving all-out for Cherbourg.

We Have Quite Bad.

Despite the worst weather in days, Allied fighters and fighter-bombers swung into the battle in considerable numbers, sweeping along the roads left by the Germans around Carentan and cutting their military movements to pieces with machine-guns and bombs.

Montebourg, a scene of desperate fighting for a week or more as a key to the German defence in the north, was effectively neutralized as the attackers pounded around it.

Fighter used similar tactics in Tunisia in capturing Bizerte. Then, he drove straight for the port, but huge numerous German soldiers behind him, many of which took several days to clean up.

The building up to the beachhead forces and supplies was hampered yesterday by a wind of 25 miles an hour which whipped up the five-foot waves along the beaches. A 60-mile gale swept the channel.

6,740 Italian Refugees in Nazi Camp Suffer Malnutrition and Scabies

Rome, June 20. (AP)—Allied control commission officers who visited a camp established by the Germans for Italian refugees from the Anzio and Cassino areas reported today they found practically all the 6,740 residents suffering from malnutrition and scabies.

More than 500 of the Italians, mostly children, were afflicted with other ailments.

The camp had no latrines, no cooking facilities, inadequate water and the refugees were living in filth, the reports said.

It had one Italian doctor, but no medicines found him, at 4 p.m. in bed smoking and reading a newspaper.

Fourteen truckloads of food have been delivered to the camp and the refugees are being moved to their homes as soon as they are screened for infectious diseases.

REDS POUR THRU 30-MILE-WIDE BREACH IN LINE

Fall of the Finnish Seaport of Viipuri Appears Imminent Says Communique

CABINET MAY QUIT

Moscow, June 20 — (AP) — Big guns of the Red army only nine miles away and within sight of the Finnish seaport of Viipuri, poured salvo after salvo into its outskirts today.

Australia's correspondent Ivan Cespor said Viipuri "is just ahead of the Red Army" and that the speed of the "remarkable" offensive was increasing.

Marshal Nikolai Shvankov, the Red Star correspondent, declared coastal defences of the Finns along the Gulf of Viipuri have collapsed and that their sailors are now fighting to cut off large numbers of the enemy in little peninsulas south of the city.

Outside Viipuri the Russians defeated the 18th and 10th Finnish Infantry Brigades, a fresh cavalry division and a crack Swedish Regiment."

There were no indications in Moscow that the Finns are seeking to reopen peace negotiations. The people are not talking about it and the general view is that the offensive is going splendidly and that soon the Red Army will be at the 1940 Russo-Finnish peace frontiers, just 16 miles beyond Viipuri.

A Red fleet dispatch said Russian artillery and machine-gun fire from craft in the Gulf of Viipuri and the Gulf of Finland, sinking two transports totalling 14,000 tons. In Viipuri port two other Finnish transports were sunk, in addition to smaller craft. Heavy ships of the Baltic fleet are moving in the coastal road on the Gulf of Finland and adding their weight to the assault on the city.

Ice floes in the Gulf of Finland was blocked and escape by water from Viipuri now was impossible, Shvankov reported. The fall of the Finnish seaport of Viipuri appeared imminent today as Moscow announced that Red Army troops, pouring through a 30-mile-wide breach in the Mannerheim line, had reached the Gulf of Finland 16 miles from the gateway city yesterday.

Russian airmen and long-range artillery bombed and shelled Finnish defences attempting to hold the seaport, a broadcast Soviet communique said. Moscow Daily News Chronicle correspondent with the Russian armies attacking through a 30-mile wide breach in the Mannerheim line, had reached the Gulf of Finland 16 miles from the gateway city yesterday.

Moscow Daily News Chronicle correspondent with the Russian armies attacking through a 30-mile-wide breach in the Mannerheim line, had reached the Gulf of Finland 16 miles from the gateway city yesterday.

A prediction the Finnish cabinet would be overthrown soon was made by Stockholm newspaper Svenska Dagbladet, which said President Kyosti Kallio's cabinet and Premier Johannes Valto Tanner, the two men who signed the peace pact with Russia, rejection of Soviet armistice terms would be impossible for them to accept. The paper did not name a possible successor to Premier Tanner, but said he would not be Dr. Juho K. Passikivi, former Premier who flew to Moscow in March to receive Moscow's peace terms.

The Russian communique said Soviet airmen and 152 ships in Viipuri harbor, including six transports, and that one Finnish unit alone killed 1,000 Finns. Soviet troops also captured a heavy raid on Kirkenes in Northern Norway, a supply port for German divisions stationed in Finland.

Allied Guns Step Up Expenditure of Shells Production Is Increased

By JACK WILLIAMS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, June 20. (CP)—Canadian 25-pounder batteries pumping out ammunition in France and Italy at a rate that makes artillery duos of the First Great War look positively pyrotechnic displays—and that, the Munitions Department said today, is the reason Canada's ammunition program has been pushed to new heights.

W. L. Tregoning, director of Ammunition Production, told the British Ministry of Supply, has repeatedly completed a series of all-time record tallys to Canadian workers engaged in ammunition production. Today-information he gave workers was made public.

"The truth is the Allies are far from running short of ammunition but from a better experience the United Nations have found that devastation can be more quickly done by an increasing use of artillery fire", he said.

"Accordingly, on all fronts the Allies are stepping up their expenditure of ammunition. Their reserves have not been touched. Production in the production program result simply from the need of assuring that their fighting forces have adequate munition stockpiles will be adequate".

The first-quarter of 25-pounders, as well as other guns, has far exceeded expectations, Mr. Tregoning said.

What More Workers.

He appealed for help in the First Great War. The Canadian Corps averaged 1,370 tons of ammunition per 24 hours. Today a single 25-pounder gun can fire 1 1-2 tons of ammunition an hour.

A call has gone out for 10,000 more workers to help speed up Canadian ammunition production. Engineers estimate it takes 21 man-hours to produce a complete round of 25-pounder ammunition. In that number of hours, Canada produces more than 1,000 rounds.

In addition to 25-pounder ammunition Canada has new orders for 4.5-inch field gun ammunition, 5.5-inch Howitzer shells and projectiles for heavier mobile field artillery. Labor is listed as the main limiting factor in attaining the new goals already achieved.

Canada's production of gun ammunition has been no mean achievement in the past. Last year it was at the rate of about 30,000,000 rounds a year, and production to date this year is 16,000,000 rounds, —but to meet the speed at which these shells are being fired over the battlefronts, Canada must step rolling Normandy hills new targets are being established for Canadian workers.

AMERICANS WIN GREAT AIR BATTLE IN THE PACIFIC

300 Jap Planes Destroyed Off Saipan Island by Task Force

ONE VESSEL DAMAGED

Pearl Harbor, June 20 —(AP)— American carrier pilots and warship guns have destroyed an estimated 300 Japanese planes near Saipan to win the biggest Pacific air battle since Midway, while a land surge captured a vital airstrip and sealed off the southern end of the island.

In a vicious battle lasting several hours, the admiral's task force smashed a sustained Japanese aerial assault Sunday, Admiral Nimitz said this afternoon, destroying only one American vessel damaged.

(Tokyo radio today broadcast a special Japanese communique saying an "Allied fleet" attacking the Marianas had met the battleship, two cruisers, one destroyer, one submarine and 30 planes, but had acknowledged American forces had established a beachhead on Saipan Island.)

With the land battle still raging to the north of Garapan, where the invaders began preparing the newly-captured airfield at Aslito, on Saipan's southern coast — the first Japanese territory within the true central Pacific middle defence arc.

Pushing through jungle-covered hills and across American positions and army troops have traversed the island's narrow waist to reach Magicienne bay on the East Coast, 5-1-2 miles from the western landing beach.

The two countries, United States and Russia were exempt from the ban and during the time prevailed there a few exceptions were made for other nations, notably Gen. Charles de Gaulle, the French Committee of National Liberation being allowed to visit London.

BRITISH ARMY ENTERS PERUGIA: ELBA CAPTURED

Organized Resistance on Elba Is Ended After Porto Longone Falls

1,800 PRISONERS

By LYNN HEINZERLING
Associated Press War Correspondent

Rome, June 20 —(AP)— British 8th Army units pressing northward on the Italian mainland have entered Perugia, major communications centre 84 miles northeast of Florence and 65 miles southeast of Rome, after the German position in the north had been breached by the conquest of Elba by French colonial troops.

The French crushed the last stubborn resistance on Elba yesterday. The swift campaign netted 1,800 prisoners, or all but a small portion of the enemy garrison.

Organized resistance on Elba collapsed with capture of Porto Longone, the main seaport on the island. The garrison fled after the Germans had blown up their ammunition and supply dumps.

Eighth army troops were encountering stiff German resistance today in Perugia. On both sides of the Italian peninsula the Germans defended a considerable distance, an allied communique said.

Fifth army troops on the Italian front in the face of resistance at key points.

The 5th Army advanced more than nine miles north of Grosseto, which is some 32 miles beyond Orbetello.

Most of the prisoners taken on Elba were German and enemy officials said the garrison there numbered estimated at 500.

Portoferraio, the island's capital, fell Sunday after an aerial bombardment.

With Elba Napoleons at Monte San Martino was captured unopposed by Canadian troops.

Participating in the conquest were a battalion of French commandos, Senegalese and Goumiers (Moroccans), with the Royal and United States navies transporting and supplying the troops.

A Troublesome City.

NAZI INVASION ATTEMPT BROKEN BY BRITAIN IN '40

Prime Minister Tells House Concentration Of Ships Destroyed Before Leaving

ANSWERS QUESTIONS

London, June 20 —(CP)—Prime Minister Churchill told the House of Commons today that a German attempt to invade Britain in 1940 had been smashed before heavy concentrations of ships and troops were able to leave continental ports.

Mr. Churchill's statement came in response to a series of questions from the floor by MAJ. Tryvan Lewis, who asked the prime minister if he could give the House details of a reported Nazi invasion attempt.

Mr. Churchill first said he had nothing to add to the government's previous non-committal replies, but then MAJ. Adams asked whether "the enemy set in motion the apparatus of a seaborne invasion," the Prime Minister said:

"I do not quite know what is meant by setting in motion. Setting in motion in the sense of crossing the Channel. No, but setting in motion in the sense of making very large concentrations of troops and ships to cross the Channel. Yes."

Emanuel Shinwell, Labor, then asked:

"I suppose he (the Prime Minister) could say that if such an invasion was taking place it was unsuccessful?"

Mr. Churchill smiled and answered: "Yes."

"Did any of this shipping ever emerge from ports across the channel?" MAJ. Adams pressed.

"Yes, it did," the Prime Minister said. "A great deal of it was knocked to pieces and then they changed their minds."

Stronghold is Taken In 6-Week Siege By Ghurka Troops

Chungking, June 20 (AP)—A Chinese communique announced today that Ghurka troops and Kachin levies have captured the heavily defended Japanese base of Myitkyina, 90 miles north of Myitkyina in the Kachin province of Northern Burma, thus ending a six weeks' siege.

At the same time, the Bulletin said, Chinese troops driving from the Mogaung Valley some 40 miles west of Myitkyina, have advanced to within miles from captured &Kmaing, Chinese-held stronghold. Chindits, meanwhile, were reported continuing their encircling movement around Mogaung.

No important changes have taken place on the situation around Myitkyina, the Bulletin added.

Monty's Tactics Force Rommel Into Defence Role With Panzers

By SIDNEY MASON
(Reuters War Correspondent)

Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force, June 20— (CP) —More than 1,500 American heavy bombers, possibly the greatest force in history, today simultaneously attacked rocket bomb platforms in the Pas De Calais and an army of objectives in Central Germany ranging from oil refineries to airplane and tank plants.

Front dispatches revealed if it did not surpass that sent out last Wednesday in attack French airfields, bridges and the Emmerich Oil Refinery in Germany.

With the Allied air escort, the sky fleet totalled upward of 2,000 planes.

The heavy bombers blasted synthetic oil plants and oil refineries around Hannover, Hamburg, Magdeburg and Brunswick and one near Magdeburg, and an airplane wing repair and parts plant near Brunswick.

Stockholm reported 21 of the enemy bombers made forced landings in Sweden.

Weather Clear Over Germany.

Returning crewmen said they found clear weather over Germany but were forced to bomb through a cloud cover over the Pas De Calais. Today's giant operation took a part of the fleet more than 550 miles almost to the Polish border in the north, about 10 miles north of the Baltic seaport of Stettin in far eastern Germany.

While all American bomber and fighter fleet was over Europe and smashing again at the ramps from which Germany's rocket-bombs are launched, Britain's Allied aerial forces swarmed across the channel in increasing weather to continue with the harassment of German forces in Normandy.

The Paris radio soon left the air, indicating medium bombers and fighters are now battling behind German lines.

Today's bomber formation was the fifth force of more than 1,000 heavyweights the American air force has sent out since D-Day.

3rd Assault in Day.

Only once before was the third within 24 hours against the Pas De Calais area and rocket sites, a bombe continue to stream into Southern England today.

Air force commander Gen. Henry H. Arnold, touring the air inspection tour, credited the European air force's invasion operation with having permitted the Russian forces to operate unhampered from enemy air interference, and to pave the way for them to move forward on the Finnish front.

"This," he said, "together with the direct attacks on Germany itself, has shortened the remaining time for the defeat of the enemy."

The Germans put up a heavy anti-aircraft barrage over Pas De Calais in defence of their rocket installations.

Many Rocket Bombs Destroyed

Over Britain, snap-shooting anti-aircraft gunners and relays of swooping fighter-pilots blasted dozens of Nazi rocket-planes out of the sky overnight, and the Allies now appeared to be getting the range of this new weapon on the sixth day of the "buzz-bomb" blitz.

The Germans first tried a handful of the pilotless planes but this did not set the present sustained attack going until June 16.

In one district alone four flying bombs were shot down by night fighters within five minutes. Three exploded in the air in quick succession.

The Germans were launching the robots in the particular order. Sometimes as many as five came over almost together.

In daylight today the Germans kept winging the one-ton bombs into England at sporadic intervals. The Air Ministry announced that the rocket concentrations were being taken to wipe out the cross-Channel launching sites.

U. S. heavy bombers struck twice yesterday at the rocket empire installations in the Pas de Calais the Air Ministry made known that six months of constant attacks had blasted out so many of the launching platforms that the pilotless bomb finally were put into operation on less than one-fourth the scale originally planned.

As Allied preventive measures got under full swing anti-aircraft gunners reported it was somewhat difficult to bring the rocket bombs than at regular planes. Sgt. Tom Pinckney, British veteran in charge of a mixed battery, said: "They are faster-moving targets than he had been used to but we are getting their measure and they are not bothering us much."

Due for Let-Down.

As the flying-bomb offensive progressed there were indications of increasing uneasiness among Nazi propagandists that the German population was due for a disappointment.

In extolling the new weapon and denying reports of panic in London, German broadcasters voiced frequent cautions against expecting too much.

Gunners on the Channel coast reported that they ranged coolly as now have the advantage or ordinary night ones raiders, as the rocket flames light up the bombs and they can aim and control their firing more at sea. Gunners open up on them when they are still over the water. Fighters usually take over with them further inland.

The rockets also have the British balloon barrage in their path. One was shot down by balloon cables and exploded with a terrific blast in a field, damaging nearby houses.

Gunners said the Germans sometimes fire a salvo of different types of the pilotless planes, because "we watch all shapes and sizes and range."

It was estimated the smaller bombs carried explosive charges of 2,000 lbs an hour while the larger ones carried charges of 4,000 pounds an hour.

The Ministry officials termed "ridiculous" reports that some of the rocket bombs travel at 600 miles an hour.

'Crockerphone' Did Good Job On D-Day News

This chap, George Crocker, City Hall caretaker, who recently stepped out of ordinary character to become chief beautician to the city hall clock and tower is a versatile young man.

For instance, on D-Day, while the office staff was agog with the news, he quietly slipped upstairs carrying a mysterious black box, unobtrusively he went about his ordinary routine, then as quietly, started manipulating a series of wires. Finally he plugged a wire in a socket, made several magical passes with his hand over a few dials, and noises started to emanate from the strange contraption.

Presently a surprised and delighted staff were listening to invasion bulletins as they were aired from the little black box.

This "mystery cabinet" is the brainchild of Crocker, who sorted radio parts from a miscellaneous collection of salvaged machines. A tiny bulb glows in its front panel which is of plain ordinary wood and painted black. Inside is a mechanical melange of wires, bulbs, and other radio contraptions.

Anyway, the "Crockerphone" works and is doing a good job. When asked by a staff member what a 2-inch hole roughly carved out of the panel was for, he smiled and replied, "Television".

Belleville Schools to Re-Open For School Term September 5

Schools in Belleville will re-open for the Autumn semester on September 5th in accordance with the regulations of the Department of Education, it was announced at the June meeting of the Board of Education as the Board entered upon a two-month Summer vacation. However, the Board will co-operate to the fullest measure with the Department of Education in the matter of permitting secondary school students from the Belleville Collegiate Institute to remain in vital war industry such as harvesting, processing, preserving and the canning of food.

The Board of Education pointed out, however, that in cases of students remaining in such industries they must be given 100 per cent credit of attendance with no loss of time, when so engaged. This period cannot exceed four weeks after the opening of school, however. Chairman C. D. Crosby pointed out that a goodly number of students from the Belleville Collegiate Institute had volunteered to assist in vital farm work and other essential war work during the summer vacation period. Principal W. S. Turner assured the Board he and his teaching staff would co-operate to the fullest measure in fulfilling the wishes of the Department to protect pupils affected.

Inspector Reports.

In the report of Public School Inspector-Administrator L. A. Kells it was pointed out, that the report of Public School principals, in Belleville regarding records of pupils qualifying for certificates for perfect attendance throughout the school year is worthy of note and merits recognition by the Board. Pupils in public schools in Belleville for the term just ended totalled 158, as against 129 in 1943, 42 in 1942 and one in 1941. Of the 158 students with perfect attendance records they were divided by schools as follows— Queen Alexandra 44; King George 48; Queen Mary 36 and Queen Victoria 30.

Enrolment in the Belleville Public Schools for the month of May was announced as totalling 1,716, as against 1,631 for the corresponding month in 1943. The individual school attendance for last month was: Queen Alexandra 480; King George 405; Queen Mary 372 and Queen Victoria 450.

Classes attaining over 96 per cent attendance during last month were those of Miss G. Houston, Miss K. MacPherson, Miss C. Wilson, Principal Anderson, Miss N. Wedden, Principal Brown, Miss H. Thompson, Mr. Hackett, Miss W. Leslie, Miss M. Moorcroft, Miss L. Arkils, Principal Frederick, Miss I. Horton, Miss A. English, Mr. Bateman and Miss M. Cook. Mr. Kells also revealed that during the month, Mr. R. D. Keefe, B.A., director of Public School Attendance for Ontario, had inspected Belleville schools and tendered a favorable report. It was also announced Principal Turner and Mr. Kells had personally interviewed the 172 pupils in the Public School graduating classes of the city.

Accept 100 Bibles.

The Board accepted 100 Bibles to be used in Queen Alexandra and Queen Mary Schools. The gift was made by the Gideon Society. In conjunction with a program of the Department of Health, the school nurse and school dentist, Dr. Clarke, met with Secretary-Administrator Kells to arrange a revised program for dental survey, and preventive and remedial work in the Public Schools.

The School Nurse's report, presented by Mrs. Watt showed, that during the month of May, 37 home visits had been made. One hundred and seventy-eight First Aid cases attended, 20 vision tests and 22 hearing tests completed. Mrs. Watts also reported the Rotary Tonsil Clinic had been completed and was operating most successfully. Last month 130 pre-school children were examined.

The members of the Board present for the final meeting prior to the summer vacation period included, Chairman C. D. Crosby, E. A. Geen, W. J. Harrison, E. E. Follwell, A. Hill, H. B. Fetterly, B. C. Sisler and J. A. McIntosh.

Former Belleville Boy Has Responsible Position As Head Of Two General Electric Plants

W. Ross Gerow is General Manager of Large Factories in Cleveland

HAS BROTHER HERE

It is a far cry from a printer's devil in a small city newspaper to the general manager of two large General Electric plants in Cleveland, Ohio.

Yet that is the story of a Belleville and Prince Edward County boy, whose climb to the top rung of the ladder of success, has a distinct Alger touch.

It is the story of Mr. W. Ross Gerow, son of the late Captain Bon Gerow, and Mrs. Gerow, of Rossmore, and who first saw the light of days 47 years ago in this city.

Twenty-eight years ago, Mr. Gerow was a besmudged printer's "devil" in the composing rooms of the Belleville Ontario.

Today he sits in his well-appointed office, guiding the business destinies of two of Ohio's largest General Electric plants.

He received his education in this city and got his first job here. Later he went to Syracuse, N.Y. where he furthered his education, then going on to Cleveland where he joined the mechanical staff of the General Electric as a machine operator.

His initiative and adaptability were soon recognized. He soon became assistant foreman and then foreman. Slowly but surely the passing years saw him climbing steadily to his ultimate goal. He became assistant superintendent, where his executive ability gained him further recognition. Within a short time he occupied the office of the superintendent of the plant.

But this milestone, an important one on the road to success, did not, by any means mark the end of the journey. A seemingly tireless energy, his business and mechanical ability broadened by years of experience in his chosen vocation, earned for him further laurels.

He became assistant to the general manager of the plant. And the crowning award to years of faithful and efficient service came when he was given the general managership of not only the plant in which he rose towards his goal, but that of another as well.

Mr. Gerow is married to a Cleveland girl and has a daughter Jean. A brother is Mr. Kenneth Gerow, himself a success in his chosen vocation, who is vice president and works manager of the Corbin Lock Company of Canada Ltd.

Mr. Gerow's father was a marine captain who sailed the Great Lakes many years before his death some years ago. His mother is at present residing in Rossmore.

Stewart-Warner Offer to Purchase Old Circus Grounds on Pine Street For Recreational Field Accepted

A. Young, General Manager of Plant, Makes Personal Appeal Before Council

OTHER BUSINESS

Turned down in committee meeting last Thursday night, the offer of the Stewart-Warner-Alemite Corporation to purchase the old circus grounds on Pine Street for a recreational field was accepted in open council Monday evening following a special appeal by Mr. Arthur Young, general manager of the plant.

Council voted to sell 16 lots on the site of the old circus grounds to the Alemite Corporation, following the promise of Mr. Young that considerable money would be spent by their guild in fitting it for a recreational field. It was intimated that a hardball diamond would be laid out and other improvements made.

The fact that the grounds were already used by workers of the Alemite Corporation as a recreational field at practically no cost to them, seemed to be a deterring factor in several of the councillors' reluctance to sell the property. Addressing the council, Mr. Young assured that his company had no other designs on the property than its use as a recreational field, but did not feel like spending money on its improvement when the city might ask that the property be vacated at a moment's notice.

Several Members Speak.

Before the matter was put to vote several of the councillors spoke concerning their views on the subject, but all admitted a recreational field was needed in that part of the city. In view of possible future needs for lots for housing or industrial sites in the city, Alderman Butler deemed it inadvisable that the property be turned over without restrictions. He suggested that the company be allowed to possess the property indefinitely, even to the extent that the city take the property on as a public park.

To Hold Special Meeting.

Question of pensions for civic employees was discussed briefly with several members urging that no action be lost in getting down to cases. A recommendation was tabled calling for a special meeting of council to decide on the matter but Alderman Hyde declared he was not in favor of a special meeting, claiming the matter could be settled at the next regular meeting of council. Alderman McDougall urged promptness in acting on the matter, but admitted he would be willing to wait until the next council meeting. Alderman Follwell declared he was not in favor of spending the city's money unnecessarily but as the pension fund would cost the city considerable money, if adopted, he said the matter should be carefully studied at a special meeting. Upon putting the question to vote the recommendation to hold the special meeting carried 7-6.

Acting on the complaint that the Coleman Flats quarry presented a danger spot for children swimming, a committee of Alderman Allin, Follwell and Hyde, with City Engineer Charles Mott investigated the conditions and returned a recommendation to council, that the quarry be filled in with brush, refuse and garbage, the Board of Health to be approached with view of having the area designated as a city dump. As the quarry is part of a natural water course, it was decided that an open ditch 12 feet in width running to the drain on West Moira Street would be necessary to carry off the excess water.

To Clear Harbor.

Starting July 1st workmen will commence cleaning Belleville Harbor with view of relieving much of the stench which has been troublesome in the area during the past few weeks. H. Mulvey was appointed as caretaker at the Belleville Tourist Camp for the summer months at a salary of $63.75 per month. A recommendation was carried asking that city merchants reconsider their decision to hold the Dominion Day holiday on Monday instead of Saturday. Asking for the endorsation of the recommendation Mayor Rollins stated, that due to patriotic reasons no more time than absolutely necessary should be lost and asked that merchants observe Saturday, as had been decreed by Ottawa.

Oiling Program Adopted

A recommendation, that the committee's report relative to the 1944 street oiling program being received and adopted was carried with the public works department being authorized to carry out the work under the arrangements of former years. It was also recommended that parts of Union and Railroad Streets be closed and sold to Universal Products Limited. The application of Mr. J. J. Morch for a building permit to construct a building in Victoria Park for use as a sea cadet training centre was referred to the Parks Board. The permit, if issued, will call for the construction of a building costing approximately $5,000. The offer of $25 from Fred J. Pope for a lot on Hillside Street was accepted.

Mr. Norman Meldrum and Mrs. Spencer, representing the Belleville Pipe Band, spoke to council asking for a grant of $100, to help repair equipment and rejuvenate the band. The band has 13 members and is active at many city functions but has not been receiving financial assistance from the city. It was decided that the council band committee would take the matter up with the Municipal Band relative to their sharing the annual grant made to that organization. Failing success the council will reconsider the application of the Pipe Band for a grant.

Mayor Answers Inquiry

Inquiring as to when the new reservoir at the Belleville Water Purification Plant would be put into operation Alderman Pringle was informed by Mayor Rollins, that the public utilities manager, Mr. O. H. Scott, had announced last week the reservoir had been in operation for the past few weeks. Alderman McDougall inquired regarding complaints received of boulevards being left in a bad condition by the Bell Telephone Company following their placement of new cable through the city. Mayor Rollins recommended that the city engineer make a survey of boulevards torn up by the telephone company with view of determining the condition in which they were left. Alderman Pringle inquired of the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund committee and asked what progress had been made regarding the suggestion that Belleville adopt a city in Russia. He referred to the $5,000 which a certain Mr. X had offered if this city adopted a Russian city.

Recommendations Adopted.

A number of recommendations were approved and adopted, that were passed at the committee meeting on Thursday night, when the council convened in regular session on Monday evening. The Board of Health was requested to investigate the conditions around Victoria Park and inner harbor with a view to overcoming the odors originating at these points.

A report was received from the Comptroller and the City Engineer with respect to the trailer on the Cities Service property and they were advised to notify the Board of Health with a view to having the trailer occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Moreau and their child, removed from its present location. In the same connection it was also approved that a by-law be prepared prohibiting the use of trailers for dwelling purposes except after receiving permission from a committee of the council composed of Mayor Rollins, chairman of Market and City Property, Ald. Butler and the City Comptroller. This by-law is not to apply to tourists in transit using the regular tourist camp.

Call For Tenders.

The chairman of Market and City Property was given permission to call for tenders for fuel for the city buildings and have the authority to purchase the same. Offers were received and accepted for three pieces of property in the city upon which houses will be built.

A committee of Aldermen Armstrong, Clarke, City Engineer, City Comptroller with Alderman Pringle as chairman was appointed to designate industrial sites in the city and report on proper signs to be erected thereon.

The Mayor and Clerk were authorized to sign the certificates of the Police Department for the purpose of the Unemployment Insurance Commission. An expenditure of $100 was given the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club to promote the Civic Holiday tournament in which the Corbin Gold Cup is up for competition. Ald. McDougall, Harvey were appointed as council representatives on the Rehabilitation Committee.

At Newcastle the Canadian National Railways station was entered but nothing of value taken except some tools. At Brighton a garage and repair shop was broken into and a safe battered open. Here again nothing of value was obtained by the robbers.

Campbellford saw a service station entered and a quantity of gasoline stolen. The station was ransacked, however.

Inspector Hayes and Provincial Constable E. Soubliere were in Toronto yesterday investigating certain district robberies of a recent date when their suspicious regarding other Central Ontario robberies were established during the investigations.

WO. F. Whittard Reported Dead

Son of Mr. and Mrs. O. H. Whittard, formerly of this city but now residing in Toronto, Warrant Officer, F. H. "Red" Whittard, 22, of the Middle East Air Command, is reported as having died in the Mediterranean war theatre, according to word received by his parents. He was a wireless air gunner with the "Bombs and Blood" squadron of the R. A. F.

Born in Belleville, the late WO. Whittard attended Queen Victoria School and Belleville collegiate. He enlisted in the R. C. A. F. when 18 years old and trained at Picton, and Galt, graduating from Mountain View as a wireless air gunner in March 1942. He went overseas in November 1942 and was stationed in Africa. One of the biggest jobs of his squadron was flying 16,000 casualties out of North Africa, Sicily and Italy.

His father, a veteran of the last Great War, resided at 149 Lingham Street, while in Belleville, moving to Toronto two years ago. Since the beginning of the present war Mr. Whittard has knitted socks and sweaters for the Salvation Army. Besides his parents, WO. Whittard leaves one brother, Gnr. R. G. more troublesome to Allied forces in Italy than any other town north of Rome.

Eighth Army troops pushed up to the city from the south and east and advance elements cut the road to the west. The Germans sprinkled the ground southwest of the city with mines and covered the minefields with harassing fire.

To the east of the city German forces in the mountains appeared eager to avoid any serious fighting with strong armored reconnaissance patrols of the 8th Army.

The villages of Ripa and Civitella D'Arno northeast of Perugia were captured by troops of an Indian division and considerable casualties were inflicted on the Germans when they attempted a counter-attack.

Farther west British troops reached the southern shore of Lake Trasimeno and approached the road along its western shore.

Town is By-Passed

Citta Della Pieve, where the Germans had offered strong resistance for two days, was by-passed by 8th Army troops who headed for San Litardo to the northwest. Between Citta Della Pieve and Perugia, the town of Panicale and the villages of Mungano, Citaglione and Panciano have been cleared of the enemy. Citta Della Pieve has a population of 9,400 and Panicale 5,800.

Resistance to the 5th Army in the west again became sporadic, with isolated machine-gun nests and mortar positions causing most of the trouble. Artillery fire which had slowed progress had slackened considerably. Late yesterday the advance reached a point nine miles northeast of Grosseto.

The number of prisoners taken by both armies since the start of the offensive May 11 rose to 27,000.

A total of 30,262 pounds of paper salvage was carried to Belleville public schools by school children during the five school days of last week, it was stated today by Mr. Clarence Clapp, chairman of the local salvage committee, through which the salvage drive was conducted last week in Belleville schools. Wellman's United Church Celebrates 75th Anniversary

Rawdon, Special — Wellman's United Church on the Rawdon circuit was resplendent with bouquests of peonies, potted plants and ferns on Sunday, June 18th when the members of that church celebrated their seventy-fifth anniversary. A beautiful bouquet of American beauty roses was wired by James Maybee, Bay Bridge, Ohio, and placed on the altar in memory of his mother, the late Mrs. George Maybee.

Dedicated June, 1869.

The church was dedicated in June 1869 and for that reason the lovely month of June was chosen for this celeration.

At ten o'clock Sunday morning worshippers from all parts of Rawdon township and nearby points as well as a large number of relatives and friends from a distance began to gather on this special occasion and by eleven o'clock the seating capacity was filled with a row of chairs to accommodate the large crowd.

Mrs. Carl Clancy, pianist of the church, took full charge of the music for the day and the large gowned choir rendered "I Love to Tell" and two choral responses. The male choir of five voices contributed "The Church by the side of the Road". Mr. John Coggins, Burnbrae, and Miss Ana English, Belleville, assisted the choir at both services.

Mrs. T. F. Townsend sang "Open the Gates of the Temple" by Fanny Crosby.

75 Candles Grace Communion Table.

Seveny-five pure white candles with purple bands graced the communion table and on Tuesday evening at their anniversary dinner these will be lighted by descendents of the fourteen families who built the church.

Rev. T. F. Townsend, B. A., B. D., minister of the church presided over the services and "The Lord's My Shepherd" was used as an opening hymn.

Greetings Read

The pastor read greetings from old church members and friends from far and near with about 25 sending letters of greeting. Six ministers sent messages, Rev. Herbert Hoover, pastor of Berwin, Illinois, First Congregational Church, who worshipped as a boy in Wellman's Church and Rev. James Watson of Winnipeg who formerly lived in Wellman's community. Two former pastors Rev. F. G. Joblin, Pickering, who served the circuit twelve years and was dearly beloved by all and Rev. J. E. Beckel, Elgin, who was the former minister for eight years and Rev. W. H. V. Walker, St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Stirling.

All these greetings were much appreciated especially those from former pastors.

Roll of Honor Unveiled

The beautiful honor roll with the names inscribed, of those serving in the 1914-1918 World War and in another column those who are now serving or who have been in the service since 1939 was most fittingly unveiled by Mr. Carl Clancy, a veteran of the First World War who spoke briefly. The names inscribed are: Roy Sharp, Donald Nix, Reginald Dunham, Charles Thrasher and Lorne Watson.

Special prayer was offered with the large congregation standing in perfect silence.

Rev. Clarke Guest Preacher

Rev. W. H. Clarke, Deseronto, who labored on the Rawdon circuit from 1907-1911 brought to those assembled a special message. Rev. Clarke and Mrs. Clarke were highly esteemed while on the circuit and they were both greatly interested in the young people. Through their efforts an Epworth League was organized at every appointment and large crowds of young people attended those midweek services, with very often one hundred in attendance. During the winter months of 1907-1908 special revival services were held and large numbers of young people visited with the three churches and many of those same folk were gathered at Wellman's on Sunday morning to hear their old pastor. Friends were also thankful that Rev. Clarke's health was greatly improved and that through God's kindly mercies he was once again privileged to deliver a message.

Recalls Large Congregations

Rev. Clarke said that the years of his pastorate were the days of large congregations. Folks came early and attended the Sunday School session and remained for the public worship and attended still a third service in the form of a class meeting when these pioneers gave their personal testimony thanking God for His guidance.

Those were horse and buggy days and the pastor, his wife, and three children travelled up and down the country roads, carrying on services and visiting the people.

Rev. Clarke said his four years' term was one of loyalty and co-operation.

Recalls Days of Pastorate.

He gave reminiscences of an official board meeting held at Wellman's United Church thirty-six years ago and told of many interesting events held on the circuit during his regime.

In closing he said "the church, then as now stands for the witness of an ever present God and may it be said that 'great good has come upon all its people' through their years of worship."

He paid tribute to the labors of other ministers who followed him and wished God's blessing on the pastor and members who now worship Sunday by Sunday at Wellman's.

Rev. and Mrs. W. H. Clarke attended both services and were greeted by hosts of friends at the close of each meeting.

Rev. Townsend Speaks.

Rev. T. F. Townsend brought a message entitled "The church of our fathers," using as his text, "God has brought me up out of the miry clay." He told of Darius Dunham who in 1792 as one of the first ministers of the church of our fathers, fought against many evil things that were cropping up but his worst enemy was indifference—The pioneer fathers built this church at Wellman's, hoping and striving that many people in the Wellman's community would be led to Christ and His service and that through their loyalty jewels would be raised up out of the mire."

Must Carry on the Work.

Those pioneers passed on the torch and today the members of Wellman's United Church must carry on and hold that torch high so that the flame will not die, rather be a beacon light to those who follow in their footsteps.

The service closed with the rendition of "Oh God Our Help in Ages Past" and truly it can be said, "it was good to have been there."

Mrs. Charles Dunham and Mrs. Clifford Clancy with a group of other women welcomed all the guests and practically every home entertained relatives and friends.

Mrs. Victor Graham and her committee were in charge of the registration at the door, so that a record could be kept of those in attendance.

Evening Service.

The evening piano prelude was a "Melody of Old Hymns".

The choir rendered "The Earth is the Lord's", an octette sang "Brightly Beams Our Father's Mercy", and a quartette sang "Lead Kindly Light". The choir at night were given able assistance by Mr. H. Pierce of St. John's United Church, Campbellford.

At the services $148 was placed on the plates as a Thankoffering.

The pastor read greetings from Rev. James Totten, Cavan, who lived as a boy across the road from the church.

From Edward Clancy, Kitchener, who worshipped at Wellman's, with his parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. C. U. Clancy, until sixteen years of age.

From Mr. George Mack, High River, Alberta, and others.

Dr. Semple, Special Speaker.

Rev. James Semple, B.A., Th.D., chairman of Belleville Presbytery and pastor of Bridge Street United Church, brought a special message in his inimitable style.

He extended greetings on behalf of the Presbytery of which he has fulfilled the duties of chairman for almost a year, and brought greetings from his own church which will celebrate its 129th anniversary this Fall. He was delighted to have a share with the pastor in the success of this event. His message was based on Zachariah 8: 4-5.

Youth Must Respect Age.

Rev. Semple said in order to build the City of God in our day, the young people must have respect for old age, and the vast army of youth must be prepared to be leaders in the World of Tomorrow. It is a genuine fact that "The World moves forward on the feet of little children. A child deserves to be well-born—to have a place to play and to receive liberal education. The religious life of the child which teaches the value of right ideals is of inestimable value to the growth of the youth of today.

We need have no fear for the church of tomorrow if this generation is taught the fine art of living and if parents themselves by precept and example continue to build God's church in Wellman's Community.

In closing Dr. Semple thanked God for the leaders of yesterday and asked for blessings on the leaders of today, with a special prayer that effective leaders would take over the church leadership in the future.

The service closed with "Grant us Thy Peace, throughout our earthly life, and later call us, Lord to Thine Eternal Peace". As in the words of the Psalmist, "The Heavens declare the Glory of God and the firmament showeth His Handiwork". The years have been richly blessed for Wellman's Community. Following the service groups of friends and relatives gathered outside the edifice and were loath to depart homewards after spending such an enjoyable day together when they lived once again in the happy scenes of childhood days.

Several had journeyed many miles, just to be privileged once more to worship in the old home church. Friends were present from Belleville, Trenton, Kingston, Peterborough, Springbrook, Campbellford, Frankford, Rylestone, Stirling, West Huntingdon, Ivanhoe, Salem, Carmel, Hoards, Burnbrae, Fuller, Madoc Junction, Deseronto, Allan's Mills, and other points.

Mrs. Will Jackman, of Sine, who is 94 years of age, was in attendance at the dedication of Wellman's United Church. Seventy-five years ago but because of her advanced age it was not possible for her to atend their services.

The anniversary dinner Tuesday evening will conclude the celebration of their seventy-fifth milestone.

McTAGUE CHOICE OFP-CCONVENTION IN S. WELLINGTON

National Leader Bracken and Chairman McTague Criticize Mapnower Policy

NEEDS OF FORCES

Guelph, Ont., June 20 — (CP) — Criticism of the Federal Government's manpower regulations was voiced by the National Leader of the Progressive Conservative party, John Bracken, and the National chairman of the party, C. P. McTague, here last night.

Mr. McTague, in an address accepting the nomination as candidate for the Progressive Conservative party in the next Federal election in his hometown riding of Wellington South, said Canada's national honor demands an immediate order-in-council making men in the home defence forces available for overseas duty.

Mr. Bracken said he endorsed the statement of Mr. McTague and forecast the defeat of the present Liberal administration in the next Federal election because it had "failed in its manpower policy" by placing the party-advantage first, and because it had been guilty of extravagance "on an unprecedented scale."

"When the record of this war is written, Canada's nandling of the manpower will be a sorry tale," said Mr. Bracken.

Mr. McTague, former chairman of the National War Labor Board and one-time Ontario Appeal Court Justice, was the first to speak to the gathering of Guelph citizens.

Says Reinforcements Needed

He suggested that Quebec's 1941 plebiscite vote no longer reflected the view of the majority in that province and said the government's persistence in leaving the approximately 75,000 members of the Home Defence Army in Canada "can only be construed as deference to the will of the minority in the province of Quebec as voiced in the plebiscite."

He said Canadian forces overseas "should have reinforcements now" and that the Home Defence Army should be made available for this purpose.

Mr. McTague said that while industry in the Dominion needs 196,000 men the difficulties of the farmer and industry "would never have come about with a fair and equitable policy properly administered."

Every province in Canada "has been deceived and fooled," he said, and resentment in Quebec "at broken promises and undertakings" can be easily understood.

Fairness to Quebec

He said "Whether the province of Quebec has many or few representatives in this party when it is returned to power, it will receive the same fair treatment as every other province — but neither special privileges nor unfair burdens will be the lot of any province."

The Progressive Conservative party believes in a fair deal and an adequate share of the national income for the farmer, he stated, and "As far as labor is concerned, my views and record speak for themselves."

Mr. Bracken said the government was calling for volunteers for the Canadian Army and for industry while sheltering "70,000 men in a so-called home army," and "The National effort was limited if its manpower was not used fully or was wastefully distributed."

Says High Price Paid

for Partnership

"Canada," the former Manitoba premier said, "is paying a high price of Partisanship in time of war in a criminal waste of manpower, in financial extravagance unparallelled in the history of the government in this country and in unnecessarily high taxation."

"Never since Confederation has there been less of unity than at this critical time," said Mr. Bracken. "For the appeals of racial prejudice that have been sown in certain sections of Canada mainly for Partisan advantage, we are now reaping a harvest of discord in an ever-widening sphere."

Picton and District

Memorial Service Held in Citadel

Picton — The Salvation Army Citadel was filled to capacity Sunday night when a memorial service was held for Pte. Fred Richardson, Jr., who died of wounds in Italy.

At Mount Pleasant United Church Sunday morning a capacity crowd attended a memorial service for Pte. Harry McKenzie, Irish Regiment of Canada, who was killed in action in Italy.

Next Sunday night a memorial service will be held in Salmon Point United Church in memory of Sapper Harold Cowan, Prince Edward County's first casualty in the invasion of Normandy.

The service for Pte. McKenzie was conducted by Rev. Peter Tiller of Consecon. Flowers banked the altar and a photo of Harry was draped with the Union Jack. A minute of silence was observed in his memory. The church was filled with sympathizing friends.

Capt. D. E. Strachan conducted the service for Pte. Richardson. The Last Post sounded by L.A.C. Gladstone Clarke, R.A.P., was followed by two minutes of silence and Reveille. Members of the Canadian Legion and Auxiliary, representing every branch of the service, marched in front of the altar, depositing a poppy in front of Fred's photo which had a Union Jack as a background. Beside it stood a basket of peonies and carnations.

These had been cabled by Fred for Mother's Day. Delayed in transmission they arrived the day before the memorial service was held. Masses of other flowers decorated the altar.

Mrs. Pearl Putnam was soloist. Capt. Strachan spoke from the text "Greater love hath no man than this: that a man lay down his life for his friends."

"We gather to honor one who died that we might live. The world is at war because of hatred, greed and covetousness. The war has produced loyalty, courage and heroism."

Capt. Strachan referred to history repeating itself, giving illustrations of times when men have sacrificed themselves for the cause of freedom. It was pure love, gallant, unselfish love of all those things we hold dear, which motivated those who responded to the call. It was not hatred for another nation or a desire to kill, but love, Capt. Strachan declared.

Pointing out all that these sacrifices mean, the speaker challenged all to be worthy of them. God must be found in our lives every day.

The service closed with the National Anthem.

Home Influence Best Insurance For World Peace

Speaking at the regular weekly luncheon meeting of the Belleville Rotary Club held at the Hotel Quinte on Monday, Rev. J. A. Dilts, minister at Holloway Street United Church, emphasized to members the importance of the home influence in moulding the character of children and stressed that the teaching of religion in the home was the best insurance for world peace and brotherhood.

A great deal of the unpleasantness in present day world conditions was traced by the speaker back to disunity and disharmony in the home, while he regretted the change in the attitude toward the teaching of religion in the home. Man was incurably religious, he stated, and if Christ were not in the home this tendency to worship was turned to some lesser god.

Basing his talk upon the necessity of religion in the home, Mr. Dilts stressed the moulding of Christian character in children would make demands of the time of parents, but he felt this was the best contribution which could be made for world peace. Records had proven that juvenile delinquents came from homes which were non-religious.

Greater Harmony Needed.

In closing Mr. Dilts urged that self-centredness be taken from the homes that greater harmony among the family members be promoted. The church must be brought back into the homes. To assist in bringing this about grace at the table and the resumption of the family altar were responsibilities which must be assumed by the head of the household.

The speaker was introduced by Rev. A. J. W. Myers, with club appreciation being extended by Bill Morrison. President Jack Deacon welcomed the guests following introduction by H. G. Clarke. Alec Gordon acted as pianist with "Sandy" Burrows as song leader, and Art Francis as sergeant at arms.

Report Gas Sent From Germany Into Hungary

New York, June 20—(AP)—Radio France at Algiers said today in a broadcast to French areas the Germans had transported "large quantities" of poison gas from Germany into Hungary "with a view to using it against the Soviet army, from whom they dread a new and powerful offensive."

The broadcast, reported by United States government monitors, said the information had been received from the Balkans via Ankara. It added that a "German official paper" June 2 had published "detailed instructions concerning the transport and handling of poison gases."

SECOND FRONT NEED BOOSTS CANADA'S AMMUNITION PROGRAM

Canada has been called upon to supply the bulk of increased Allied requirements for field artillery ammunition resulting from a more intensive use of guns than had been anticipated. Above are shown two of the numerous types which the Dominion will turn out in greater quantities. Left, a 25-pdr. gun in action. One round takes 3 3-4 hours to produce, while the gun can fire a thousand rounds in the same time. At right 5.5-inch howitzer shells are checked before shipment from a factory in Sherbrooke, Que. Entire ammunition industry needs more than 10,000 additional workers. It is hoped many women will help fill this quota.

Pyle Describes His Impressions Of Scene on Journey to Beachhead

(By ERNIE PYLE)

Normandy Beachhead—(by wireless)—The ship on which I rode to the invasion of the Continent brought certain components of the second wave of assault troops. We arrived in the congested waters of the beachhead shortly after dawn on D-One Day.

We aboard this ship had secretly dreaded the trip, for we had expected attacks from U-boats, E-boats, and at nighttime from aircraft. Yet nothing whatever happened.

We were at sea for a much longer time than it would ordinarily take to make a bee-line journey from England to France. The convoy we sailed in was one of several which comprised what is known as a "force."

As we came down, the English Channel was crammed with forces going both ways, and as I write it still is. Minesweepers had swept wide channels for us, all the way from England to France. These were marked with buoys. Each channel was miles wide.

We surely saw there before us more ships than any human had ever seen before at one glance. And going north were other vast convoys, some composed of fast liners speeding back to England for new loads of troops and equipment.

* * *

As far as you could see in every direction the ocean was infested with ships. There must have been every type of oceangoing vessel in the world. I even thought I saw a paddlewheel steamer in the distance, but that was probably an illusion.

There were battleships and all other kinds of warships clear down to patrol boats. There were great fleets of Liberty ships. There were fleets of luxury liners turned into troop transports, and fleets of big landing craft and tank carriers and tankers. And in and out through it all were nondescript ships—converted yachts, river boats, tugs, and barges.

The best way I can describe this vast armada and the frantic urgency of the traffic is to suggest that you visualize New York Harbor on its busiest day of the year and then just enlarge that scene until it takes in all the ocean the human eye can reach, clear around the horizon. And over the horizon there are dozens of times that many.

We were not able to go ashore immediately after arriving off the invasion coast amidst the great pool of ships in what was known as the "transport area."

* * *

Everything is highly organized in an invasion, and every ship, even the tiniest one, is always under exact orders timed to the minute. But at one time our convoy was so pushed along by the wind and the currents that we were five hours ahead of schedule, despite the fact that our engines had been stopped half the time. We lost this by circling.

Although we arrived just on time, they weren't ready for us on the beaches and we spent several hours weaving in and out among the multitude of ships just off the beachhead, and finally just settled down to await our turn.

* * *

That was when the most incongruous—to us—part of the invasion came. Here we were in a front-row seat at a great military epic. Shells from battleships were whamming over our heads, and occasionally a dead man floated face downward past us. Hundreds and hundreds of ships laden with death milled around us. We could stand at the rail and see both our shells and German shells exploding on the beaches, where struggling men were leaping ashore, desperately hauling guns and equipment in through the water.

We were in the very vortex of the war—and yet, as we sat there waiting, Lieut. Chuck Conick and I played gin rummy in the wardroom and Bing Crosby sang "Sweet Leilani" over the ship's phonograph.

Angry shells hitting near us would make heavy thuds as the concussion carried through the water and struck the hull of our ship. But in our wardroom men in gas-impregnated uniforms and wearing lifebelts sat reading Life and listening to the BBC telling us how the war before our eyes was going.

But it isn't like that ashore. No, it isn't like that ashore.

Group Captain Retires After 30 Years' Service

Trenton, June 20 — Following thirty years service Group Captain W. E. Baker of the R. C. A. F., stationed for the past three years on the West Coast, has been retired and is expected to arrive at his home, York Road, early in July.

Born in Kent, England, where he was a member of the British Territorials, Group Captain Baker came to Canada in 1913 and upon the outbreak of the Great War enlisted in August, 1914, from Ottawa with the Field Artillery, going overseas with the First Battery, First Brigade, First Canadian Contingent under General Morrison.

While in England he married Miss Mary Armstrong of Dublin Ireland and together they returned to Canada in 1919 settling in Ottawa where Mr. Baker was attached to the Dominion Government Public Works and Air Board. Shortly he became a member of the Canadian Air Force which later became the Royal Canadian Air Force. He rose from the ranks serving in Ottawa, Roberval, Winnipeg and England, coming to Trenton in 1937. On Sept. 15th, 1939, he was posted to Winnipeg where he spent some time before leaving for the West Coast.

Devotes Her Time.

Mrs. Baker has spent several years past at their home, York Road, Trenton, where she has devoted much of her time to the war effort. She was instrumental in organizing workers for the British minesweepers and has given much time and assistance to the Women's Auxiliary of the R. C. A. F. and the local branch of the Canadian Red Cross. She raised considerable funds for the British minesweepers through her purebred Cairn terriers from her "Happy Hill" kennels and for the past two years has donated one of these famous pets to a draw held in Toronto for the British War Victims Fund. Her victory gardens too have been a means of helping the latter fund upon several occasions.

An only son of Group Captain and Mrs. Baker, Pte. Tom Baker, a graduate of Trenton High School, is serving with the Canadian Army in Canada.

Says Casualties Are 'Moderate' Below Estimate

Ottawa, June 20 — (CP)—Commons was told yesterday by Defence Minister Ralston that Canadian casualties in the Normandy invasion have been "moderate" and below the figure which had been estimated for the opening phase of the action.

In answer to a question, the minister said casualty reports were continuing to go forward to next-of-kin immediately they were received but so far he had been unable to get authority from the high command to release Canadian totals.

He said it was a matter of security and Canada had participated in an agreement which precluded announcement of totals until field commanders were sure the announcement would not prejudice the military situation.

Mr. Ralston said he was surprised Hanson(PC—York Sunbury), said American casualty figures had been given by Lt.-Gen. Omar Bradley, a United States field commander, at a press conference Saturday.

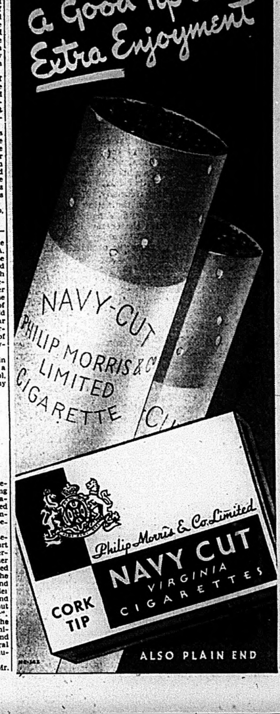
Mr. Ralston said he wassurpriside when he heard the American figures had been announced. He added he had immediately tried to get a release for Canadian figures, but so far had been unable to do so. He was sure commanders in the field were best able to judge the situation and decide on the security involved.

STRAWBERRY PRICES SOMEWHAT EASIER

Easing prices as the result of a fair quantity being offered, saw strawberries drop below the maximum ceiling price on the local produce market today with farmers quoting from 35 to 38 cents the quart basket. Early morning vendors asked the higher price with two boxes being sold for 75 cents, while later in the morning the berries could be purchased for straight 35 cents the box.

Shelled peas were offered for the first time this season with the one vendor asking 60 cents the quart. Gooseberries held at Saturday's price of 20 cents the box.

Vice President Visiting China



(By SPENCER MOOSA)
(Associated Press Staff Writer.)

Chungking, June 20. (AP)—Vice-President Henry Wallace, visiting China as the personal representative of President Roosevelt, arrived in this war capital today and immediately urged closer relations between China and Siberia.

The Vice-President, in a statement distributed at the airport after his arrival from Russian territory, quoted Dr. Hu Shih, former Chinese Ambassador to the United States, as having said that the boundary between Siberia and China "should be like the frontier between the United States and Canada—not one of separation but one of joining friends together".

Wallace said he wanted to see the land, talk with farmers, visit Chinese and American soldiers and above all discuss with General Chiang Kai-Shek "matters of mutual interest and concern".

General Chiang welcomed Mr. Wallace at the airport.

His Majesty in Normandy

His Majesty King George Sixth was in Normandy on Friday, meeting the men of the forces who, with the Americans, have established a powerful bridgehead in the invasion of France which continues to expand. He had seen the Canadians just before the departure for North France and when he visited the battle area in France (Normandy) he decorated the brigadier of the Canadian 3rd Division.

The British race, which has produced a civilization which is exercising a great influence for peace in the world has produced some of the greatest leaders and has a Monarch of whom it is proud for the service which he renders the Nation and Empire and the world. King George has again and again proved himself bound to the people by the strongest ties. The Royal Family has during this war been giving for the good of the Empire and humanity a service of devotion which shows how deeply the Monarch, the Queen and the Royal Princesses and the other members of the House of Windsor are linked with British liberty and the people. So it was natural that His Majesty should seek the front where his soldiers have been conquering the enemy for the liberation of France and of all dominated peoples.

History is full of stories of the relations of England and France, particularly Normandy, in the days gone by as for instance when English armies were led by such a ruler as young King Henry V. But the visit of the 20th century Monarch to the north and of the Empire which girdles the earth with the constraining power of democracy has greater significance than those royal visits of centuries ago, for King George Sixth came to the actual fighting ground on the beaches where his men had fought and beaten back the enemy a few days before in the great cause of twentieth century freedom.

The visit, carried out with so little display, but with so much of the spirit of comradeship in arms with conversations with the soldiers which the party surprised, with the decorating of a few officers and men for distinction in the war hitherto and the visit at General Montgomery's headquarters on the Continent was of the impressive kind which shows that Britain has no dreads and fears of the result of the war, her cause is right, her ends and aims unselfseeking, her Allies acting in complete harmony and co-operation, and herself like the legendary Sir Galahad whose strength was as the strength of ten because his heart was pure. The Western Front is established to stay and to move against Germany. How different are this spirit and the action of British and Canadian and American troops as contrasted with the enemy defending what is evil and knowing that once again Germany must be defeated because she chose the way of wrong.

The great battle in nature of any scene in Northern France and the assurance that Britain's and America's and Canada's forces hold the Channel are prophetic of the outcome.

Links With the Sea

Belleville's name is now borne by a corvette of the Royal Canadian Navy which was launched at Kingston and christened by the wife of Mayor Rollins on Saturday with ceremonies which a number of Belleville people attended.

The more than six hundred Belleville boys who are serving Canada on the Seven Seas of the world will appreciate and will feel a real thrill that fellow members of the crew of the ship be grateful to the people of Belleville and district for their sponsorship of this trim fighting craft. She is an ocean going ship built on the great waterway system which connects with the Atlantic Ocean. Merchant ships which have crossed the ocean have docked here in years past. It was fitting for Belleville citizens so to act.

Canada has a powerful fleet of war and merchant ships. She has taken a prominent place among the great nations and it is well that the Dominion is seaminded. Naturally Belleville has taken a deep interest in the development of the R.C.N. and for the purpose of showing appreciation of what the boys of Belleville and all Canadian boys for that matter have done in the navy took the step of sponsoring a ship in the name of the municipal corporation.

The corvette Belleville when fitted out and entered upon her course of service will have the prayers especially of the people of Belleville and the district because of the association of so many boys with the navy and because of the sponsorship of the Belleville, which has been adopted by the citizens: It will be an outward and visible sign of the zeal and patriotism of the people of this city and its environs. Belleville and district have contributed about $9,000 towards the outfitting of the ship for the comfort of the crew.

Elba Occupied

When French forces attacked Elba with invading forces last week, it was a movement of the utmost significance to France and to the United Nations. The importance of Elba is its proximity to the Italian coast which lies only five miles across the channel, which makes possible a blow at the Italian mainland.

The French are in Corsica, the island where Napoleon was born, and now in Elba, the little isle of 140 square miles where the deposed Emperor of the French spent nine months in exile before emerging from this spot of retirement to lead the armies which he used in the battles leading up to and including Waterloo, where he lost.

On the Italian front or the south front, Germany has found the power of the United Nations too much for her. The Allies control the Mediterranean and a good share of Italy as well as the islands of Sicily, Sardinia, Corsica and now Elba, besides minor islands. This has become a powerful front. From Rome, the capital of Italy, one time head city of the world when Roman authority held sway from the North Sea and the Atlantic to beyond the coast of North Africa to far east into Asia, fell a little over two weeks ago to the Allies. Now the Germans are far north in their retreat. The Mediterranean area is now fast coming under Allied control.

Why Hitler Hates Jews

There's no allergy to Jews in the Soviet Union, points out Collier's. At least 100 of the Red army's top generals above the rank of brigadier are Jews. There were about 2,500,000 Jews in Russia when the Germans attacked. There were at least, 10 persent, or 250,000, in the Soviet army. Of these, 185,000 have been cited by the Soviet High Command. Thirty-seven and 5,163 have been honored for unusual gallantry.

Using a common basis of 10 percent as representing the portion of population fit for military service, you arrive at some interesting results as to how many Jews fight in democracy's armies. And more pointedly, how seriously the Nazi war machine was affected by Aryan allergy to the Israelites.

SENTRY THOUGHTS

What think you, soldier, at your post
When the night is long and still?
"What fools men are," said he, "to boast
Their self-made means to kill.

"We blast and shatter and burn and raze
And fight with flame and gun.
We give to peace our words of praise,
But war goes on and on.

"And I wonder oft, as the hours drag by,
If men can be wholly sane
To order their bravest and best to die,
While their weakest safe remain.

"And I often think in this filthy place,
Where death stalks night and day,
To settle disputes of the human race
There must be a better way."

When soldiers asked John the Baptist what they should do, he replied, according to Luke 3:14, "Do violence to no man, neither accuse any falsely; and be content with your wages."

"Jealous" and "zealous" are derived from the same Greek and Latin root, "zelos" or "zelus." A jealous person is merely one who loves with too much zeal.

Snake-charming is referred to in the Bible. Jeremiah 8:17 says: "For, behold, I will send serpents, cockatrices, among you!, which will not be charmed, and they shall bite you, saith the Lord." Ecclesiastes 10:11 says that "the serpent will bite without enchantment."

For his services in the French and Indian War, George Washington received 1,000 acres in bonus, and a grant of land from the government of Virginia.

Very few place names in Kentucky are recognizable as Indian languages. This is believed to be owing to the fact that the various tribes hunted, fought and roamed in Kentucky, very few of them actually made their place of permanent abode.

Wall Street in New York City—centre of the nation's private banking and investment activities—is name from the fact that it follows the line of a palisaded wall or stockade built in 1653 across the southern end of Manhattan Island by Governor Peter Stuyvesant to protect the little Dutch colony of New Amsterdam against a threatened attack by the British.

Dirigible Wreck Now Under Guard

Nanaimo, B. C., June 30—(CP)—The wreck of a 250-foot dirigible will remain under guard in the mountains between Yreka and Nanaimo, where it crashed a month ago while searching for a missing R. C. A. F. bomber until a United States Navy Air Force Board of inquiry completes its findings.

The huge balloon was wrecked by a downdraft which plunged it into a canyon. The bomber wreck was located and the bodies of its five-man crew found near the scene of the crash. The dirigible crew was uninjured.

grants had to exercise their ingenuity or go without butter as they travelled to remote sections of Canada. In the backwoods regions through which they passed there were no milk factories, no well-established farms with plenty of cows. However, many incoming settlers possessing cows churned butter by banging pails at the backs of their carts. The shaking and jolting produced almost as good butter as could be made in a housewife's kitchen.

Though there was not an ounce of iron or metal of any kind in the primitive Red River carts, they were as "tough as hickory" and could withstand the worst kind of travelling conditions. Each could carry a half-ton of stores and tents, across marshes and swamps where other types of wagons would "sink to the hubs or perhaps altogether out of sight." British settlers from the Old Country who have since become the lofty Ont West always described the two-wheeled carts in glowing terms when writing home to Scotland about them. The pioneers stressed the fact that even the wooden pins in the spokes in place and fastening the box to the frame were made of wood. Tanned ox-hide strappings called "shaggnappy" were used to strengthen the wooden wedges. A roll of shaggnappy was always kept in reserve in case the cart sustained damage.

PERIODIC CHECK-UP

I should like to have all our employees receive a physical check-up and should appreciate your advice to them regarding this. What should such a check-up include and how often should it be made? Any suggestions you may offer will be welcomed. ——— Company.)

Such an examination should include the ordinary physical examination, should include the ordinary physical examination of the chest and abdomen, the chest examination being genuine only if the chest is bared of clothing, the examination of the abdomen being made the subject first standing then lying relaxed.

It should include a chemical test of the urine.

It should include a brief record of the subject's name, age, history of present illness or any serious or severe illness in the past, height, weight, pulse, blood pressure.

Any additional laboratory or special tests the subject's physician may call for should be left to the discretion of the examining physician.

The record should include any present complaint the subject makes.

Part of the data the physician acquires either by his examination or from the subject's history or present complaint is of course strictly confidential and should be available to any one except by the subject's express request or consent.

The same physician or physicians should make the periodic physical examination year after year. Thus the service becomes more valuable to the subject as he becomes known to the employer pays for the service and in years gone by, records of the subject's record in previous years is available for comparison with the present condition.

Ideally the check-up should be every six months, but an annual examination is of great value.

Knowing that the entire proceeding is absolutely secret to physician and subject, the subject has no hesitancy in telling the physician all the truth without reservations and can get the very best advice about his or her present state or hygiene or any abnormal or pathological condition the examination reveals.

Ideally the service why such a voluntary medical examination is a much more valuable than a life insurance examination, for instance. The subject for life insurance is naturally doesn't want the examiner to discover any abnormal or pathological condition, if such condition is present.

Such tests as blood counts, basal metabolism, measurement, X-ray, Wassermann reaction and so on are not essential in the check-up, unless the examining physician finds some abnormal condition which warrants the special test.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. FAIRY TALE.

Group of young men have gone to doctor and had vinegar injected into the blood before they appeared before draft board and so made sure they would be rejected.—(Mrs. J. B.)

Answer—It is an absurd fairy tale, Madam. I fancy one bad vinegar injected into the blood he would appear before a Board of Inquiry appointed by St. Peter, Washington or Hades. A dash of vinegar on your cabbage or beans is all right if you like it, but in your blood it is not only a most interesting subject to dissect.

VARICOSE ULCER

My cousin has several varicose ulcers on her leg. Doctors only tell her to keep off her feet and rest—which is probably all right, but she has seven children to look after. Isbel. O. W.

Answer—After all, that is not the fault of the doctors. They are right in advising that the first essential for healing varicose ulcers is just that—keep off the feet and rest with leg or legs rather above level of heart as much as possible. Send stamped envelope bearing your address, for booklet entitled "Varicose Veins and Varicose Ulcers".

A WOMAN IS AS OLD AS SHE LOOKS

Your splendid advice has helped several members of my family, even in preventing the natural color of my hair at 56 years of age—which my hair dresser doctor says, beats him. Come up and see the greatest gold camp on earth—Kirkland Lake old girl sent her (present) husband. (Mrs. LT.)

Answer—Thank you—if you have a good supply of Birkett's prize Pure Gold Medal Extract of Imperative Ontario (Canada) maple syrup left I'll come up and see you soon. The essential anti-gray hair factor is derived from Extract of the Hair and Control of Dandruff—for copy send three-cent-stamped envelope bearing your address.

Tender, golden chicken, broiled or fried chicken can and should claim the most delicious of all dinners, yet often it turns out to be a disappointment . . . . dry and hard or rubbery and stringy. Whether you achieve perfection or disappointment is largely a matter of time and temperature. With broilers and friers, as with roasting chickens, a moderate cooking temperature gives a tender, juicy result.

Broiled and fried chicken know no season but if you would have these delicacies at their very best now's the time. Freshly killed broilers are available from March to September and friers come along in June and freshly killed birds for frying can usually be obtained until September—allow 3-4 to 1 pound of either per person.

Directions for preparation and cooking, from the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, guarantee perfection every time.

BROILED CHICKEN

1. Select broilers weighing 1 1-2 to 2 pounds. Draw and clean thoroughly. Singe, split down the back, wipe well with a clean, damp cloth.

2. Preheat the oven for 5 to 10 minutes.

3. Rub chicken on both sides with melted fat, sprinkle with salt and pepper, and place skin side down on a greased rack in the broiling pan.

4. Place the broiling pan 4 to 6 inches below the heating unit. Regulate the door of the oven slightly ajar.

5.—Sear on both sides, then continue broiling until tender, turning once or twice during cooking and basting chicken several times with the dripping in the pan or melted fat. Score the skin side of the chicken except for the wings, and chicken short part of the time since the skin browns quickly.

6. Allow 30 to 45 minutes total broiling time.

Oven-Cooked Broilers.

1. Placed the prepared broilers on a rack in a shallow pan and baste basting pan, skin side down.

2. Brush with melted fat and cook in a moderate oven, 350 degrees F. for 30 minutes. Turn and cook about 30 minutes longer—or until birds are tender. They may be basted with the dripping from the pan or melted fat during the cooking period if 5 minutes to improve the colour and flavour.

To Cut Up a Bird for Frying.

1. Singe, wash and dry thoroughly.

2. Separate drumsticks from thigh at knee joint.

3. Separate wings:—cut through skin around wing close to body. Bend wing back to joint to disjoint. Cut through joint. Cut off tips of wings and cook with giblets for gravy.

4. Separate back from breast by cutting through skin on either side of breast. Break back at the ribs with cleaver and then cut each piece in half through the backbone.

5. Using shears, cut through the breast bone to divide breast. Wishbone with the attached meat may be removed first if desired.

Pre-Cooked Fried Chicken.

1. Select plump birds weighing 2 to 3 pounds. Cut up, separating, disjoint and cut into portions for frying.

2. Steam or simmer in a tightly covered pan for 30 minutes. Do not add salt as it tends to toughen the flesh.

3. Dip the pieces in batter and deep-fat fry for 10 minutes or longer in deep fat heated in a frying pan fry for 10 to 15 minutes or longer.

Batter For Fried Chicken.

1 egg
3-4 cup milk
1 cup sifted all-purpose flour
1-2 teaspoons salt
1-8 teaspoon pepper

Beat egg and add milk. Mix and sift the dry ingredients. Stir the mixture gradually into the flour, and beat until smooth.

Pan-Fried Chicken.

1. Prepare chicken as for pressure fried chicken, dry pieces well and roll in flour seasoned with salt and pepper.

2. Place pieces of chicken in a heavy frying pan with a layer of fat 1-inch of melted fat. Brown on both sides, turning once with tongs. Cover pan, reduce heat, and cook slowly until tender, about 25 to 30 minutes. Serve with paprika sauce.

Paprika Sauce.

Remove chicken from pan and all but two tablespoons of the fat. Sprinkle on two tablespoons of flour, blend thoroughly. Gradually add 2 cups of milk and stir until smooth and thickened. Add sufficient paprika to make the sauce delicately pink. Add chicken and simmer slowly for 5 to 10 minutes.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Furlough Wedding .

Dear Mrs. Beeckman—

I expect to be married in July, a furlough wedding. I want to have only my plans ready, and there are a few questions I'm in doubt about. I'm planning to have an informal wedding. A short veil, I think.

1.—The best man has been honorably discharged from the Army. Is it proper for him to wear his uniform at the wedding?

2.—Would it be improper to have my prospective bridegroom's mother sing at the wedding?

3.—Who pays for the bridal photographs?

4.—How does the bride walk down the aisle to be given in marriage?

1.—I have been told that it is customary for the bride to give a gift to her attendants. When are these gifts given? And will you please give me some suggestions as to what I could give?

Mother

1.— It would not be permissible for the best man to wear his uniform at a June wedding. After honorable discharge from the Army, a man wears the uniform upon certain occasions of military ceremony, such as military parades, at meetings of recognized organizations of veterans, and so forth. Since your wedding is to be informal, the best man may wear a business suit, preferably dark-blue.

2.—I don't advise you to have your bridegroom's mother sing at your wedding. She is the woman guest of honor at your wedding and she should be in readiness to be escorted down the aisle ther husband following a few minutes before the processional starts.

3.—The bride or her family pays for the wedding photographs.

4.—Even if the bride is not to be given in marriage, she may be escorted down the aisle by her father, or if her father is not living, by her nearest male relative. Or, if her father is not living, and prefers to walk alone, he may properly do this.

2.—Yes, it is customary for the bride to give gifts to her attendants, and they are given at any convenient time before the wedding day. Here are some gifts often given for this occasion: bracelet, pendant, brooch, vanity-case, powder box, lipstick case, evening bag, locket, silver or gold pencil, pen and pencil set, hair ornaments, fitted travelling bag, traveling clock, clip, perfume bottles.

By All Means Let Her Take Part.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman.

My ten-year-old son died last January. He and my twelve-year-old daughter went to the same school, and every year at the close of the school term, this school gives a play. My young daughter who is very interested in dramatics has been asked to be in this play to be given soon, and she very much wants to take part. Some are now in mourning, do you think this would be proper?

Mother

Yes, it is proper for you to let her do this, and I think it would be too bad if she were deprived of this participation.

If a man has a really good wife she magnifies all women who are taken-for-granted seem to be very good wives—she is faithful, loving, and unselfish and cheerful housekeeper. Wouldn't it be a good thing for husbands to read these blessings seriously rather than take them for granted?

Share Your Linen With the Russians

A GLIMPSE OF POST-WAR HOLIDAYS

Share your new and used bed linen and quilts with our gallant Russian Allies!

Such is the appeal going out to Belleville householders this week from the local committee of the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund. The linens, bed quilts and sheets, pillow slips and towels are badly needed for the thousands of Russians now homeless as the result of the juggernaut of war which has swept their country. Two years ago their homes were razed with shelling and bombs as German panzer divisions overran their country and again within recent months as they have been liberated from German occupation.

Sleeping in dugouts ,until their homes are rebuilt, hundreds of thousands of Russian children are in desperate need of every bit of relief that can be given from Canada. Linens would be a godsend and will be deeply appreciated.

Do send these Russian children some of the things which you can best spare. Bed covers, cushions a spare sheet, a towel, a pillow case, blanket or quilt, and take it to the Belleville Yacht Club where they are in charge. In return donors will get tickets to the Yacht Club dance on Wednesday night three milk coats, one of the Yacht Club to enter. The club also credit notes for other desirable merchandise among the prizes.

While linens are preferred, but in view of the great need, committees of the have decided that good used articles will be acceptable. The campaign will continue for one week before that time decide what you can spare to cheer a needy Russian family.

THE MIXING BOWL

By ANNE ALLAN

Hydro Home Economist

Hello Homemakers! Strawberries are the star of the berry family. They're delicious, appealing and should be treated wisely. Use strawberries as soon as possible after gathering or purchasing, and don't wash or hull them until just before using. It is wise to spread the berries on a platter and keep in the electric refrigerator.

No need to mention the delight of whole, unhulled berries served with sugar and cream. Fresh berries flatters the flavour of the fruit. The first is made by beating sufficient milk into cream cheese to make a sauce just thin enough to pour; for the second, beat cream cheese and cheese flavoured with orange juice with a rotary or electric beater until smooth, adding enough top milk to make it a "pour" sauce.

Crown ups, gets as excited as children over strawberry ice cream. If it's homemade you have all the fun. We're including two good frozen desserts in the column.

Now when it comes to strawberry shortcake, don't be hidebound by tradition! We admit that there probably is nothing to equal the old-fashioned version—warm, light-as-a-feather biscuits, split and heaped with crushed, sweetened berries—but there are other delicious cake makes a pleasant change. And makes of the simple cake pie shell. Crush remaining berries and heat to a seething point; strain through cheesecloth; add water to make two cups liquid. Blend two-thirds cup sugar with one tablespoon cornstarch; add liquid and cook in double boiler until thickened and clear. Add one tablespoon lemon juice, one teaspoon butter and a few drops of red colouring; cool, then pour over successive days.

BEAUTY By Helen Jameson

Restful Sleep Means More Than Cosmetics.

In normal times, when the world is at peace, going places is the object of many people's existence and has had considerable business to attend to—shopping, social affairs and travel, motoring, dancing, endless telephone conversations. Now the motoring is out, but the cars are tolerating war jobs that the young people are doing. They've got their shoulders to the wheel, too.

Sleep takes a terrific beating over the holidays. Youth can't bother to listen. Tell them that sleep is the beauty aid par excellence, and their bite is deep and pungent.

Don't fancy, little one, that you are made of wire and fiddle strings. You're human and you must treat it as this chase for beauty, the first goal is health. Then and only you are entitled to play with your make-up kit to your heart's content.

A healthy girl will, after nine hours' sleep, awaken with eyes sparkling, cheeks flushed, skin clear of color, ready to leap with love and interest into the day's job, no matter what it may be.

If she feels depressed, tired, out of kilter with herself and the universe, she is not refreshed. The wise step then is to pile into bed and catch up on that sleep. Give your system another more or less sleepless night and you're sunk. And your glorious hair to remain glossy and abundant. Then mind teacher and take good care of yourself.

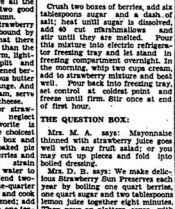
Vitamins in dried foods

For practical purposes, the housewife who purchases properly rated dried vegetables should not expect them to furnish the amount of vitamin C that is furnished by fresh or canned vegetables. Fresh fruits and fresh vegetables are the best sources of this important vitamin.



Many foods, when dried, can be reduced to one-fifth of their weight in volume when fresh. Hence the drying process is useful in saving shipping and storage space, as well as container materials. All of these things become especially important in war-time.

However, in drying foods, particularly vegetables, it is necessary to remember the need for keeping them in such a state that when water is added to them, they will be retained at least a reasonable degree of their original appearance, taste and wholesomeness. Many of the dried soups are palatable, but many of the dried vegetables are just the opposite. The reason for this is with regard to drying or dehydration is whether or not the food value, particularly the vitamin content, is retained. Vegetables are relied on to the least extent for vitamins A and C in the diet. If the vegetables are cooked at a low temperature, even though it takes a longer time to dry, the vitamin C seems to be retained. If the vegetables are blanched before they are dried, the vitamin C content becomes lower. Potatoes and cauliflower are usually blanched before they are dried but carrots, green beans and cabbage are dried without this blanching. Vegetables which are usually blanched before drying may lose even more vitamin C when they are stored. In general, the loss of vitamin C on drying has been found to amount to from 50 to 75 per cent. Most of the original content, and as yet does not seem to be known, is the preserving the vitamin C in the drying process.

Vegetables are relied on particularly for their iron and vitamin A. This vitamin is in the form of carotene which is changed into vitamin A in the body. Fortunately, vitamin A is not lost in any-where near as great a degree during the drying process as is vitamin C, and the little is lost during the period of storage. Fresh carrots secured in winter time will be very rich sources of carotene. It was noted that very little loss of carotene occured when carrots are dried, and there was a loss of only about one-fifth when they were kept content during storage for one year at a temperature of 100 degrees temperature. On the other hand, it is reported that little loss of the carotene in carrots is lost during dehydration.

The need for utilizing dried foods is quite great at the present time, and when placed on the table, persons should make sure that they get the vitamins they require, from other sources.

AILEEN WRIGHT'S THREE-RUN BLOW HELPS RELIANCE

Team in First Place and Yet to be Defeated in the Loop

SARGENTS BEATEN 11-6

Aileen Wright's three-run circuit blow in the fifth frame kept Bill Shiaino's Reliance girls in the undefeated bracket in the Belleville Ladies Softball League, when the 1943 champions downed Bell Sargents 11 to 6 at the Armouries last Monday evening. It was the first defeat suffered by Bill Knott's Sargent lassies.

Five runs on four hits and a brace of singles gave the Reliance nine a first inning start they never blew, although Sargents moved to within one of knotting the count in the bottom half of the fourth. However, Millie Foster, on the Reliance mound, settled away to pitch shut out ball for the remaining three frames when she was afforded some sensational fielding.

Home runs featured the pastime as each side blasted a brace of round-trippers. Mabel Musgrave and Wilma Reddick hit circuit blows for the Sargents while Aileen Wright and Helen Garrow clubbed four-masters for Reliance. Green, Sargents' third sacker, had a perfect night at bat with three for three. Helen Garrow also left a double in pace the winners, who were out-hit by the Sargents on the night's play. June Matthews, a 15-year-old star, started on the hilltop for Sargents, but gave over to Bessie Doolittle, who took over in the fifth. When Wilma Reddick blasted her circuit blow in the third it moved Sargents within two runs of tying and they added another on Mae Musgrave's round-tripper in the fourth. Came Aileen Wright's four-master for three runs in the fifth to clinch the piece. An important fixture sees SWACO and Combines battle to tie Reliance for the league leadership on Wednesday night.

The line-ups—Belleville Sargent: Marinoff ss, Benn lf, Reddick rf, Langmore c, Matthews p and 2b, Clarke 1b, Green 3b, Bunnett 2b, Musgrave cf and Doolittle p. Reliance: Elliott 2b, Stalrs and Colden ss, Mallard c, Garrow ss, Mclntee cf, Graham 1b, Wright lf, Kokesh and Baker rf, Foster p.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By SYD THOMAS

Toronto, June 20 — (CP)—A very intricate problem in sport pastime was unearthed in all innocence by Ken (Vancouver Daily Province) McConnell when he referred to the Winnipeg Blue Bombers as a "rugby football" team. That really annoyed followers of the original English rugby, or rugger.

They contend the Bombers were not playing rugby, but just plain football — and not the game known as association football or soccer either. At this point things began to get a little confused, but Ken stuck to his guns, and triumphantly pulled his ace from his sleeve.

He hastened to point out that the body controlling soccer dodge in Canada is known as the Dominion Football Association, while the solons of the Canadian football world that numbers Bombers among its ilk are graced by the name, Canadian Rugby Union.

There isn't much answer to that one, except to urge feebly that the name of the Union be changed. Apparently it was done in the ole days when the boys actually played rugger, and before the Mirth of the distinctive new game. Anyway, the change thing caused a nice argument.

Ki-Y Softball

The "Rat-battery" moved to within a game of winning the Bantam series of the Belleville Ki-Y softball league Tuesday evening by defeating the Blue Devils 9 to 7 at Queen Elizabeth School grounds.

Although the Blue Devils scored lustily and took a seven run lead into the bottom half of the fourth stanza, the Ratsmen rallied for six runs in this inning to score four runs and add five more in the next inning, and added insult to injury by holding the Devils scoreless for the remainder of the game. Strachan pitched for the winners while Soule was on the hillock for the losers. Batcher, Soule and Davis each scored two runs for the winners while Taylor and Strachan crossed the plate twice for the losers.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers Frank Zak, Formerly of Leafs, Hitting .452 for the Pirates

By The Canadian Press

With Frank Zak, former Toronto shortstop, the only player hitting better than .300, the Pittsburgh Pirates are causing wonderment in baseball circles lately over their ability to cling to second place in the standing of the National League in which a dozen has been reached in the matter of keeping close to the first-place Cardinals with the opening tonight of a crucial 21-game stretch on the home diamond during which the Pirates will cross bats with other first-division contenders including St. Louis, Cincinnati and New York. Zak's batting average is .452 for his first 20 games.

Promoter Jack Kearns of Chicago last night announced the matching of Willie Pep, New York's featherweight champion, and Willie Joyce of Gary, Ind., holder of the California lightweight title, for a 10-round bout July 7 at White Sox park.

After a 10-day illness at Chicago, manager Jimmy Dykes of the Chicago White Sox rejoined the team at St. Louis yesterday. He expected to be with the squad than listen to the play-by-play description of their defeats over the radio.

POLO GROUNDERS IN VIRTUAL TIE FOR SECOND PLACE

Giants Wallop Dodgers for Seventh Time in Eleven Tries

ONLY GAME PLAYED

By TED MEIER
Associated Press Sport Writer

Mel Ott's New York Giants, whose earlier fire and seven-game winning streak sizzled the baseball experts, still are the surprise of the National League.

The Polo Grounders climbed into a virtual tie for second place with Pittsburgh Pirates by walloping Brooklyn 10-2 last night in the day's only major league game.

The Giants now have won 20 and lost 28 games for .345 percentage. Pittsburgh officially is credited with 28 wins against 22 losses for .560. Counting another Pirate defeat, from the unfinished game of May 21 with the Phils, reduces the Pittsburgh edge to a mere four percentage points. The two clubs are not called after eight innings with the Phils ahead, 8-4.

A crowd of 25,140 paid at Ebbets Field to see the Giants wallop the Brook for the seventh time in 11 tries. Hal Gregg, starting Brooklyn pitcher, was the victim of May's big second inning that made things look so rosy for Pittsburgh's first right-hander.

Only one of the six runs was earned. Bobby Ragan and Dixie Walker contributing two costly errors.

A man who had been called for jury service asked to be excused.

Judge—On what grounds?

Man—We're busy at the office, sir, and I ought to be there.

Judge—So you are one of those men who think they are indispensable; you think that the firm cannot do without you. Is that it?

Man—No, sir. Far from that, I know very well they can, but I don't want them to find out.

Judge—Excused.

Regrettable News.

It was with profound regret this corner learned Clayton Jackson, of Deseronto, had been one of Canada's most recent casualties overseas. Cpl. Jackson, a son of Mrs. and Mrs. "Mike" Jackson teamed with his brother, Will "The" to form a great scoring combination to help bring Belleville's first and only International O. H. A. championship to this city in 1937. As he played hockey, Clayton was a keen sport and thorough soldier and is the second Belleville O. H. A. player to make the supreme sacrifice for freedom. Jim Pepper was the first.

Glancing back over the 1937 champion Belleville hockey line-up we find Secretary Jim Thomas now in Italy, while Ken Murphy, Lum Carson and Harry Morgan are also in the service. Incidentally Bill Thomas is now in the same unit and time Clayton went into the Canadian army, but was rejected. A youngster lives in the Royal Canadian Navy.

Been Overseas.

When Jack Sharkey, former heavyweight boxing champion, enters the ring for Hume Arena as referee for the Katan-Garibaldi grudge wrestling match, the patrons should welcome Sharkey with a big hand, for he has been over seas and has been in Italy along with other Yankee sports notables, such as Letty Gross, Gene Sarazen and others entertaining the American troops. Sharkey was selected as referee for boxing bouts and also arranged the one exhibition bout with the camp champ, to prove he can still slug it out with the best of them.

Incidentally there is more to Jack Sharkey-Garibaldi bout than that meets the eye. Garibaldi chased world champion Bill Longson all of the way from Salt Lake City to Toronto, via St. Louis and Chicago, seeking a title bout with Longson. Garibaldi never got a shot at Jimmy Watson, but knows full well he has to dispose of top-ranking Canadian such as Katan before he can gain recognition from "The White." Garibaldi says he will put Belleville on the wrestling mat as the place where it happened to the end of Katan's reign. Then that Dunlop-Katan return bout at Chicago, or Chuck Hunter, 145, Cleveland, outpointed Bill Parsons, 146 1-2, Dunedin, Fla., in a ten-round bout which knocked out Pefugio Ramirez, 145, Mexico City, 1.

Ki-Y Softball

Bill Baindi's Reliance gals chalked up their third straight win in the Ladies Softball loop beating Sargents 11 to 6 last night, while tomorrow night Tommy Colden's SWACOs and Jim Stratton's Combines hook up in a similar situation with the winner going clear with Reliance . . . Five runs left of five runs in the initial frame and Aileen Wright's three-run-producing circuit blow in the fifth were enough to give Reliance the edge . . . Incidentally some tall fielding was shown by Miss Wright, Elsie Baker and Clancy Elliott for Reliance and Miss Benn in left, Wilma Reddick in right and Mursery Green's youngest daughter at third for Sargents also combine up with sterling defensive plays . . . Two muddied diamonds were staged at No. 6 Regar Depot last night, when the Universal gals downed the No. 6 W.D.'s 3 to 1 following which the Brighton Academy "Marines" and the Repair Depot airmen played a two-all exhibition tilt game . . . The No. 6 squad boasted of five former senior basketball players and Intermediate League in Toronto, but that did not flim on Bill Anderson and Jim Hunter, who shared the Marines' mound chore . . . Exhibition games with Air Force teams will be played on off nights at the Fair Grounds.

Remember When.

Joe Louis successfully defended his heavyweight boxing championship four years ago tonight by knocking out Arturo Godoy, Chilean challenger, at New York. The end came in the eighth round of a scheduled 15-round bout and it was Louis' first defense and defense of the title he won from Braddock in 1937.

Completes Card.

Sergt. Johnnie Planoul phoned today to say they had completed a card for the mid-summer boxing show at the Trenton Air Station with the signing of Joe Wertzer, of Trenton, to headline the show in the recent Newsboys' Boxing night. Wertzer meets Jerry Blanchard in a preliminary before the Army-Air Force heavyweight title bout between Jerry McPeake of the R. C. A. F. and colored Vern Esco, Canadian champion. A full card from novice bouts to professionals, including the appearance of the Barber brothers of London, 11 and 9 years of age respectively, is the morsel for boxing lovers.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 480

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

A bang startles you. In fact, any unexpected act makes you sit up and take notice. And so it is with a bid that is higher than usual. Like an opening bid of two in a suit. The customary opening bid is a bid of one. So, an opening bid of more than one jerks you into special attention. An opening bid of two in a suit is intended to do just that.

An opening bid of two in a suit shows tricks enough to make a game. Since partner has not yet been heard from, it promises enough tricks for game in that hand alone.

How many tricks are enough for a game? In spades or hearts, ten. In diamonds or clubs 11. Therefore, the theory is that ten or 11 tricks are shown by an opening bid of two in a suit.

However, it is seldom that a partner has not even one trick. Even if he has no high card, he may have a two card suit. Which would mean one trick for the short card.

Consequently, a bridge player has a right to gamble that an unheard from partner has at least one trick. So, the rule is that an opening bid of two in a suit shows nine or ten tricks.

How can you tell when you have nine or ten tricks in your own hand? By counting them. How? By counting one trick for each high card and one trick for each short card. That's all.

Try that out with this hand of yours:

♠A K 9 8 6 2
♥A K Q 4
♦A Q
♣7

You have seven high cards; three aces, two kings, two queens. You have two short cards in clubs and one short card in diamonds. You have a total of ten.

Your opening bid with that hand is two spades. That will jar your partner into realizing that he has tricks enough for a game.

Hope that it does not score that way.

"Guadalcanal Diary"

Heralded by critics from coast to coast as the most thrilling of human picture to come blazing out of the smoke of victory, Richard Tregaskis' "Guadalcanal Diary," filmed by 20th Century-Fox, now playing at the Capitol theatre.

Featured players in a great cast are Preston Foster, Lloyd Nolan, William Bendix, Richard Conte and Anthony Quinn. "Guadalcanal Diary" was directed by Lewis Seiler, and produced by Bryan Foy, from a screen play by Lamar Trotti.

"Nearly Eighteen"
(Drama With Music)

An unusually attractive trio of film players, in the persons of Gale Storm, Bill Henry and Rick Vallin are featured in "Nearly Eighteen," Monogram's romantic musical drama which is now at the Capitol Theatre as the added bill. Other members of the cast are Leon Ahearn, Ralph Hodges, Jerry Rush, Mildred Harris, Donald Kerr, Charles Jordan, George O'Hanlon and Bebe Fox, and the picture was directed by Arthur Dreifuss under the production supervision of Lindsley Parsons. Gale Storm sings four songs, and the original story by Margaret Sakovitch was adapted for the screen by George Sayre.

"Zero Hour"

The morale-building service of the National Film Board is admirably exemplified in the monthly edition of the "Canada Carries On" series which opened last night. It tells the background of the Sicilian invasion. With the power of the screen, it depicts what must be taking place on the beaches of France, something that everyone is anxious to learn. It analyzes the technical and tactical problems that had to be solved before this historic operation was launched and it should also be helpful in securing the individual co-operation of every man in the production ranks. The film was made in co-operation with the army film units of the United Nations and held ready for release to all Canadian theatres following the opening of the invasion.

The Canadian Universal News completes the big program.

AT THE BELLE

"The Desert Song"

Dennis Morgan is pressed to report that his current film romance reaches a completely unrestrained culmination. "I really get the girl this time," he said, with more than a shade of manly pride.

As one of the handiest leading men in Hollywood, Morgan, it seems, has been losing entirely too many to leading ladies, either to the attractions or other men or to the disastrous machinations of that ubiquitous fate.

Things are different, though, in "The Desert Song," which stars Dennis Morgan and Irene Manning, the beautiful blonde singing actress. He claims Mike Manning's not the reason being the husband of Miss Ann Sheridan. Well, Morgan never got Miss Sheridan away from Cochran, either, but not quite. Then again, in "The Hard Way," Morgan had to lose that Carson fellow again, and that Carson fellow married Joan Leslie, whom Morgan loved. It was a long and painful grind before she got around to our Danny.

In "The Desert Song," however, it's a set-up. "I make sure that Irene doesn't get away from me," Dennis explained. "I kidnap her."

There's still another advantage which Morgan believes he has in "The Desert Song" that he didn't have in the picture.

He sings in "The Desert Song" now on the Belle Theatre screen with such Romberg melodies as "One Alone" and "Long Live the Night" as weapons of love. Morgan charms are irresistible. Ask Irene Manning.

AT THE McCARTHY

Out of the Fog

Dynamic drama is the basic ingredient of the Monogram hit, now current offering Out of the Fog, which opened at that theatre today.

The Warner Bros. picture stars Ida Lupino and John Garfield whose teamwork as the fiery outlaws of the Sea Wolf" won them wide praise from critics and public. Also featured are Thomas Mitchell, Eddie Albert, George Tobias and Aline MacMahon.

The picture portrays the daughter of a gentle old tailor (Thomas Mitchell) whose eyes cut a barn living in the tiny fog-bound community of Shoreham Bay. Passionately desiring more from life than a life as a switchboard operator and a boy friend (Eddie Albert) who was offering nothing in the way of entertainment but a cheap fish dinner and a walk along the boardwalk, she is delighted at the advent of a new man in her life.

This young man, played by Garfield, is a go-getter, and she sees in him her chance for a new life. What she don't know about him, however, is that he is extorting money from her father and his friend. The two old men have a little rowboat in which they go fishing in the bay and Garfield has terrorized them into paying him five dollars a week for "protection" on their boat. Her father warns her against her newfound romance, and even offers to use his very meagre savings to send her away on a cruise to Cuba.

She tells Garfield of her father's offer. The social parasite in him is immediately aroused. Promising to take her to Cuba himself, he puts the finger on the two old men for the money they have saved. In desperation these two gentle old people decide to kill him. They lure him into their boat one night, their plans all carefully laid. At the last minute, however, they find themselves incapable of the deed. Garfield, suspecting their motive suddenly draws his gun, but in doing so stumbles and falls into the bay. In the ensuing brush with the law when the drowned body is found, the two old men emerge triumphant the girl learns that her steady plodding boy friend is her real love. Second feature attractions at the McCarthy Theatre is Nothing but the Truth, starring Bob Hope and Paulette Goddard.

Armed Forces to Benefit From New Cigarette Supply System

A new system has been developed for the sending of cigarettes from Canada to members of the Armed Forces in Italy, (later in the United Kingdom) which will bring into operation the equivalent of air mail service, according to a joint statement from the Postmaster General, The Minister of National Defence and the Minister of National Defence (for Air). Next to letters cigarettes are highly regarded as a direct contribution to the well-being and happiness of the Armed Forces.

Simply described, the new system which will go into effect as far as men in the Mediterranean theatre are concerned, on June 19th, involves the sending by Air Mail of addressed labels, representing cigarettes ordered at 44 present in Canada, to a Mediterranean Depot, where they will be drawn against a huge contingent reserve of cigarettes already built up by bulk shipments.

Realizing the value of "smokes" to the men, the three Departments of some time past have been working out details of this vastly improved plan to enable the Army and Air Force overseas to obtain faster and safer delivery of their cigarettes. The preliminary task has already been carried out and the building up of a necessary reserve of cigarettes in the Mediterranean theatres. Under the new arrangement, the possibilities of loss at sea or enemy action are eliminated, and delivery time of orders will be greatly speeded up.

From the standpoint of the mailing public, there is no change in procedure. Orders will be placed in the same manner as at present, either with the tobacconist, or direct with the Company. When the Company receives the order, a label covering each 200 cigarettes ordered will be prepared, complete with postage and particulars. Then the Post Office takes over. The labels are recorded and sent overseas by air transport. Upon arrival at the Tobacco Depot, the labels are attached by members of the Postal Corps to parcels of the particular brand of cigarettes ordered, and then despatched to the addressee.

The scheme will operate first to supply cigarettes to the Army of Forces now engaged in fighting in the Italian area. Subsequently a similar plan will be arranged for the United Kingdom, when the necessary stocks have been built up.

Orders for delivery under the new plan will be accepted by Canteen Coporals and Winchesters of the Imperial Tobacco Company; British Consols and Exports of W. C. MacDonald Inc.; and Buckingham and Wings of Tuckett Limited.

Persons wishing to order cigarettes from tobacco companies other than those mentioned above may continue to do so but in these cases the individual parcels will continue to be handled as at present.

ROCHESTER WINGS IN FIRST PLACE IN INT. LEAGUE

Eddie Malone Singles in 15th Frame to Defeat Baltimore 5-4

TORONTO SPLITS

By the Associated Press

Eddie Malone, Rochester catcher, batted in Red Wendt with the run that gave the Wings their lead in the International Baseball League race last night.

Coming up in the 15th inning with the bases loaded and one out, Malone singled to beat Baltimore 5-4, not only ending the long contest, but also knocking the Orioles loose from the top rung.

The Wings, who were third before the game started, took the reins from behind twice. Baltimore held a 2-1 edge until the seventh and went ahead again in the top of the 13th. Sturdy's scratch hit, Held's sad, a sacrifice and a walk set the stage for Malone's winning single.

Toronto and Newark split a doubleheader Newark took the opener, 11-10, on Kuk's single in the 10th inning. Toronto then pitched Toronto to a 5-1 victory in the afterpiece.

Pheasants on Increase in South Marysburgh Twp. Owing to Mild Winter

COOTS IN NETS

Point Traverse, June 20 — Commercial fishermen operating from this harbor, report catches of lake whitefish as being good at the present time, but lifts of salmon trout as very light. Fishermen anticipate a good run of trout next month. Catches of herring and pike and chasses are only fair, fishermen stated.

Numbers of Ducks

Great numbers of non-edible ducks, known as coots, were found by commercial fishermen when they retrieved their nets from South Bay this week. It is believed by the fishermen these ducks known as divers, became entangled in their fishing gear when seeking feed off the bottom of the lake. Just to what depth these ducks can dive, is a very debatable question. Local fishermen have retrieved their nets from a depth of 125 feet of water and found these ducks enmeshed in the gear. One fisherman reports finding ducks at a 200 foot depth.

Pheasants Increase

Pheasants are on the increase in the Township of South Marysburgh is the opinion of hunters and sportsmen alike. The mild winter experienced is said not to have affected the birds as of previous severe winters. Farmers in the Black Creek vicinity report many more birds in the bushland as compared to a year ago.

"CURIOSITY KILLED A CAT" by ANNE ROWE

CHAPTER 21

"But I am not a Burton widow, I have no right at all to the name," I fairly yelled at her. "And we were not at the point of reconciliation, but a divorce I'm not going into mourning. There won't be any state funeral."

It made her break off in mid-sentence.

"What did you say?" she asked, with the glare of offended royalty. "Repeat it please, I can't have heard right." You can't be denying your husband, the last Burton, a decent funeral."

"I'm not denying him anything. He'll have a decent funeral all right," I protested hotly. "Only—oh—ask Mr. Forrestall about it, or Inspector Pettengill."

"I shall. I shall ask them a lot of questions." Mrs Libby rose majestically and swept toward the hall. "See that she puts on mourning and behaves herself like a Christian. And call Dr. Masterman. She's suffering from shock," she commanded Aunt Millie over her shoulder.

Then she rapped sharply at the drawing-room and went in, without waiting for an answer

"No wonder Bruce stayed in hiding," Aunt Millie said weakly, sinking into a chair.

The tyrant of Cliffport was still closeted with the Inspector when Nettie ushered in the Forrestall ladies, escorted by Amy's youthful fiance.

Both were in black—Alice trying to look properly dolorous and Amy sulking as usual—and young Bobby Jordon was sweating with embarrassment. There simply isn't another way of describing his condition.

Remembering the Inspector's warning, I wa on my guard and weighed my words carefully. But there really wasn't anything to weigh. Alice didn't ask questions. She just chattered, punctuating herself with sighs instead of titters, in deference to the occasion.

It was all so terrible! She simply couldn't imagine Bruce dead, much less murdered! And to think he'd been in town, and married to me, and Conley had known it and not told her and Amy! And poor Gala! She'd tried to talk to her on the phone and the maid had said she was resting—not feeling so good—and no wonder, with her finding Bruce's body and losing her whole inheritance, but she was so glad for me And would I open the Burton house, and would I—would I—

The waterfall splashed on and on, numbing in its monotany.

Amy was suffering through it with tightly compressed lips, plainly hating her mother's inanity. Bobby Jordon was dabbing at his perspiring forehead. Aunt Millie and I were slowly getting wall-eyed with exhaustion—

At last the drawing-room door opened and Mrs. Libby emerged, trailed by Inspector Pettengill escorting her to her car.

She didn't deign to glance in our direction as she passed But her voice boomed so loudly "I shall not allow it She must behave according to custom. She must wear mourning!" that she created a diversion just the same.

Then distance blunted her roars—the outer door thudded—

Soon the Inspector came into the room, beaming his friendliest and sitting down unasked, with a hearty: "Well, well! Nothing like having your friends gather round you in days of stress, eh, Miss Kay?"

Alice answered for me—the slightest spark would set her off again!—but now her prattle was subtly directed by the astute police officer.

Of course! What else were friends there for? And: Yes, wasn't it too bad for poor Conley? So upsetting these murders. Especially Bruce's! The news had roused the poor man from a sound sleep. Oh, naturally, her also! She was a light sleeper. She always woke up when the phone rang in her husband's room, next door to hers—

"You sure your husband was home all night?" Inspector Pettengill cut into her chatter.

She failed to grasp the significance of the question. "Why, of course! Where else should he have been?" she asked wide-eyed.

He let it go at that—probably because he had found out what he wanted to know: that Forrestall could have been gone from the house without his wife's knowledge—and turned to Bobby Jordon without further preamble.

"Let's hear your alibi for the murder night," he invited pleasantly.

"Alibi?" Young Jordon gaped at him "Why—why—I was in bed and asleep.

"Anyone know you were?"

"I—I guess so. Mrs. Reilly, my landlady. She saw me come in that night and go out in the morning. She always does."

"But she doesn't know, did you stay in the whole night?" The Inspector smiled at his wriggling victim.

"Why do you ask Bobby such fool questions?" Amy cut in languidly.

"He's one of my suspeccts," the Inspector informed her, as amiably as if he were saying, 'Fine weather we're having."

It heaved Bobby Jordon right out of his chair.

"Suspect — me?" he stammered, his eyes popping with alarm. "B—but—I haven't done anything."

"You were in the, Burton house the afternoon Professor Stoddard was killed," the Inspector reminded him.

Bobby's eyes implored Amy for help. "Sure. Sure I was. But I was with her.

"And he left before me," Amy added sweetly.

"Thatso? Well, then that makes you a suspect too," the Inspector told her jovially. "Only—looks like you ain't strong enough. Was quite some heft to that blow." Then he turned back to the trembling Bobby.

"Come on, Mr. Jordon. Let's you'n me have a little talk, in my —er—office."

The Jordon boy got up from his chair so reluctantly it made the impression he was glued to it.

"Why—why, sure. We're glad to oblige, Amy and me," he stuttered, his eyes pleading with Amy.

"You. Not Miss Amy. Got a rule in the force says 'One at a time'," the Inspector assured him. "You come with me, and the ladies go home. Miss Wentworth, please, will you show Mrs. Forrestall and Miss Amy out?"

It was a nightmarish puppet show. Inspector Pettengill pulled the strings and his dolls danced obediently, Alice with a nervous titter, Amy without a word. The latter had turned deathly white under her makeup I noticed.

Bobby Jordon didn't come out of the Inspector's office for a long time. Dad had come home, and we were going in to lunch, when I saw him scuttling through the hall.

His ears looked very red, I thought—and then forgot him over new, if unimportant developments.

Dad was worried about Gala.

He had talked to her over the phone the night before, and called her again from the shipyard a few hours ago, asking if he might come to see her. And Aggy had told him he could not. Gala was sick abed and wouldn't even speak to him herself.

He didn't like it. Aggy had told him a similar thing at another occasion and it had been a lie. What was the matter? What new trouble was brewing?

"Gala has a bad cold. Inspector Pettengil told me so. If it'll make you feel better, Dad, I'll go upstairs and see how she is the moment we're through with lunch," I promised him.

Not entirely for his sake either. For one thing I had a bad conscience about neglecting Gala—I hadn't seen her at all since our return from the camp—and for another in Gala's apartments I was out of reach. No one would come up there to bother me with annoying and unanswerable questions.

And so I ran up the back stairs—my customary route now that Gala and I were friends—soon after Dad had gone back to his work.

Aggy let me in, all deference and smiles and condolences, and without first announcing me, ushered me into the bedroom, where Gala was sitting up in bed, behind lowered blinds. Actually waiting for me, it appeared.

The room was too dark to see clearly at first. But when my eyes became used to the gloom I noticed she was nursing a humdinger of a cold, brought on, no doubt, by her gruesome vigil on the cold floor of the camp. Her eyes were watery, her lovely nose red and swollen, her throat swathed in bandages. No wonder she hadn't wanted to receive Dad!

"I'm so glad you've come. But—stay at the other end of the room. I don't want you to catch my cold", she greeted me in a somewhat hoarse and muffled voice. "It's a frightful nuisance. The doctor's given me some stuff for it, but so far it hasn't helped".

"Doctor or not, it'll take its own sweet time", I prophesied heartlessly. "May be a blessing in disguise. Believe me, I could have used a cold nicely this morning—"

Then I sat down near the foot of her bed, and told her all that had happened since our departure from the camp. I stressed my resentment about being called by a name to which I had no right and wished to claim none, and touched lightly on the inheritance, the Burton end of which would naturally be diverted to her in accordance with her uncle's will.

She heard me out without comment, her face hidden behind a handkerchief. And when I'd had my say and stopped, she laughed briefly and a bit ironically.

"Stop trying to make it look as though you believe I had a right to Uncle Ellis' money", she advised me quietly. "I haven't, and I know it. Besides, I don't need his fortune. I have enough of my own, even without my work. So please, don't think you have to make me a present of it".

I protested. Told her I knew there was no compulsion about it, but couldn't she see? Couldn't she put herself in my position?

"After all, if you had married Bruce as you'd planned, you would be his widow now".

It turned our talk into a different channel.

"If I had married Bruce", Gala said pensively. And, after a pause:

"Do you know, I can't understand now why I ever wanted to?"

"Nor can I see—why I did", I agreed wryly.

"That's different!" Gala contradicted. "You were an impressionable kid and he was—good looking and charming, and swept you off your feet. There's nothing remarkable in that. But I? It's almost inconceivable. I'd known him from the time Uncle Ellis married his mother. He was three then, and I six. He was the next-door baby I used for a living doll, and later the spoiled brat who threw pebbles and played pranks. And then — his mother died, and he went away. To boarding school — to college — on trips with Uncle Ellis. And I went abroad to study art and fashion design in Paris—"

"And when you both came back, you were two different people", I supplemented.

"Two very different people", she nodded. "He'd become a dashing stranger and I—had acquired glamour in his eyes. Then too, of course,— his father's opposition spurred Bruce on. The pretext for it was my age—the three years too many on the wrong side. But Uncle Ellis would have objected to any girl. He was the most possessive man in the world. It was his house, his money, his wife, his son. Always his. He wanted Bruce completely under his influence, relied on him for companionship on his trips into the unknown, and was scared his marriage would put an end to all that. He'd lose him—"

"He lost him anyway", I said soberly.

Gala nodded. "Yes. It was a terrible blow for him, finding out he'd done exactly the wrong thing. He told me so, the day he went to the hospital for his bad appendix; begged my pardon, and asked me to marry Bruce, if he ever came back. That's why he left me half this house. So that I'd have a place to stay and wait".

"And wait you did, five long years, for a man who'd married another girl right after your dreadful accident", I said scathingly.

"No, I didn't. I stayed because I was a coward", she confessed. "Too self-conscious about my leg to go out among people. Hating the town and its ugly gossip. Hating myself for going on living, as a cripple. Hating Bruce for running away from my trouble. If I waited for him at all, it was to tell him a few unflattering facts—about himself".

"He deserved anything you could tell him. He'd acted inexcusably. Why, he didn't even have the nerve to elope with you openly! You had to get another man to drive you away from town", I said contemptuously.

"Oh, that just happened", Gala explained objectively. "Bruce had just turned twenty-five and was in New York, taking over the full control of his mother's fortune. He'd never realized its extent, and when he discovered he was wealthy, and didn't need Uncle Ellis, he wrote me to come and join him".

"That elopement didn't bring anyone much luck", I thought out loud.

"That's right", Gala assented. "And it wouldn't have brought me luck if it had succeeded. Strange, how quickly Bruce became the bad Burton boy again in my mind, after the accident. Last Thursday, when he told me he still cared and asked me to marry him—it seemed preposterous".

"And now he's dead. Murdered. Who did it, Gala? You know his past, all the people he knew. Do you have an idea?"

She leaned her head against the back of the bed and closed her eyes. "No. I've thought and thought. He hadn't any real friends— Uncle Ellis' fault, mostly—but there was no one who hated him so far as I remember. No one but — myself. I'm the logical suspect, Kay. I had a reason, and the opportunity. I was with him, alone, when you found him".

It sounded painfully convincing.

"Don't talk rubbish", I admonished her, with a sinking feeling. "Whoever heard of such nonsense! Granted you had a reason for hating Bruce, did you also have one for hating Stoddard?"

"I might have been over there Friday, and not Thursday, and seen Bruce kill Stoddard", she said calmly.

"Certainly!" I scoffed angrily. "Certainly! And so you imitated the dead Professor and turned the camp upside down, after shooting Bruce. By the way, what did you do with the gun?"

"I might have walked down to the lake and thrown it in the water. It's quite deep there, and the bottom is swampy. They'd never find it", she said wearily. "Kay—I've been lying here in the dark for eternities, it seems. Working out all the possibilities Inspector Pettengill is sure to think up. And—it looks pretty black for me, don't you think?"

"You're the damnedest fool with the most lurid imagination", I broke out angrily. "How can you think of such horrors! The Inspector does not dream of accusing you. What d'you bet he knows who the murderer is, and is only waiting for the right moment, to catch him?"

"Do you mean, he's waiting for—another murder?" she asked ironically.

The words sent a shiver down my back. And the fact that they affected me to that extent made me furious with myself. "I mean, you're cuckoo! I mean—take one of the pills you didn't take the other night and sleep yourself out of your—your neurasthenic dementia", I raged. "God knows, it's bad enough thinking of the murders that have happened, without you hinting at another to come".

I left shortly after that outburst. Our talk just wouldn't be natural and unrestrained after it, no matter how much each of us tried to make light of what had been said. But I walked upstairs again the moment I arrived downstairs. To phone Dad from the privacy of my room.

And then I sat in front of the instrument, not daring to lift the mouthpiece.

Finally, I dialed the shipyard number. "Don't worry about Gala", I told him matter-of-factly when I had him on the wire. "Aggy's been telling the truth. She's in bed with an awful case of the siffles. She'll see you, all right, the moment she looks human again".

Then I hung up, quickly.

I was still sitting before the telephone, deep in thought, when Nettie came to the door.

"The Inspector's been asking for you two or three times, ma'am", she informed me. "Miss Wentworth too. She says she's stuck with Mr. Avery and is getting lockjaw from yawning, and please for you to come and take him over. Them's her own words, Miss Kay".

In the library I found Aunt Millie and Curtis Avery facing each other mutely before the fireplace, she profoundly bored, he distinctly jittery and with one ear cocked in the direction of the drawing room.

The charming Stella was undergoing one of Inspector Pettengill's smiling third degrees in there. Not of her free will either. She had been summoned officially. I found out after Aunt Millie had vanished with unprecedented alacrity.

"I came along in case she needed me", Avery explained nervously, and then pulled himself together sufficiently to insert a perfunctory speech of condolenec into the recital of his own troubles.

His attitude was a relief—especially as he addressed me as "Miss Wentworth", without the hesitation and smirking I had come to dread — and suited my purposes besides. I was more than willing to have him discuss his wife, in the hope of learning something that might shed light on our murders. Also, her renewed questioning puzzled me.

"Why did the Inspector call her?" I asked curiously.

"Because you recognized her voice—in the Burton house, that evening. It's all I can think of", he said dejectedly.

"I'm sorry", I told him, without much conviction.

"So'm I. I wish you hadn't said it", he shrugged my lame apology aside. "After all, one scream sounds pretty much like another and you couldn't be sure. It's played havoc with Stella's nerves. They were bad before. But now!"

"Again I'm sorry, but— I did recognize her voice. Your wife's screams are different from any others", I insisted.

"Perhaps they are", he agreed unhappily. "Forgive me if I've been rude. But—I'm at my wits' end, Miss Wentworth. Stella is in a state. Nothing I do is right. Nothing the servants do pleases her. The house is an inferno ever since the unfortunate scene here in your garden last Sunday. It's all based on her senseless jealousy of Gala Burton. If—if only Bruce hadn't been killed! If only I could have brought them together, so that he could have explained how it was! And this police questioning!"

He jumped up and walked to the hall door, listening, as Stella's voice rose shrilly in the closed drawing room.
